ESTABLISHED CHURCH (IRELAND) COMMISSION.

REPORT, &c.

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR GRACIOUS MAJESTY,

1. WE, the Commissioners constituted and appointed for inquiring into the revenues and condition of the Established Church in Ireland, under and by virtue of Your Majesty's Royal Commission, bearing date at Westminster the 30th day of October in the thirty-first year of Your Majesty's reign, whereby we are authorized and appointed to inquire and report "as to the several Archbishoprics, Bishoprics, dignities, and benefices, "and also as to the several ecclesiastical corporations aggregate existing in Ireland, and "as to the revenues, property, and emoluments belonging to the same respectively, and "as to the several charges, incumbrances, and other outgoings affecting the same "respectively, and also as to the several united and separate parishes and parochial "districts in Ireland; and in the case of unions distinguishing whether episcopal or per- "manent, and as to the several churches and chapels in Ireland, whether parochial, or "parochial district or proprietary, and the number of members of the Established "Church of England and Ireland inhabiting the parishes or districts attached to such "churches, and also as to the property and emoluments vested in and administered "by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland, the administration of the same by "such Commissioners, and the mode and purposes in and for which such last-mentioned "property has been applied, and also to inquire and report whether alterations or im- "provements should be made in the management, administration, and distribution of "the revenues and property hereinbefore mentioned, or in the state and condition of the "several offices, dignities, corporations, and benefices aforesaid,"—humbly submit to Your Majesty this our Report.

2. In order to obtain accurate information as to the several subjects of inquiry, we early in November issued forms of queries, which will be found in the Appendix to this Report, to the Archbishops and Bishops of the Church in Ireland, as to their revenues and the circumstances of the property belonging to the several Sees; to the Corporations aggregate, as to their revenues and the condition and circumstances of the several capitular bodies; to the Deans, Dignitaries, and other officers of the cathedrals, as to their emoluments and duties; and to the incumbents of the several benefices, as to the number of members of the Established Church, revenues, area, and general circumstances of their parishes or districts. Upon receiving the returns of the persons to whom these forms had been addressed (nearly 2,000 in number) we proceeded to have the contents arranged in the form of a tabular digest, the result of which now appears in the first five Schedules to this Report.

3. Forms of inquiries were also directed to the Board of Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland, with a view to obtain full and accurate returns of the lands and other property which, under the operation of the Statutes known as the Church Temporalities Acts (Ireland), had become vested in them, and the mode and purposes in and for which the revenues thence arising had been and were applied. The result of these inquiries will be found in the sixth and subsequent Schedules of this Report.

4. With respect, however, to the system adopted by this Board in reference to the administration and management of its property, and the general course of its proceedings, we thought it advisable that, in addition to written inquiries, a personal examination and inspection should be made; and accordingly one of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners and other witnesses were examined, and the books of account and other records inspected at the office in Dublin, by some members of our Commission. The report of their proceedings is placed in an Appendix.

5. Having obtained the requisite information, we directed our attention to that portion of the duties imposed upon us by the terms of Your Majesty's Commission, which requires us to report "whether" in our judgment "alterations or improvements should "be made in the management, administration, and distribution of the revenues and "property" belonging either to ecclesiastical persons and corporations, or vested in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. In the discharge of these duties, interpreting the authority conferred upon us as confined to alteration and re-distribution within the limits of the Church establishment, we have felt bound to proceed without reference to the resolutions which have been adopted by the House of Commons with respect to the Church in Ireland after the date of Your Majesty's Commission. It is upon the assumption which the Commission implies, that this branch of the United Church shall continue by law established and endowed, that we have conducted our inquiry into its present state and condition, and that we now submit to Your Majesty our suggestions with a view to the improvement of its internal arrangements, and the administration and management of its property.

6. The Irish branch of the United Church of England and Ireland consists of two Archbishops, ten Bishops, thirty corporations of deans and chapters, twelve minor corporations or quasi-corporate bodies connected with cathedrals, 32 deans, 33 archdeacons, 1,509 beneficed incumbents (including within this term perpetual curates), and more than 500 stipendiary curates. The number of persons returned by the census of 1861 as belonging to its communion, was 693,357.

7. Its annual net revenues amount to about £581,000, of which about £364,000 arise from tithe-rentcharge, about £204,000 from the rents received from lands, and the residue from Government Stock or other sources. Of these revenues a considerable portion, about £113,000 a year, is administered for Church purposes by the central board of Ecclesiastical Commissioners. About £19,000 a year belongs to the capitular bodies, and is applied by them for the maintenance of the cathedral fabrics and services. The residue supplies the endowments of the Bishops, dignitaries, and beneficed clergy.

8. The property of the Church has been derived from various sources before and since the Reformation. We have not considered it to be within our province to enter upon a historical inquiry into these sources; nor if it had been, would the limit of time permit us to complete such an inquiry. But with respect to the property acquired after the Reformation from Royal or Parliamentary grants, and property that since the same period has been the gift of private individuals, we have inserted in the Appendix to this Report, such particulars as appear in the Patent Rolls in Chancery or in the Diocesan Registries.

9. Tithe was formerly paid by the occupiers and cultivators of the soil, either in kind, or according to compositions made between the incumbents and parishioners. By the Act 1 & 2 Vict., c. 109, this system was terminated, and a rentcharge equal to three-fourths of the annual compositions charged on each applotted parcel of land, and subject to variation at septennial periods, was substituted. This rentcharge was made payable by the person entitled to the first estate of inheritance or other perpetual interest, which are defined by the Act to include not only lands held in fee, but also any interest renewable for ever or held for any term of years, of which 100 were unexpired on the 30th October, 1838, or under an ecclesiastical landlord. The effect of this is to transfer the liability from the under-tenants and occupiers to the landlords and proprietors.

10. The net revenues received by the members of the various orders of the Church and by the Corporations aggregate, with the items of the calculations to ascertain them, will be found in Schedules I., II., III., IV., V. Summaries of the statistical information contained in the Schedules are also added.

11. There are in Ireland 1,074 benefices, the net income of which is under £300 a year. About 356 of these are above £200 a year, about 421 of the remainder above £100 a year, and about 297 under £100 a year. Amongst these are many with large Church population, some in important towns, and others so circumstanced that a supplementary provision for suitable Church ministration is much needed.

12. With a view to provide funds for the augmentation of such benefices, we have examined into the existing distribution of property within the Church, and considered how far, consistently with due regard to the various interests concerned, additional provision may be made for these benefices at present inadequately endowed, so as to adapt the parochial system to the exigencies of the Church population.

13. Previous to the Act 3 & 4 Wm. IV., c. 37, there were in Ireland four Archbishoprics and eighteen Bishoprics. By this Act the Sees were consolidated, and the number reduced to two Archbishoprics and ten Bishoprics. There are now twelve united dioceses: (1.) Armagh and Clogher. (2.) Meath. (3.) Down, Connor, and Dromore. (4.) Derry and Raphoe. (5.) Kilmore, Elphin, and Ardagh. (6.) Tuam, Killala, and Achonry. (7.) Dublin and Kildare. (8.) Ossory, Ferns, and Leighlin. (9.) Cashel, Emly, Waterford, and Lismore. (10.) Killaloe, Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacduagh. (11.) Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe. (12.) Cork, Cloyne, and Ross.

14. The area, boundaries, and Church population of these dioceses, will be found in the Appendix. The net annual revenues of the twelve prelates amount to about £58,000.

15. After a full consideration of the circumstances of these several united dioceses, as regards their extent, Church population, number of benefices, position relatively to each other, and to the places of episcopal residence, having regard also to the increased facilities of communication, we are of opinion that a further consolidation of dioceses, and with one exception (Cork) a reduction of the incomes of the Bishops, may take place.

16. The dioceses which we think may be consolidated with others are (1) Meath; (2) The united diocese of Killaloe, Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacduagh; (3) The united diocese of Cashel, Emly, Waterford, and Lismore; (4) The united diocese of Kilmore, Elphin, and Ardagh. The consolidation may be effected as follows:—Meath to be united to Dublin; Killaloe and Kilfenora to Limerick; Clonfert and Kilmacduagh to Tuam; Cashel and Emly to Limerick; Waterford and Lismore to Ossory; Kilmore to Armagh; and Elphin and Ardagh to Tuam. If this arrangement be carried out, we recommend that the diocese of Ardfert and Aghadoe be transferred from the see of Limerick to that of Cork.

17. A majority of the Commissioners are of opinion that one Archbishop of the Irish branch of the Church ought to be sufficient; that the Archbishopric to be retained should be Armagh, and that the Archbishopric of Dublin should be reduced to a Bishopric with precedence over every other Bishopric. The other Commissioners think that this alteration is not required.

18. Taking into account the extent of superintendence, which in consequence of this reduction of the episcopate, must devolve upon the prelates, the various claims upon their bounty, and the social position conceded to the office, and having regard to the scale of judicial incomes in Ireland, we are of opinion that there should be provided for the primatial see of Armagh an income of £6,000 a year; for Dublin, if retained as an Archbishopric, £5,000 a year, and if reduced to a Bishopric, £4,500 a year; and for every other Bishopric an income of £3,000 a year; with an additional allowance of £500 for such of the Bishops as in each year attend Parliament.

19. These incomes and allowances should be free from any tax or deduction for ecclesiastical purposes. No portion of them should arise from lands let on terminable leases for fines; the nature of such property rendering the income derived from it uncertain and the management unsuited to ecclesiastical persons. When the requisite amount can be obtained from the rents of lands granted in perpetuity belonging to the See, sufficient should be allocated as an endowment. In cases where this cannot be effected, the deficiency of income should be paid by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. Subject to the obligation to make these provisions for the Bishoprics, we recommend that all the episcopal lands should be vested in that Board, as part of their general property.

20. It appears to us that as incident to this arrangement of Episcopal income, the present system of charges for building and improving the See houses should be discontinued, and that such of these charges as are incumbrances upon the houses of the Bishoprics that shall be retained, should be paid off by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners out of their funds.

21. The circumstances of the Corporations of Deans and Chapters, and of the dignitaries connected with them, appear to us very clearly to demand a reduction in their number. These Corporations were not interfered with by the Church Temporalities' Acts; and consequently, notwithstanding the reduction of the number of Bishoprics to 12, no less than 30 corporations of Deans and Chapters still continue. Of these, two only have corporate property, viz., Waterford and Kildare; 16 have economy estates, viz., Armagh, Down, Christchurch Dublin, St. Patrick's Dublin, Leighlin, Waterford, Lismore, Limerick, Cork, Cloyne, Ross, Killaloe, and Tuam; 13 have no property whatever, either corporate or economy. In only a few of the cathedrals is choral service celebrated; and some are situated in places where the number of members of the Established Church is small.

22. Very few of the dignitaries of these corporations retain the emoluments which once belonged to their offices. The Church Temporalities' Acts enabled the Lord Lieutenant in Council to suspend cathedral dignities, and to transfer their emoluments to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners; and also in certain cases to disappropriate their lands and tithe-rentcharge from unsuspended dignities in order to vest them in the Commissioners. The result has been, that revenues amounting to about £14,000 a year, once enjoyed by these dignitaries, have become part of the property of the Commissioners, the particulars of which will be found in Schedule IX. These statutes, however, gave power to the authority that suspended, afterwards to restore the office, subject to the severance of the property. The exercise of this power of restoration has led to the revival of deaneries and other dignities without either official income or duty.

23. There appears to us no sufficient reason for maintaining a larger number of cathedral establishments than of Sees, and the aggregate endowments of all are not sufficient to maintain more than this reduced number in a state of efficiency. We accordingly recommend that with the exception of eight, all the existing corporations of Deans and Chapters be dissolved, and the deaneries and other dignities connected with them suppressed.

24. The eight cathedrals which in our opinion should be preserved as such, are those of Armagh, Down, Derry, Tuam, Kilkenny, Limerick, Cork, and St. Patrick's Dublin; being all, except Down, situate in the cities in which the Bishops of the sees which we recommend to be retained, have their residences. With respect to the Cathedral of Down, it should be provided that the arrangements for its continuance shall terminate so soon as a cathedral shall be built in Belfast, in which case the Dean and the members of the Chapter of the present cathedral should succeed to corresponding offices in the new.

25. Connected with ten of the cathedrals there are twelve Minor Corporations or quasi-corporate bodies, of vicars choral and minor canons. The object of these foundations was to make provision for maintaining choral services. The property of three of these bodies has, by Orders in Council pursuant to powers given by the 25th section of the Act 6 & 7 Wm. IV., c. 99, become vested in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, subject to existing life interests, and to the obligation of maintaining as many successors, as the duties of the cathedrals with which they were connected, require. The property of the other nine amounts to about £9,000 a-year; the full particulars of which will be found in Schedule III. We recommend that all these Minor Corporations or quasi-corporate bodies be dissolved; and that in each of the cathedrals which shall be retained, there be substituted, two clerical vicars choral with freehold offices, and a choir of lay choristers, appointed and removable at pleasure by the Dean and Chapter.

26. With respect to the property at present belonging to the Cathedral Corporations, whether Deans and Chapters, or vicars choral, or minor canons, and whether such property be corporate or economy, we recommend that all such, and also all existing endowments, whether vested in such bodies or not, which are applicable to maintain cathedral fabrics or services, and also all separate revenues of members of the Chapters not having a special application by bequest or donation, other than those of the Deans of the Cathedrals which shall be retained, be transferred to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and form in their hands a common fund to be termed the Cathedral estate, the income of which shall be primarily applied to defray the expense of repairing the buildings, and supporting proper establishments of vicars choral and choristers in the cathedrals.

27. Some alterations in the existing provisions for the maintenance of the eight deaneries which are to be continued, require to be made. The income of the Dean of St. Patrick's, Dublin, should, we think, be fixed at £1,200 a year; that of the other Deans equalized to £1,000 a year: such incomes to be of that amount exclusive of every ecclesiastical tax or charge. Every Dean should be obliged to reside at his cathedral, and daily choral service should be provided. In no instance should the income of a Dean be derived from the revenues of any parish other than that in which the cathedral is situate. In the particular cases of Armagh and Tuam, the rectories of Armagh and Tuam should be respectively united to the deaneries, and so long as the cathedral is continued at Downpatrick, the Dean should continue to be rector of the parish.

28. All Appropriations vested in the deaneries and other dignities should be severed, and, according as the circumstances of the Church population may require, should be either added to the vicarages or curacies of the appropriated parishes, or transferred to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, subject to the obligation of providing for the spiritual care of the parishes.

29. Whatever deficiency, after these arrangements, there may be in the revenues of any of the eight Deans, below the amount which we have suggested for their official incomes, should be supplied from the funds of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

30. In Dublin the cathedral of Christchurch would, according to the suggestions which we have made, cease to be a cathedral. The building may in our opinion be usefully employed as a parish church. In order to effect this arrangement, power should be given to the Board of Ecclesiastical Commissioners to examine into the circumstances of such of the neighbouring parish churches as are in Royal or Ecclesiastical patronage; and power should also be given to the Lord Lieutenant in Council, on the recommendation of this Board, to unite, divide, or otherwise deal with these parishes and their churches as they may think fit, so as to annex a suitable parish or district to Christchurch, and otherwise re-adjust the parochial arrangements as may seem advantageous.

31. The present number of Archdeacons (33) appears to us in excess of what is required. If the diocese of Kilmore be added to the dioceses of Armagh and Clogher, there may properly be an Archdeacon for each of these dioceses; but in all other united dioceses proposed to be formed, two Archdeacons for each, would seem to be sufficient.

32. The power to determine the titles of these Archdeacons, and the territorial limits within which they are to act, may properly be intrusted to the Lord Lieutenant in Council upon the recommendation of the Bishop of the diocese and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. Each Archdeacon should, in our opinion, receive an income of £100 a year from the funds of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners to meet the expenses incident to his official duties. Any revenues at present attached to their offices, not belonging to parishes in which they have cure of souls, should be transferred to the Commissioners. At present many of the Archdeaconries have attached to them particular parishes, so that no other is tenable with the office. This has been found productive of inconvenience, especially as limiting the range of selection in making the appointment. It appears to us advisable, that for the future the preferment shall be unconnected with any particular benefice; and we deem it to be well worthy of consideration whether the appointment of the Archdeacons should not be dependent on the Episcopal incumbency of the See, the new Bishop to re-appoint the Archdeacon whom he finds in office, or to appoint another, as he may think fit.

33. There is in Ireland one exempt jurisdiction, that of Newry and Mourne, which owes its origin to a monastery, established at a very ancient date at Newry, and of which the abbot was what is termed a mitred abbot, entitled to a seat in Parliament. The jurisdiction extends over the parishes of Newry and Kilkeel, with the chapelries of Kilcoo, Killegar, and Tamlaght, an area of about 100,000 acres, with a Church population of about 7,000. The jurisdiction is exercised by the Earl of Kilmorey or his trustees, through a vicar-general; from whom the appeal lies direct to the Queen in Chancery and not to any metropolitan jurisdiction. An exempt jurisdiction of this character within the Church is an anomaly not attended by any compensating advantage. It places both laity and clergy outside episcopal superintendence. We do not find that any pecuniary benefit (except some fees for marriage licences received by the Vicar-General) arises from the maintenance of this jurisdiction. We recommend that the parish of Newry should be placed under the episcopal jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Armagh, as it is on one side co-terminous with his diocese, and the other parishes for a similar reason under that of the Bishop of Down; the present Vicar-General to be compensated for any loss of fees out of the revenues of the Registries of Armagh and Down.

34. One chantry chaplaincy exists, that of St. Mary, in the parish of St. Nicholas-within-the-Walls, Dublin. It was founded, and endowed with lands, in the reign of Edward IV., by the Earl of Worcester and some citizens of Dublin, pursuant to Royal licence. The chaplain has no duties whatever to perform; and we recommend that the lands shall be vested in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, for the same purposes as their other estates.

35. The original parochial divisions in Ireland were very numerous. For ecclesiastical purposes they have been much modified in form and reduced in number. But for the purposes of geographical distinction, they still exist. These original divisions have been termed by the Census Commissioners civil parishes; their number, according to the Ordnance Survey, is 2,428. The number of benefices at present existing (including in that term perpetual curacies), and confining it to cases where the benefice is held by an actual incumbent, is 1,518, of which all except 27 chapelries and 7 sinecure rectories, have attached to them parishes or districts. There are many of these ecclesiastical parishes and districts, each of which comprises several civil parishes, or portions of several civil parishes, grouped together. The distinction between the ecclesiastical parish or district, and the civil parish, is often overlooked, and thus the civil parish has erroneously been supposed always to represent a benefice. The distinction is, however, important to be kept in mind, as the results of the religious Census of 1861 have, in the published returns of the Commissioners, been stated according to the civil parishes. By the assistance of the Registrar-General, who was one of the Census Commissioners, we have been able to give the same results arranged and classified according to the ecclesiastical parishes and districts.

36. Of the ecclesiastical parishes a large proportion retain their original form and boundaries. These, having been fixed at a remote period, under circumstances that have been modified or that have ceased to exist, and with a view to considerations no longer applicable, are in many instances unsuitable to the convenience of the Church population. The parochial and pastoral districts, which have been formed within a recent period, are not in general inconvenient.

37. The distribution of the revenues of the Church, is of course to a great degree dependent upon the ecclesiastical territorial divisions, and, where these are unsuitable, the distribution also fails to meet the present requirements. The system of Appropriations, which withdrew from many parishes the principal part of the emoluments and left no adequate provision for the spiritual duties, has also contributed to the same result.

38. There can be little doubt that a re-adjustment of parochial arrangements and endowments, based upon a consideration of the circumstances proper to be taken into account, such as area, Church population, and Church accommodation, is most desirable.

39. Some statutable powers enabling improvements of this character to be made, at present exist. Bishops can unite such benefices as are in their own patronage, and such as are not, with consent of the patron, for a single turn, provided that the benefices to be united are all vacant at the time; but by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 43, s. 21, they are obliged to give notice of their intention and reasons for uniting to the Lord Lieutenant in Council, and it is not until six weeks after such notice, and only if not disapproved of by him, that the union is valid. They have no power of dividing parishes.

40. Permanent unions and divisions of parishes can be made by the Lord Lieutenant in Council. The Act 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 43, and amending Acts, empower him with the advice and approbation of the Archbishop of the province and Bishop of the diocese, to divide old parishes; to separate a parish or part of a parish heretofore united; to unite parishes one to another, or any part of a parish to another parish or part of a parish; to erect such divided or united parishes, or parts of parishes, into new parishes; and in cases of different patrons to settle a scheme of turns of presentation. The patron may object to the proposed plan; but his objection is subject to be overruled by the Council. The alterations may be made, whether the benefices dealt with are full or vacant; if full, the alterations are prospective, and take effect on vacancy; if vacant, they take effect immediately.

41. The Privy Council being, however, in respect of this matter a judicial tribunal, rather than an administrative Board, the result is that the initiation and expense of all proceedings in relation thereto are thrown upon the Bishop. We think it advisable that this duty should be imposed upon the Board of Ecclesiastical Commissioners; to whom on each vacancy of a benefice the Bishop of the diocese shall be bound to report the circumstances of the vacant and adjoining benefices; and that thereupon this Board shall consider whether union, division, or alteration be needed: and whether, if so, it should be of a permanent or temporary character: with power on fitting occasions to employ professional assistance to inquire into the local circumstances of parishes and districts, with a view to the re-arrangement of benefices; the Bishop or Bishops of the diocese or dioceses in which the benefices intended to be dealt with are situate, to be summoned by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners and vote as members at the meetings of the Board held for these purposes; all requisite proceedings to give effect to the resolutions of the Board to be conducted under its superintendence, and the expenses to be defrayed out of its funds.

42. A power of suspending the appointment to benefices in royal or ecclesiastical patronage, in which, by the certificate of the ordinary it should appear that for three years next preceding the 1st February, 1833, Divine service had not been celebrated, was given to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners by the 116th section of 3 & 4 Wm. IV., c. 37, the Bishop of the diocese being associated with them in deciding upon the propriety of such suspension. Upon suspension the revenues vest in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who are bound to provide for any requisite spiritual duties, either by paying a curate, or by committing their care to a neighbouring incumbent. About 57 benefices have been so suspended, the particulars of which will be found in Schedule VIII. No valid reason can be given for confining these clauses to cases of non-performance of Divine service for three years before 1833. We recommend that they shall be extended to all cases where at any time such non-performance shall have occurred for the preceding twelve months. It is stated to have been decided that they do not apply, if the benefice in which such non-performance occurred, was in 1833 part of an union, although since severed and separate. This defect should be amended.

43. A judicious exercise of these several statutable powers of uniting, dividing, and re-arranging the area of benefices, would effect much towards removing such anomalies as at present exist, of parishes on the one hand with large endowment and small Church population, and on the other with large Church population and inadequate endowment. But no redistribution would afford a sufficient remedy, where the aggregate of the endowments of the whole district falls below what is required to supply its claims.

44. In order to meet this exigency we recommend two measures. (1.) To enable the Ecclesiastical Commissioners (the Bishop of the diocese voting for the occasion as one), if they think fit, to suspend any benefice in royal or ecclesiastical patronage in which the Church population does not reach a certain number, which we would suggest to be forty, according to the census next preceding—the revenues thereupon to vest in the Commissioners in the same manner as the revenues of parishes suspended for non-performance of Divine service, and with a similar obligation to provide for the spiritual duties; and (2) to raise the scale of ad valorem tax now levied on all benefices above £300 a year, in such of these as have not a Church population of at least 100.

45. The number of benefices in lay patronage amounts to 309. We advise the provisions for suspension to be extended to these, if either the consent of the patrons can be obtained, or a compensation made to them.

46. Some charges now pressing upon the clergy may, in our opinion, be either otherwise provided for or rendered less burdensome. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners, under the authority of the Act 23 & 24 Vict., c. 150, lend money for building or repairing glebe houses, repayable with interest by instalments. An extension of the time limited for repayment of these loans, so as to make the amount of principal repaid in each instalment less than it is at present, has been suggested by the Commissioners, and this suggestion appears to us judicious. The Visitation fees, and some other fees, are levied to maintain the Ecclesiastical Courts and Registries. These Courts and Registries exist for the benefit of the whole Establishment, and not merely of the individual clergy. They should therefore, in our opinion, be maintained out of the general funds in the hands of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. Their number may be advantageously diminished. The expense of inquiring into the dilapidations and general condition of the glebe houses, and enabling or compelling the incumbents to keep them in repair, might well be made less, by the substitution of more simple and summary modes of proceeding. The tax for diocesan schools should be borne by the funds of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners; and it should not be payable except where such schools are in efficient operation.

47. To these recommendations for the improvement of the condition of the Irish clergy we would add two suggestions. The policy which protects the incomes of judicial and official persons from being incumbered, appears to us in a peculiar degree to apply to the revenues of the clergy, granted not for individual benefit but for the suitable maintenance of the office. We recommend that all instruments to incumber the benefice shall be declared void, as against not only the successor but the incumbent himself. In like manner we regard non-residence as inconsistent with the purposes of a parochial ministry. The Act 5 Geo. IV., c. 91, was intended to prevent this evil in Ireland. But the proceedings under it appear to us more tedious and less effective than they might be; and we recommend the law on these subjects to be amended.

48. A large portion of the temporalities of the Irish branch of the Established Church (upwards of £204,000 a year) consists of income derived from lands. Of these lands much the greater part, producing about £142,000 a year, belongs to the Bishops, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, the Corporations aggregate, and the Dignitaries of the cathedrals. The remainder (in value about £62,000 a year) belongs to the parochial clergy. The income arising from the lands of the clergy, although they are generally let at moderate rents, may be considered to represent the improved value. But as to all the other lands of the Church, the income received by the ecclesiastical landlord bears a small proportion to the value.

49. Originally there was an unlimited power of leasing and alienating the lands of Bishops, Dignitaries, and Corporations aggregate. For this, by the 1 Charles I., c. 3, and subsequent statutes, has been substituted a limited power, which still continues, to lease such lands when situate in towns for forty years, and when situate elsewhere for twenty-one years, during the duration of the lease at the old rent, and after its termination at a moiety of the value. Certain lands given by the Act of Settlement of Charles II. may be leased for lives.

50. The leases of lands capable of being leased for twenty-one years at the old rent, are usually renewed annually for that term, in consideration of fines. These fines are supposed to bear a certain proportion to the improved annual value of the lands; in the diocese of Armagh one-eighth, and in all other dioceses one-fifth. Renewals of leases of lands capable of being leased for longer terms of years or for lives, are taken for proportionate fines at more lengthened intervals. The custom of renewing the chief lease has led to a system of sub-letting, with an engagement to renew on each renewal of the head lease. Such an engagement is known as a toties quoties covenant.

51. This system of leasing and sub-leasing was attended with much uncertainty of tenure, both to the chief and subordinate interests. Accordingly, with a view to remedy the inconvenience, provisions were introduced in the Church Temporalities' Acts (Ireland), enabling chief tenants of Bishops or other ecclesiastical corporations sole, or of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, for customary terms of 21 years, three lives, or 40 years, to purchase a conveyance of a perpetual estate in their lands, subject to a fee-farm rent; the rent to be the aggregate amount of the rent reserved by the lease about to be converted into a perpetuity, and of the average annual fine; and to be liable to vary at septennial periods with variation in the average price of wheat or oats, whichever be the grain most grown in the district where the lands are situate.

52. The price to be paid for the perpetuity by the chief tenant, is directed to be estimated in the following manner. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are to ascertain the full improved yearly value of the lands, either by issuing a commission of valuation or otherwise, as they think fit; then to calculate upon this basis the value of the fee-simple, subject only to the fee-farm rent to be reserved; and an allowance of £4 per cent. having been deducted, the value of the existing lease is to be subtracted; and the balance forms the purchase money.

53. Before the 1st of August, 1844, the annual value was found by multiplying the customary fine in the diocese of Armagh by eight, and in all other dioceses by five. But since this date, it has been ascertained, either by actual survey and valuation, or from any other source by which the Commissioners are enabled to find the bonâ fide full improved value of the lands. Had the customary fine represented the proportion of the true value, which in theory it was supposed to do, both modes of calculation should have agreed. But this not being the case, in consequence of the long intervals between the revisions of the valuations for fines, and the inaccurate manner in which they were made, the result was in most instances to increase the rate of price. The value of the fee is taken at 20 years' purchase on the annual value, after deducting the fee-farm rent to be reserved: and the value of the existing lease (which is to be subtracted from the value of the fee), if for 21 years, at the number of years' purchase which is represented by the multiplier 12·821; and if for longer terms of years or for lives, at the notarial value.

54. The increase of price caused by the change in the mode of valuation adopted since 1844, is stated to have had the effect of discouraging the purchase of perpetuities. This is confirmed by a comparison of the amount received before August 1, 1844, viz., £471,244; and since that date, viz., £168,026.

55. It appears to us expedient to encourage the conversion of leaseholds into perpetuities. In no other way can the objectionable system of leasing for fines be terminated; and until it is terminated, the under-tenants and cultivators of the soil, uncertain whether the superior interest is to continue on which their own depends, cannot be expected to make either permanent or extensive improvements in their lands. Besides, whatever be the price withheld, is so much lost for Church purposes.

56. To find an exact pecuniary measure of the increase in value arising from the conversion of the leasehold into a perpetuity, is difficult, if not impracticable; but some of the objections made to the present system might well be removed. Instead of taking the full improved annual value, ascertained ex parte by a private estimate, as the basis of the calculation of price, the public valuation known as the Tenement valuation, might be adopted with advantage. It is accessible to every person, and is used for assessing poor rate and other local taxation in Ireland. It is somewhat, but not disproportionately, below the full improved value.

57. The present valuation of the fully renewed lease for 21 years, which is to be subtracted from the value of the fee, seems to us too low. It assumes money worth £5 per cent., which is a high value in dealings of this character; and the lease is estimated as if it were a 21 years' lease merely, whereas it is a lease for that term certain, with a customary right of renewal. The standard of value might fairly be taken at 14 years' purchase.

58. The rate of interest charged by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for purchase money not paid, but secured under statutable powers by mortgage, is at present £5 per cent. We recommend that it should be reduced to £4 per cent.

59. The benefit of these suggestions, if adopted as to the chief tenant, should be extended to the sub-tenants holding by leases with a toties quoties covenant, both as to purchase from their immediate landlords, and if these refuse to buy, then from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

60. The lands belonging to Ecclesiastical Corporations aggregate, although generally let on the same principles as those of Corporations sole, were omitted from the provisions of the Church Temporalities' Acts. We are unable to see any sufficient reason for leaving the tenants of these lands in a different position, or for keeping up a distinction in the laws that regulate the tenure of the estates belonging to these different owners. The same provisions should equally apply to both; and they should include the case of leases made by such of these Corporations as have been dissolved.

61. With respect to the glebe lands we consider it unadvisable that the parochial clergy should be involved in the personal management of land, beyond the portion requisite for household and residential purposes. Leases of the remaining portions of these lands at fair rents should be encouraged, so as to create a solvent tenantry, and as much as possible secure for the incumbent a certain income. In order to effect this, we recommend that a power of leasing glebe lands for terms suitable to the local circumstances, be vested in the Board of Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

62. With respect to the tithe-rentcharge, it appears to us that it would be expedient to empower the owners of perpetual estates to redeem upon fair terms the tithe-rentcharge now payable by them to ecclesiastical landlords. The purchase money for such redemption we recommend should be paid to, and administered by, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, the principal thereof to be invested in the purchase of lands or Government securities, and the income to be applied for the same purposes as the rentcharge redeemed.

63. The Board of Ecclesiastical Commissioners in Ireland is constituted under the provisions of the Church Temporalities' Acts (Ireland). These Acts provide that it shall consist of four ex officio members, namely, the Lord Primate of all Ireland, the Lord High Chancellor of Ireland, being a member of the United Church of England and Ireland, the Lord Archbishop of Dublin, and the Lord Chief Justice of Ireland, being a member of the United Church of England and Ireland, of four Bishops nominated by the Crown, and of three other "proper and discreet persons," of whom two are to be nominated by the Crown, and one by the Archbishops of Armagh and Dublin. Since the death of the late Bishop of Derry, who was a member of the Board, the vacancy has not been filled by the Crown; and another vacancy has been caused by the recent death of Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness. The persons who now form the Board are the Lord Primate, the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, the Lord Archbishop of Dublin, the Bishops of Meath, Ossory, and Cashel, the Lord Chief Justice of Ireland, Dr. Gayer, Q.C., and Mr. Quin. Dr. Gayer was appointed by the Crown and Mr. Quin by the Archbishops of Armagh and Dublin. Dr. Gayer and Mr. Quin receive salaries; all the other Commissioners are unpaid.

64. A very large amount of property has by the operation of provisions in the Church Temporalities' Acts (Ireland) become vested in this Board. The net annual revenues at present received by them may be estimated at upwards of £113,000 a year. These revenues are derived from the episcopal estates, which were transferred to them on the reduction of the Bishoprics by the Act of 3 & 4 Wm. IV., c. 37; from the property of dignities and benefices which have been suspended by Orders in Council; from tithes and lands disappropriated from other dignities by similar Orders in Council; from rentcharges payable to the Commissioners out of the sees of Armagh and Derry; from an ad valorem tax imposed on all bishoprics, dignities, and benefices exceeding in annual value £300, and which increases in its proportion according to certain scales of income; and from the accumulations of the purchase money received on the conversion of leasehold interests into perpetuities.

65. All these various revenues constitute a general fund, which originally under the Church Temporalities' Acts was applicable for the following purposes, viz.: discharging the expenses of the Commissioners' establishment; providing church requisites; payment of parish clerks, sextons, and organists; building and repairing churches; and for some special charges, such as salaries to the curates of Dublin parishes. Any surplus that might remain, after answering these demands, was intended to be applied in augmenting small benefices and curacies. An additional charge was however afterwards thrown upon the fund, namely, the payment to the parochial clergy in certain cities, of incomes equivalent to those which they had previously received from a tax on houses and tenements, known as ministers' money, which by the Act 20 & 21 Vict. c. 8, was abolished. An estimate returned to us by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners of the average amount required communibus annis for each of these heads of expenditure, will be found in the Sixth Schedule.

66. The Church Temporalities' Acts preserved the rights of the then existing Prelates, dignitaries, and incumbents. Hence no portion of the revenues of the Ecclesiastical Commission was at first available except what was raised by the sale of perpetuities. But, vestry rates for church requisites, building, and repair of churches having been abolished, the interest from the fund created by the necessarily gradual conversion of leaseholds, was quite inadequate to meet the obligations imposed by the statutes on the funds of the Commissioners.

67. To meet this difficulty, power was given to the Commissioners by the Act 4 & 5 Wm. IV., c. 90, s. 45, to borrow from the Board of Public Works any sum or sums of money not exceeding in the whole £100,000, to be afterwards repaid with interest out of their property; and a subsequent Act, 6 & 7 Wm. IV., c. 99, s. 15, directed all moneys received from purchasers of perpetuities to be invested in public securities, and authorized the sale and disposal of such securities, as occasion should arise, and the application of the proceeds for the same purposes, as in previous statutes had been appointed for their general revenues.

68. Accordingly a loan for the authorized amount was obtained from the Board of Works. This has long since been repaid out of the Perpetuity Purchase Fund. From the same source for about ten or twelve years the expenditure by the Commissioners in building and repairing the fabrics of churches (many of which it is stated were delivered up to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners in a dilapidated condition), and in providing for the church officers and requisites, was mainly defrayed. The amount of principal of the fund disposed of, in order to meet these several demands, is reported to us as having amounted to £520,867.

69. The use of the principal for these purposes was discontinued soon after the year 1845, when a communication on the subject took place between the Commissioners and Lord Heytesbury, then Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

70. The Commissioners also hold as trustees some property appropriated for particular purposes. Thus the funds known as Primate Boulter's and Primate Robinson's funds, the former amounting to upwards of £89,000 Government stock, and the latter to £985 consols (the particulars of which are given in Schedule XIV.), being bequests of those Prelates to buy glebes and augment small benefices, were by the Act 3 & 4 Wm. IV., c. 37, s. 61, transferred to the Commissioners for these purposes. They also administer for like purposes in the dioceses of Waterford and Lismore, a fund called Bishop Gore's Fund, bequeathed by a prelate of that name; and some private endowments for churches, in all about £4,240, Government stock, the full particulars of which are given in Schedule XV., are also standing to their account.

71. The duties at present discharged by this Board and the additional powers which will be required in order to give effect to some of our recommendations, if adopted by the Legislature, render it in the highest degree important that it should be efficiently constituted. Some changes in the present arrangement appear to us indispensable. Two of the ex officio members are Judges, necessarily occupied in their especial duties; and the result is, as might be expected, that their attendance is extremely rare. Further, if they happen not to be members of the Church, and so ineligible to act, there is no provision made to supply their places. When this is taken into account, we are of opinion that the laity is not in proportion sufficiently represented on the Board. It appears to us that it would be more advisable to have only two ex officio members, viz., the Prelates of the Sees of Armagh and Dublin; two other Bishops to be selected by the Crown, one from the Province of Munster and the other from the Province of Connaught, to represent the local interests of the dioceses situate therein respectively, the two ex officio members sufficiently representing the interests of the dioceses situate in Ulster and Leinster; three laymen unpaid, to be nominated by the Crown, and two paid Commissioners, to be nominated (in accordance with the analogy of the mode of appointing the English paid Ecclesiastical Commissioners), one by the Crown and the other by the Lord Primate.

72. An examination of the working of the Establishment in its various departments has satisfied us that the official duties are discharged with diligence and ability. An excellent system of keeping the books and accounts, for which the Board were indebted to the suggestions of the late Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness, has been introduced. But the proportion which the expenses of administration and management bear to the revenues is high, and in our opinion capable of being reduced, without prejudice to efficiency. At present there are two paid Commissioners, two chief subordinate officers, the secretary and treasurer; two architects, each with a salary, bound to give their entire time to the business of the Commission; a travelling agent, some local agents, and in addition a portion of the income is collected by an agency firm. The per-centage for collection is in some instances as high as 10 per cent. There are also paid local inspectors of the churches, and of the outlay upon their building and repair. The clerks are 25 in number, of whom 21 are termed permanent and 4 supernumerary.

73. Upon inquiry we have ascertained that the paid Commissioners of the Board of Ecclesiastical Commissioners in England, with the assistance of the Bank of England, discharge the duties of the Treasurer's department under their Commission; no separate office of Treasurer exists. The evidence of the Secretary of the Bank of Ireland has satisfied us that a like system might without any inconvenience or difficulty be adopted in Ireland, and that the expense of the separate office of Treasurer might be saved. In proposing to retain two paid Commissioners we intend that they, with the assistance of the Bank of Ireland, should act as Treasurers. We think that the employment of a head clerk in the agency department is unnecessary; and as to the clerks' departments we are of opinion that they could be so remodelled as to reduce expenditure without impairing efficiency. The per-centage for collection of rents and tithe-rentcharge ought to be revised with a view to reduction, and the system of supervision of rentals and accounts is capable of improvement. In the architect's department it would in our opinion be a more advantageous arrangement to have a head architect of eminence, with proper skilled assistance, and with an improved system of local inspection. We are further of opinion that the accounts of the Commissioners should be annually examined under some efficient system of audit.

74. By these alterations in the administration of the offices of this Board, we anticipate that the present expenses of the establishment may be diminished, and that if an increase of the staff employed in the agency and clerks' departments shall be needed, in consequence of the additional property and duties which under our recommendations would devolve upon them, the expense will be proportionably less.

75. With respect to the present application of the annual revenues of the Board for church purposes, we think that the payment of some of the charges upon them should cease; such as the expenses of the elements for the Holy Communion, and all payments connected with organs or music in churches not cathedral, by which means a saving of about £3,700 a-year would be effected. The payment of the salaries of the parish clerks should be continued only in the cases in which it appears to the Commissioners that the parishioners are not in a condition to provide for them by their subscriptions; and in such cases they should consider whether the offices of parish clerk and sexton may not be advantageously united in the same person. In this manner we anticipate that in the expenditure for these officers, at present averaging about £24,000 a-year, a considerable reduction might be effected. In case the Ecclesiastical Courts and Registries shall be maintained out of the general funds, as already suggested, the office of auditor of their accounts may be abolished, and the salary (£250 a-year) saved.

76. The surplus income of all estates and funds vested in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners should be applicable to the suitable augmentation of benefices inadequately endowed. The limit to augmentation, imposed by the Act 3 & 4 Wm. IV., c. 37, s. 93, which prohibits any augmented benefice being raised beyond £200 a year, is in our opinion injudicious. The places in which such augmentation is most needed, are where the Church population is considerable. When in country districts this population is widely scattered, or where in towns the residence of the incumbent may involve larger expenses, in these cases such an income as £200 a year might be altogether inadequate. We recommend that the Ecclesiastical Commissioners in dealing with such cases should be enabled to exercise a wide discretion. They should also have power to determine the mode in which augmentation or endowment is to be made, whether by annual payments, or by the allocation, or the purchase and grant, of lands.

77. Some of the alterations and improvements that we have recommended can only be effected from time to time as vacancies arise by the termination of existing interests, with which we have not intended to interfere. But the benefit of others not less important, is capable of being at once attained by proper legislation.

78. The following is a summary of the principal recommendations made in this our Report.

1. A further consolidation of Dioceses and a reduction in the number and (with one exception) in the incomes of the Bishops.
2. A corresponding reduction in the number of Cathedral establishments, so that they shall not exceed the number of Bishoprics.
3. A reduction in the number of Archdeacons.
4. The suppression of all dignities and offices in the dissolved Cathedral Corporations.
5. A re-arrangement of benefices, to meet the exigencies of the Church population, and a more equitable adjustment of income to services.
6. That with a view to re-arrangement, the duty be imposed upon the Board of Ecclesiastical Commissioners of taking the necessary proceedings for the union, division, or alteration of benefices.
7. That the existing powers of suspending appointments to benefices be extended to all cases where for twelve months next before the time of suspension Divine service shall not have been performed, and also to benefices in Royal or Ecclesiastical patronage where the Church population is under 40 in number. In each case provision to be made for such spiritual duties as are requisite.
8. That an additional ad valorem tax be imposed upon all benefices above £300 a-year in which the Church population does not amount to 100 in number.
9. That payment of the expenses of providing the elements for the Holy Communion, or for music in any churches not cathedral, out of the funds of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, be discontinued, and that in no cases, except where the parishioners are unable to provide for the services of a parish clerk, shall a salary to a parish clerk be paid by the Commissioners, and that in such cases the offices of parish clerk and sexton be consolidated, if practicable.
10. That the expense of maintaining the Ecclesiastical Courts and Registries be defrayed by the general fund vested in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and that the clergy be thereupon relieved from the visitation fees.

11. That the period for repayment of building loans from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners be extended.
12. That the estates of all the capitular bodies, and such estates of the Bishoprics as shall not be allocated for the endowment of those retained, shall be transferred to the Board of Ecclesiastical Commissioners.
13. That the surplus arising from all property vested in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, shall be applicable at their discretion for the suitable augmentation of benefices inadequately endowed.
14. That with a view to carry out these recommendations and others of a subordinate character, and for the purposes of a more effective management of Church property, the constitution of the Board of Ecclesiastical Commissioners be improved and its powers enlarged.
15. That the expense of converting leaseholds into perpetuities be diminished; and with this object, that the amount of purchase money be ascertained with such alterations of the present system as have been suggested.
16. That increased facilities be given for leasing lands belonging to the parochial clergy, and that the power to lease be vested in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.
17. That the owners of land liable to pay tithe-rentcharge be empowered to redeem their liability.
19. That provision be made to prevent ecclesiastical persons alienating or incumbering by deed their official incomes.
20. That more stringent and summary powers of enforcing residence be given to the Bishops and Ecclesiastical Courts.

SUMMARY TABLES.

THESE Tables contain a summary of the statistical information, which is to be found in detail in the Schedules. Reference is made to the places in the Schedules, where the items occur, from which each Table has been compiled.

Tables I. to XIII., inclusive, are framed with a view to exhibit the Property of the Church Establishment, as distinguished from the incomes of the Ecclesiastical persons and Corporations of which it is composed; what is contributed by one department to another (as, for instance, the tax paid by the Clergy to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners) is therefore excluded from each of these Tables: the property, out of which such contribution arises, being itself classified in another Table.

Tables XIV., XV., and XVI. show the rental of the Church Lands, in which the leaseholds have been converted by the Tenants into Perpetuities, pursuant to the provisions of the Church Temporalities Acts, and also the rental of those which, although within such provisions, the Tenants still hold under leases customarily renewable for fines.

In Tables XVII. to XXV., inclusive, the Benefices are classified according to their respective extent, church population, emoluments, and other circumstances.

In Tables XXVI. and XXVII. the Revenues of the Cathedral Establishments and Dignitaries are classified.

Table XXVIII. gives an abstract of the Church Property administered by the Board of Ecclesiastical Commissioners and of their disbursements.

The Sees of Armagh and Derry contribute to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, out of their revenues, annual rentcharges—the former of £4,500, and the latter of £6,160. All the Sees are also subject to an ad valorem tax to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. These, and other deductions from the revenues of the Sees, are stated in Schedule I., Part 1. The net revenues after all deductions, including the value of the See-houses and of Lands in occupation of the Bishops, amount to £58,031 9*s.*—(See Table XXI.)

SCHEDULES.

ESTABLISHED CHURCH (IRELAND) COMMISSION.

Schedules I., II., III., IV., contain a tabulated return of the Revenues of the Archbishops and Bishops, Corporations of Deans and Chapters, Minor Corporations, and Cathedral Dignitaries.

Schedule V. contains a similar return of the gross and net revenues of the beneficed clergy, with full particulars of the circumstances of each Benefice and of its ecclesiastical character, showing whether it is a Rectory, Vicarage, Perpetual Curacy, or Union, in whom the Patronage is vested, the Church population, the number of Churches within its limits, and the amount of charge for building or repairing the Glebe-house at present due.

Schedules VI. to XV. inclusive, contain a like return of the Revenues administered by the Board of Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Church purposes, together with the particulars of the property from which those Revenues arise, and of some trust funds vested in the Board for special purposes, and a summary of their annual disbursements.

Schedule XVI. contains the Church population of some extra parochial districts, and parishes which have been omitted from Schedule V.

The information contained in the first five Schedules (with the exception of the returns of Church population in each parish and district), has been obtained from the answers to inquiries directed to the Registrars of the different dioceses, the Bishops, the Capitular bodies, the Cathedral Dignitaries, and the beneficed Clergy. In examining these answers, assistance has been derived from the Reports of the Royal Commissioners appointed to inquire into the Revenues and Patronage of the Church in Ireland in the year 1832, and the returns to Parliament of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland, made pursuant to an Order of the House of Commons, dated 9th February, 1864.

The Church population, as it appears in column 3 of Schedule V., opposite to each ecclesiastical parish and district, is taken from the returns to the Census of 1861. Except by an inquiry conducted under the authority of Government, accuracy could not be secured. The classification of religious denominations adopted by the Census Commissioners, in their published statistics, was by civil or geographical parishes. The number of members of the Established Church is by the present Commission required to be returned according to the ecclesiastical parishes and districts. This has been accomplished by the assistance of William Donnelly, Esq., C.B., Registrar-General for Ireland, who was one of the Census Commissioners in 1861, and in whose office the original returns of that Census, which was taken by townlands, are preserved. When the ecclesiastical parish or district corresponds with a civil parish, or with several civil parishes, the Census Report itself gives the means of supplying the required return. In the instances where this is not the case, the townlands of the ecclesiastical parishes and districts were ascertained by inquiries addressed to the respective incumbents, and also to the Registrars of the several dioceses in whose offices the deeds separating the districts from the mother parishes are registered. The names of these townlands were then furnished to the Registrar-General, and the return of Church population for each, as it appeared in the original papers of the Census of 1861, was made out in his office. With such sources of information as to boundaries as were open to the Commissioners (for the ecclesiastical divisions are not adopted in the Ordnance Survey), inaccuracies may have occurred in defining by townlands the contents of these ecclesiastical parishes and districts. Thus, a townland which belongs to a district may have been credited to the mother parish, and vice versâ. Again, it has been assumed that when a civil and ecclesiastical parish have the same name, they have the same boundaries; and this may not always be the case. Occasionally, in classifying the small civil parishes, when several of them have been united together to form the ecclesiastical divisions, they may have been erroneously placed. The alias names of townlands also create difficulty and uncertainty. But errors arising from these causes are not likely to be of any practical importance.

The columns 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 of Schedule V., contain the particulars relating to the revenues of each benefice. Column 5 gives the gross amount of yearly income. In this is included an estimate of the glebe-house and surrounding grounds. The estimate for these, as also for any other lands in the hands of the incumbent, is taken from the valuation made for their assessment to poor rate. When the glebe lands are let to tenants, the amount of the rental is stated. It is to be noted that as this column returns the gross revenues not only of the parishes, but also of the perpetual curacies, whose income is either altogether or partly derived from the revenues of the mother parishes out of which they have been formed, it happens that in many instances the same property appears not only under the head of the parish, but again under the head of the curacy. For this reason, the addition of the figures in this column would not accurately represent the gross revenues received by the beneficed clergy in each Diocese. Column 6 of this Schedule enumerates the annual charges upon the income of the benefice; column 7, similar charges upon the glebe-house and glebe lands, and column 8 shows the net value after the deductions in columns 6 and 7. In column 6, stipends paid by the Rectors and Vicars to Perpetual Curates are deducted. These stipends again appear in column 5, opposite the curacies. Thus the aggregate amount in column 8 (if the pew rents and voluntary contributions appearing in column 5 be deducted) represents fairly the net income for Church endowment in each Diocese after allowing charges (such as poor rate) incident to property of the nature of land and tithe-rentcharge, and charges (such as building charges) imposed on the emoluments by statute. Column 9 gives further deductions for stipendiary curates, houses of residence when there are no glebe-houses, tax payable to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, visitation fees, or other Church purposes. In this column, the rents for houses, when there are not glebe-houses, are given as returned by the clergy. They represent, very generally, the actual payments; but sometimes an estimate proportioned to the income of the benefice. Column 10 exhibits the ultimate net income after the deductions in columns 6, 7, and 9.

Schedules VI. to XV. inclusive, contain official returns made to the present Commission by the Board of Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

* The Bishop excuses this rent.

In addition to the above rents, there is reserved in each lease 1*s.* in pound receiver's fees. Those holding under Perpetuity Grants, also pay 5 per cent. more than the above named rents; but the agent is not aware whether this be under a distinct reservation, as was the case under the former leases, or whether it is included in the gross fee-farm rent reserved. If the latter be the case, the agent receives $\frac{1}{21}$ of the reserved fee-farm rent. The above return represents what is paid to Bishop.

C. G. Knox, Land Agent.

The School-master of the Choristers, Lewis G. Mills, LL.B., of Trinity College, Dublin, has a salary of £80, together with a free house. The Choristers are instructed by him in English, Mathematics, and Classics. Each Chorister, when leaving the Choir, receives as an apprentice fee, a sum of money varying from £40 to £50, provided that his conduct has been exemplary, and provided that the occupation on which he enters is deemed satisfactory by the Archbishop. These fees or gratuities are paid all at once, or by instalments, according to the circumstances of each case.In the years 1854, 1855, 1856, and 1857, sums amounting in the whole to £4,067 were expended on the purchase of ground, and the building of two very excellent houses, one of them for the organist, the other for one of the Vicars-Choral, and also on the building of the Choristers' School-house, and the fitting up of the Master's residence. It was found that the rule formerly in force, which required members of the Choir to bear two-thirds of the repairing of the houses which they occupied, did not work satisfactorily. Many of the buildings were falling into decay, and some of them were almost in ruins. In the year 1859 the funds of the Corporation having greatly increased, a thorough repair of the houses was commenced, and they are now in a very satisfactory condition. The outlay under this head amounted to about £245 yearly until the work was completed. Sums amounting on an average to £33 yearly are expended in assisting the tenants of the Estates to improve their houses and farm offices; and a sum of £500 is lodged on a deposit receipt in the Provincial Bank, Armagh, bearing interest which the Corporation wish to have available for an intended alteration and improvement of the organ, and of the seats of the Choir in the Cathedral. The late Primate had from time to time, up to the year 1854, advanced large sums of money to the Corporation, to aid in its support during the running out of the leases of the Estates, and the consequent loss of the fines. These loans amounted in all to £2,452 7*s.* 2*d.*, which sum has been gradually repaid—no interest being charged by the Primate. The agent of the Estates also made various advances in payment of salaries and other necessary outgoings, which amounted in the year 1856 to £1,424 11*s.* 1*d.*, and which has also been paid off, and thus by means of the munificence of the late Primate, and by his judicious management of the property of the Corporation, the annual income derived from it, which in the year 1832 was only £686 7*s.* 6*d.*, is now £2,681 11*s.* 9*d.*, and free from all debt and incumbrances. |

APPENDIX 3.—EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

FRIDAY, APRIL 24, 1868.

The Commissioners appointed by Her Majesty to inquire into the Church Establishment (Ireland) assembled this day, at 11 o'clock, at the offices of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, No. 24, Upper Merrion-street, Dublin, for the purpose of examining witnesses viva voce.

PRESENT:

The Earl of MEATH, Chairman; Viscount DE VESCI, and Colonel ROBERT A. SHAFTO ADAIR.

J. FAVIERE ELRINGTON, LL.D., Esq., Secretary to the Commission, was also in attendance.

April 24, 1868.

Arthur E. Gayer, esq., Q.C., LL.D.

ARTHUR EDWARD GAYER, Esq., Q.C., LL.D., examined.

Commissioners' Duties, &c.

1. The Chairman.—I believe you are one of the paid Commissioners of the Ecclesiastical Board in Ireland?—Yes.

2. What salary does each of the paid Commissioners receive?—£1,000 a year.

3. Originally there were, I believe, three paid Commissioners?—There were, for about fifteen or sixteen years.

4. Upon what ground was the office of the third paid Commissioner not filled up, and at whose suggestion?—I believe it was not filled up from motives of economy. I do not know of my own knowledge at whose suggestion it was not filled up; but upon the death of Mr. Erck, the services of a third paid Commissioner were dispensed with. Your lordships are aware that by a recent Act of Parliament passed in 1860, there can be but two paid Commissioners, one of whom is appointed by the Crown. It was provided by the Statute in 1860, an amendment of the Church Temporalities Acts, that if a third Commissioner was appointed, he should not be paid. Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness was then appointed under that statute, and is now one of the unpaid Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

5. What are the hours of attendance of the paid Commissioners?—I may say from half-past ten, A.M., until about half-past four or five, P.M., daily. In saying so I ought to make this distinction: Mr. Quin is generally here at half-past ten, A.M., and goes away at half-past four; but I find it more convenient to come at eleven, A.M., and go away at five, P.M.

6. You each attend daily, as I understand you?—Daily with very few exceptions. In case Mr. Quin is ill, or absent, I may perhaps perform the whole duties of the paid Commissioners for a week or fortnight at a time, by sitting at extra hours and taking home papers at night, which ordinarily I do not do. Then again, if I am absent from similar causes, Mr. Quin may perform the whole of the duties. If either of us should require a change for a fortnight or so, there would be but one paid Commissioner here, and he would do all the duties during that time.

7. In reply to a question in a paper of queries we sent to you, you stated that the salary of your Treasurer is £500 a year?—Yes.

8. What are the peculiar duties of the Treasurer?—To superintend and sign receipts for every sum of money paid to the Board, whether in the way of rent, renewal fines, or upon perpetuity grants. He is obliged to be in daily attendance, for the purpose of passing those receipts and making payments, and I believe that his duties are really, although not of a very onerous character, duties which require very constant and close vigilance, in order to prevent business falling into arrear, or errors being committed.

9. Does he attend daily?—Daily.

10. What are his hours of attendance?—From ten, A.M., to four, P.M., and sometimes he is here until six, P.M. I should add that he is bound by the rules of the Board to present every day to the Commissioners, a statement of the pecuniary transactions of the preceding day, showing the receipts and disbursements, and verify it by the production of the bank books, which are made up daily, and enable us to check his day book.

11. Does he lay that book before you daily?—He does; and I would wish to have an opportunity of producing that book, to show how it is done.

12. The English Ecclesiastical Commissioners have no Treasurer, and keep their accounts in the name of two Commissioners, so that in fact the Bank of England is their Treasurer. Now, we wish to know what reasons there would be to prevent that system being adopted in this establishment?—The principal reasons which influenced this Board to continue the office of Treasurer upon the occurrence of the last vacancy were, I think, these—we have a vast number of sums of money paid to us both by tenants and clergymen, in the shape of rent, ecclesiastical tax, &c., which are tendered to us in this house, and if we had no officer here competent to give a receipt for those sums, and we called on them to go to the bank to lodge those small sums, they would be legally in a position to refuse to do so. If they made a legal tender of payment to the office here, and it was refused, they might refuse to go to the bank to lodge it. Furthermore, very many mistakes would be made, if clergymen and tenants were allowed to go to the bank, and lodge what sums of money they thought fit. Again, they could get no receipt from the bank but an ordinary bank receipt, so that they would have the double trouble of coming here and going to the bank; in fact, they would first have to come here to get the particulars, then to go to the bank to lodge the money, and then come here again for their receipts, which would give very general dissatisfaction. We have met, in some cases, refusals to go to the bank. The only cases in which we have been enabled to oblige parties to go to the bank to lodge money are cases of renewal fines, and purchases of perpetuities, where the applicants requiring something to be done by the Board, the Board is in a position to make terms. In all those cases, which are the largest class of payments made to the Commissioners, the Board insist on the money being lodged by the parties in the bank, and the bank receipt to be produced here, and exchanged for the Treasurer's receipt. With respect to rents and taxes, we consider we have no power to refuse the money when the right sum is tendered in our office, and if we had no Treasurer, the Commissioners would have to do this in person, which would seriously interfere with the due performance of their duties.

13. I collect from what you have said that the chief difficulty you experience is the unwillingness of individuals to go to the Bank of Ireland, as their money might not be received there, and a receipt given to them. Could not that difficulty be removed, and the matter simplified by the party calling here for a docket, stating the proper sum which they should lodge in the bank?—If they would consent to come here for a docket, and then go and lodge the money, and then come here with the bank receipt, and exchange it for our receipt, it would remove the difficulty, but we have no means of compelling them to do so. They complain frequently of the time lost in going back and forward even between the agency office and the Treasurer's office though both in the house. Most of our payments are subject to deductions for poor rates and income tax, which must be calculated by a person who understands how to do so, and many persons coming here to make payments scarcely know the exact sums they have to pay. That is all regulated in the agency office. A draft receipt is prepared with a statement of the exact sum to be received. That draft receipt is then taken to the Treasurer's office, and on payment of the money a proper receipt is given. A person thus performs all he has got to do by one visit here. This duty is sometimes done by friends of the parties, who, especially when paying small sums, would grumble if they had to come here twice, and go to the Bank of Ireland also. In making large payments they do not think so much of a visit to the bank, and as we are in those cases generally dispensing what is considered a boon, they do not object to come here also, which they would otherwise do.

Arthur E. Gayer, esq., Q.C., LL.D.

14. Then, in fact, the only objection to paying directly into the bank is the unwillingness of the parties to take the trouble of coming here twice?—I believe so, and the fact of their being in a position to make a legal tender here, and the possibility of their refusing to pay elsewhere, and pleading that legal tender if any action should be brought against them.

15. Supposing that the Bank of Ireland were appointed Treasurer to the Board, do you think there would be any unwillingness or difficulty upon the part of the tenants to go to the Bank of Ireland directly, and pay in their money?—Do you mean if they were to get a receipt from the Bank of Ireland?

16. Yes, that is what I mean?—I am seldom present at interviews between the tenants and the Treasurer, but I have frequently heard rumours of tenants grumbling at going from one room to another. I think if a man comes with money in his hand, and expects it to be received here, he would be very much annoyed if he was told that it would not be received, and he was desired to go to the Bank of Ireland. It would diminish the difficulty, of course, if he had not to come back here for a formal receipt.

17. Colonel Adair.—With regard to tenants understanding their liabilities to payment, could they not come prepared with an account of the deductions due to him, subject, of course, to the challenge of the Treasurer as to the propriety of those deductions?—In some cases, I presume, the tenant does so. If he takes care of his own interests he ought to be satisfied as to the right sum to be paid, but frequently differences take place as to what is the right deduction. The tenant is an interested party, and the Treasurer is a disinterested party, and is more likely to be right, so that such differences could only be settled here. The bank would only give a receipt for the money they got. I do not think that they would agree to specify in their receipts what the money received was for. They only give a receipt to the person lodging a sum of money, without any reference whatever to what it is for. That is the bank practice. They won't keep separate accounts for us, headed taxes, or rent, or anything of that kind, and pass receipts for the taxes or rent. Frequently money is paid on account, and not in full. A man, for instance, may owe us £150, and can only pay us £100 on account, and we would act unwisely not to receive it. In such a case it requires the sanction of a Commissioner to justify the Treasurer in taking less than the sum due, although it may be most prudent to take a payment on account. The Bank of Ireland cannot know what such person ought to pay. I know that this subject was fully considered by the Board, with a view to economy on the last vacancy in the post of Treasurer, and the Board came, unanimously, to the conclusion, that they could not dispense with the services of a Treasurer.

18. Which of your officers checks the claims of the tenants for deductions?—The principal of the agency department. Instead of having all our income received by local agents through Ireland, we established, and effected a large economy by it, an agency department in our office. About £95,000 a year of the income of this Board is now received through that agency department in this house. It is the duty of the principal in the agency department to ascertain the deductions in each case, and to prepare, when he has agreed with a tenant or clergyman as to the right amount to be paid, a receipt which is taken to the Treasurer. The agent does not receive any money himself. The money is entirely received by the Treasurer, who then signs the receipt; but he cannot sign any receipt, except what is prepared in the agency department.

19. The Chairman.—Then, does not the Treasurer simply receive the money, as stated in the receipt prepared in the agency office?—Yes.

20. Could not a tenant, having received that docket or receipt in the agency office, go to the Bank of Ireland and lodge the money named in the docket?—Certainly, if he was disposed so to do.

21. Colonel Adair.—Then, in fact, the office of Treasurer is simply one of receipt and issue?—Yes; but by joining in the cheques he is a great check upon peculation. If it was possible to conceive a paid Commissioner peculating the funds of the Board, without conspiring with the Treasurer he could not possibly do it. Whether the principal of the agency department might not also be made Treasurer, I don't know, but I do not see what other alteration could be made.

22. The Chairman.—In whose names does the cash balance in the Bank of Ireland stand?—In the names of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners as a body. I may add that every remittance from the country is drawn in favour of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and all remittances and payments are lodged daily to the credit of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

23. By whom are all cheques signed?—First by the Secretary, or his first clerk, in his absence; secondly, by the Treasurer; and thirdly, by one of the Ecclesiastical paid Commissioners. Every cheque is signed by Mr. Quin or myself. They might be signed I presume by any one of the Commissioners, paid or unpaid; but we are authorized by the Board to sit in committee daily, and sign them. The work of the Board could not be carried on without that course being pursued.

24. In whose name does the Government stock stand?—In the names of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners as a body, and it cannot be sold out without a power of attorney under the seal of the Commissioners to authorize it. The Commissioners' seal is kept in a box which has two keys; one key of this box is kept by the Commissioners, and the other by their Secretary; and the box can only be opened in the presence of both parties. We are not authorized to put the seal to any document except at a meeting to which every member of the Board is summoned.

25. How many different accounts are kept by the Board with the Bank of Ireland?—I think six.

26. Would you name them?—There is first "the general fund account," which is the most extensive; the second is "the perpetuity fund," which is in the nature of a capital fund; the third is "Primate Boulter's fund;" the fourth is "Primate Robinson's fund;" the fifth is "Bishop Gore's fund;" and the sixth is "the deposit fund."

27. Colonel Adair.—Is "Bishop Gore's fund" the same as "Primate Robinson's fund" and "Primate Boulter's fund?"—Not quite. It is a fund under Bishop Gore's will for the rebuilding and repair of ruined churches in the dioceses of Waterford and Lismore, of which I think he was bishop.

28. It is then a local fund in fact?—Quite local.

29. The Chairman.—From whom does the bank receive directions for placing each sum lodged to the different accounts which you have just named?—I presume from the Treasurer or his clerk. The Treasurer does not always go to the bank in person, but he does on all important occasions.

April 24, 1865.

Arthur E. Guyer, esq., Q.C., LL.D.

30. Lord De Vesci.—It is done through the Treasurer's department, at all events?—Yes.

31. The Chairman.—By the Treasurer or one of his clerks it is done, as I understand you?—Yes.

32. In the written answers you have furnished to our queries, you stated that the cash balance to the credit of the Commissioners at the date of your return was £5,335; may I ask do you receive any interest from the Bank of Ireland for your balances?—No, my lord, it is a changing balance from day to day. It may be £5,000 to-day, and it may be £8,000 to-morrow, and it may be only £3,000 the following day.

33. The bank never allows you any interest on sums lodged?—No.

34. Do they charge you interest for sums advanced?—We have never yet, I believe, except for a day or two, asked them for any advance, and they have never charged us interest for them. Our course of proceeding is this: whenever we have more money in bank than the Treasurer reports is likely to be required within the next month or so, we invest a sum out of the balance in bank in the Government funds in order to fructify.

35. Do you mean invested in consols?—No, in three per cents.

36. Do you invest in exchequer bills?—No, my lord, we have never done so.

37. Lord De Vesci.—You are aware, I presume, that the banks have a system of paying interest on deposit accounts, and not upon current accounts. Your accounts are all, as I understand you, in the nature of current accounts; now, in case you lodged money to a deposit account you would receive interest upon it—why could you not do so?—My recollection is, that we applied to the bank some time ago, to know whether they would allow us interest on deposits, and they refused. But this could be stated more accurately by the Treasurer than by me; I believe it was through him that the negotiation took place. I think they stated that for some reason or other, they were not in the habit of allowing interest on deposits to public bodies; we are obliged by statute to bank with the Bank of Ireland.

38. In case the Bank of Ireland agreed to receive deposits from you, you would be able to lodge large sums to that account?—We would, certainly.

39. You would then receive interest?—Certainly. It has been under consideration more than once whether we could not do better than invest our surpluses in the Government funds, and the conclusion come to by the Board has been, that, all things considered, they gained more and lost less by the mode of proceeding they adopted, and that the interest varied so considerably upon deposits, namely, from one to four or five per cent., that we were more secure of gain by the receipt of the Government dividends on the stock, than by lodging our surpluses on deposit receipts.

40. Colonel Adair.—You stated, I think, that you had not invested your surpluses in exchequer bills?—Never.

41. What might be your reasons for not investing them in exchequer bills, which are a very available mode of obtaining any sum of money you might require on an emergency?—I cannot find that it was ever suggested to the Board at any period that it would be expedient to do so. My brother Commissioner and I have been under the impression that we were bound to invest our money in the Government funds, which is interpreted to mean stock of some kind or other. I know we have considered once or twice whether we might not do what merchants often do, namely, borrow money upon collateral security, that is, to invest a sum of stock in the hands of our banker in order to allow us to overdraw our account. That has been the subject of grave consideration once or twice. When Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness was in the habit of attending the Board it was discussed, but we were never able to see our way for doing so. The simple answer to the question is that it was never proposed at the Board to invest our money in exchequer bills.

42. The Chairman.—In following the system you adopted have you not constantly lost money by investing in Government securities, and being obliged to sell out when the funds were lower?—I am not aware that we ever lost money by our course of proceeding. It is possible that we might do so, but it would require a very careful comparison of every purchase and sale to ascertain if we ever lost by investing in the funds. The impression of the Board was, that we gained much more by the certain fixed dividends we received, and the occasional rise in the funds, than we had ever lost by sales.

43. Under what clause of the Act of Parliament do you consider yourself bound to place your surpluses in Government security?—The 3rd and 4th Wm. IV., cap. 37, sec. 62, which enacts, that the Commissioners shall be empowered from time to time, at their discretion, to invest in Government Funds, Stocks, or Securities, and no other. We might be in a position to make better terms with the bank, but for the 12th section of that Act of Parliament, which enacts, that the Governors and Directors of the Bank of Ireland shall open accounts with the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and receive lodgments and make payments as they shall direct. We always considered that we were not at liberty to bank with any other bank than the Bank of Ireland, which gives them, of course, a certain amount of power over us.

44. Has your present Treasurer been brought up in any great banking establishment, or in any great commercial establishment?—I believe not; but he was land agent to his father the Ex-Lord Chief Justice, and to other persons, I believe.

Secretary's Duties, &c.

45. In the paper I have already referred to as having been furnished to us, you state that the salary of your Secretary is £600 a year. What are the duties of the Secretary?—They are very multifarious indeed. The correspondence of this Board in the first instance is immense; the number of letters requiring answers is sometimes as much as 29,000 or even 30,000 in the year. It would be utterly impossible for the paid Commissioners to superintend the preparation and signatures of these letters. They go no further than making a minute of the substance of the letters to be written. It is then the duty of the Secretary to see that the order or minute of the Commissioners is correctly interpreted by the clerks who write the letters, and when he is satisfied of that, it is his duty to sign each letter, for the accuracy of which he is responsible. That is the Secretary's first duty. His second duty is to superintend, in a more personal way than either of the paid Commissioners can do, the several departments through the house, which are very numerous. It is extremely important for the Commissioners to have some superior officer who shall personally superintend the working of the establishment, and see that all the clerks are daily employed through the different departments; who can see where additional aid is required, or where there is a supernumerary who could be spared for the time for other work. It is also his duty to attend at the Board's meetings; take down the orders of the Board, and see that those orders are correctly recorded in the Board's minute or order books, which now extend to some forty-six or forty-seven volumes of a very ponderous character. He is also responsible for seeing that no cheque is presented to either of the paid Commissioners for his official signature—without which it would not be paid—unless there is a previous order for payment of the sum for which the cheque is drawn, or that it is drawn in pursuance of some standing order to pay some standing charge. There is an order of one or other of the paid Commissioners for every sum of money paid out of the office, except in cases where it is for a fixed charge, such as a stipend to a curate, or an augmentation to a rector, or for a quit-rent, which does not vary. Where any variation takes place in these standing charges, it must be sanctioned by the Commissioners, and an order got for the variation. It is the duty of the Secretary to see that no cheque is presented to us without a standing order, or a special order, to justify it. He has likewise a number of other duties to perform, which do not come so directly under our cognizance; but we both look upon him as a gentleman in whom we can place the most implicit confidence, and who will do everything as it ought to be done. He attends to the opening of all the letters, either by himself or his first clerk. Often more than 100 letters in one day are opened jointly by the Treasurer and Secretary, or the first clerk.

46. Lord De Vesci.—Opened jointly with the Treasurer you say?—Yes, by the Treasurer and Secretary, or the Secretary's first clerk; because many of these letters contain money, and the Treasurer would not feel himself responsible if he was not present at the opening of them. These letters sometimes take an hour to open, and those that relate to the Treasurer's department are given to him, and the others go to the Secretary, who has to send them to the different departments they relate to, either to the tax department, or church works department, or any other of the several departments. I believe that there is no officer who has more multifarious duties to perform than the Secretary.

47. The Chairman.—In the absence of the Secretary, who would open the letters with the Treasurer?—His first clerk.

48. What security does the Secretary give?—None; nor do the Commissioners give any. The Secretary cannot receive money, and the Treasurer's duty is to see that none of the money gets into the hands of the Secretary.

49. Has the Secretary sole control of the clerks?—Under the Commissioners he has.

50. Do you give it over to the Secretary to apportion to the clerks the different business to be transacted, as he thinks right?—No, the Commissioners perform that duty themselves. No clerk can be transferred, even for a temporary purpose, from one office to another, without special directions, or at least without the sanction of the Commissioners; but it is the Secretary's duty to represent to the Commissioners what he considers necessary and desirable.

51. I presume that when you say the Commissioners you mean the paid Commissioners?—I mean the paid Commissioners. The Board seldom interfere with anything about the clerks, except in their appointment, or dismissal.

52. Then the distribution of office business is ordered by the Commissioners themselves?—Yes, certainly.

53. Could you enumerate all the departments in the office?—Yes. The first is the "Agency Department," the duty of which is to collect the revenues. Its duty is to ascertain the state of the accounts, and the sums payable to the Board. The whole of the revenues, except a sum of about £7,000 per annum is collected by that department. The second is "The Tax Department," which includes the valuation of livings, the management of the correspondence relating to augmentations, and a great number of minor matters. The third department is an important one, namely, "The Renewal of Leases Department." It also manages all the business and correspondence relating to perpetuities. The fourth is a very heavy one, "The Church Works Department," including all the building, enlargements, and repairs. The fifth is "The Architect's Department," and its duties are very extensive and onerous. The sixth is "The Church Requisites Department." The seventh is "The Treasurer's Department;" and the eighth, although a minor, is an important one, "The Audit of Accounts Department," which in this office is a very laborious and onerous class of work. The audit is finally performed by one of the Ecclesiastical paid Commissioners, who take it year about to audit the whole of the accounts of the establishment; they have the assistance of the audit clerk, whose duties are to check every payment by a voucher, to examine all the vouchers, and keep them together, bound up in monthly volumes, and to calculate, under an authority given to him by the general Board, the poor rates, and income tax, county cess, &c., which never could be done by the paid Commissioners.

54. Colonel Adair.—Then, in fact, the audit is continuous, and not annual?—It is, in fact, continuous, and gives full occupation to a very experienced clerk, who examines every voucher, and who has never yet failed to produce any voucher called for by the Commissioners. At times he is so pressed that he is obliged to get temporary assistance from the other offices.

55. In the renewal of leases department, is the solicitor of the Board under the general direction of the Secretary?—No; he is entirely under the direction of the Commissioners. The Secretary communicates the orders of the Commissioners to the solicitor, who does not attend daily in the house, just as he communicates their orders to anybody else. He receives the reports for the Commissioners and minutes them on the back, and sends them to the Commissioners. I should state that one of the duties of the Secretary is to minute every letter sent in to the Commissioners, and see, as far as he can, that it is sent in with the previous correspondence tied up with it, so that no unnecessary time may be lost, and the Commissioners may be enabled to make an order upon it. The Secretary is of very great use to the Commissioners in that way, and we hold him responsible for laying all matters before us in the most regular way. For instance, there may have been a correspondence about a certain church going on for several months, and that correspondence may contain twenty or thirty letters. The object of the last letter may have been to bring the matter to one single point, and it would be his duty to bring the documents before us so as to show that to be the case.

56. Lord De Vesci.—He makes a minute, in fact, after looking over the whole correspondence?—Yes.

57. The Chairman.—You have handed us in a paper containing the names and salaries of each of the clerks in the office. It appears that there are twenty-one permanent clerks, and four supernumeraries—may I ask is there any competitive examination for these clerkships?—There is.

58. Do the clerks rise gradually in the office?—Generally so. It is not compulsory on the Board to promote each as a vacancy occurs in the exact order they stand in in the office. Sometimes we know that a particular clerk is not suited for an office which may be vacant; but, generally speaking, we allow them to be promoted, according to length of service, at least so far as salary is concerned; but we do not usually promote a clerk from one department to another, as that might injure the general working of the establishment. If a clerk is peculiarly suited to one particular department, we generally keep him there, though his salary may increase.

59. Amongst those clerks who are supposed to be the senior clerks, or heads of departments?—The first clerk in the Secretary's office, and the head of the tax department, is Mr. Armstrong, who always supplies the place of the Secretary in his absence from illness, or leave of absence. Then Mr. Higginbotham fills a double office, he is head of the agency and also of the bookkeeping departments, which are held in the same room.

60. These two gentlemen are supposed to be the senior clerks?—They are, and they are the highest paid.

61. One of these is, as I understand you, the head of the bookkeeping and agency departments, and the other is the first clerk in the Secretary's office?—Yes, and also the head of the tax department.

62. I observe a great difference in the payments made to these twenty-one permanent clerks, what is the principle of graduation in their payment?—There have been two occasions since I became one of the paid Commissioners, nine years ago, upon which the clerks expressed themselves dissatisfied with the amount of remuneration they received as compared with the amount of their duties, and with the sanction of the Lord Lieutenant their salaries were raised by the Board. The first rise was given in the form of long service pay, and was made in this way: every clerk that has been over seven years in the office is now entitled to an increase of pay every two years, up to a certain period. I think it is an increase of £5 a year every two years, in addition to the fixed salary that he otherwise would have had. The first clerk was considered entitled to a rise of £10, instead of £5 biennially; and on this occasion it was resolved that this rise should be retrospective, so as to allow those who had been here twenty and thirty years the full benefit of it, by which several of them got £40 a year increase at once. Mr. Armstrong's salary was then raised, I think, from £220 to £300 a year. That explanation will account for a great deal of the apparent discrepancy between the payment of the upper and lower clerks. Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Higginbotham, I believe, have both been here since the commencement of the establishment, in 1834; some other clerks were here also very long, while some had not even completed the seven years which would entitle them to increased payment for long service. The second occasion upon which the Lord Lieutenant allowed us to raise the salaries of the clerks was some years afterwards, and was owing to the increased work, and also to the greatly increased price of all the necessaries of life. I can furnish you with the additions made to the clerks' salaries on that occasion, and which were all made with His Excellency's permission.

Arthur E. Gayer, esq., Q.C., LL.D.

63. In what years did those augmentations take place which you made in the salaries of your clerks, with the approbation and consent of the Lord Lieutenant?—They were made in February, 1860, and February, 1867.

64. Under this system of increase of salary, what is the maximum at which the augmentation ceases?—I think after twenty-one years service. They are now allowed an increase of £5 a year after seven years service; £10 a year after nine years; and £15 after eleven years; and so on until it comes to twenty-one years, and then it ceases. No clerk whose augmentation money is only £5 a year, can get more than £40 increase; but the first clerk gets £80 a year over and above his original salary after twenty-one years' service.

65. What is the necessity of having four supernumerary clerks?—The actual pressure of business. We could never be able to get through the work well with a fewer number of clerks than we have. We have often been pressed to increase their number, but we declined to do so. We have found it convenient to have all the clerks enter the establishment as supernumeraries. It enables us to exercise a veto against placing them on the permanent establishment if found unqualified, or unsuited in other respects.

66. Can you state the dates of the appointments of the present supernumerary clerks?—Mr. Robert Knox was appointed on the 16th of October, 1866; Mr. Wm. J. Shaw, on the 23rd of March, 1867; Mr. G. W. Bradshaw, on the 11th of October, 1867; and Mr. John H. Crampton, on the 27th of February, 1868.

67. What are the office hours of the clerks?—From ten, A.M., until four, P.M. I should state that the attendance book is not closed practically until about a quarter past ten. Sometimes the clerks are not quite punctual, but the express orders of the Commissioners are that the attendance book, in which each of these gentlemen must write their names daily when they come in, must be taken away at twenty minutes after ten, and if they are not come then they cannot insert their names in it, for it must be brought to the Secretary. No gentleman's name could be written in it after 10.20. Many, indeed most of them, I believe, come punctually to the moment at ten, but, I must say, that they go away with equal punctuality. We have, I should state, a power to keep them at work at extra hours. I am generally here, and so is Mr. Quin often, for an hour after the office door closes, and we frequently require different clerks to remain after four o'clock, to assist us.

68. What allowance is given to the clerks for extra work?—We do not give any allowance for extra work, unless it is work not in the ordinary performance of their duties. If it arises from mere pressure of business in the department, we give no extra pay for such work, even if they have to remain up to six o'clock. I recollect a case where a clerk was kept in the Treasurer's office up to six o'clock daily for a length of time, and was not entitled to any extra payment; but he was, under the very peculiar circumstances, allowed a sum of £20, by a vote of the annual or special Board as an acknowledgment for the discharge of those extra duties. If a clerk is kept in the office after-hours to make returns to parliament, or for Royal Commissioners, such as the present Commission, they are paid half salary for two hours a-day extra attendance.

69. From the tenor of one of the answers you gave to me I am induced to believe that these four supernumerary clerks are in fact permanent clerks?— I do not think we have ever had less than four supernumerary clerks since I was a Commissioner.

70. I wish to know whether the Commissioners promote their clerks by seniority or by selection?—By seniority ordinarily, but with a reserved power to promote from merit when we consider that the efficiency of the establishment requires it. It is a power very seldom exercised, and the clerks would consider themselves badly treated if they did not under ordinary circumstances get their promotion in due course.

71. I suppose that the Commissioners take the opinion of the Secretary on the subject?—Certainly; but they can judge from their own personal observation. We are in constant communication with most of the clerks, and are well able to form an opinion of the habits and intelligence of all the gentlemen in the office. Some of the clerks are very superior to others; and if a first clerk's office became vacant we would not consider ourselves bound to appoint the next clerk in seniority, if we honestly considered that for the good of the establishment we could appoint a better man to the place. We would select the best man, although he might not be the senior clerk.

72. In the paper you sent in to us you stated that, subject to competitive examination, the subordinate officers are appointed by the Board—which are the subordinate officers?—We never, of course, intended to convey that the Treasurer or Secretary were subject to competitive examination. The Secretary is a barrister, and we could not subject him to a competitive examination; nor could the Treasurer be subjected to such an examination; but every other officer in the establishment is subject to it. All our officers enter the establishment as supernumeraries, except in the Architects' department, which requires peculiar skill in another way. All the clerks appointed within my time have been subjected to a competitive examination.

73. Who are the examining body?—The examiner is usually the first clerk, or any other of the most experienced clerks that the Board may think fit to appoint for the purpose. For instance, on a late occasion, the gentleman next in rank to Mr. Higginbotham, Mr. Fetherston, was appointed to examine the candidates because a nephew of Mr. Armstrong was one of the candidates, and he naturally objected to conduct the examination. The duties of the clerks here are of such a character that we limit the examination to handwriting, which is indispensable; a fair knowledge of arithmetic, which is also indispensable; and to writing from dictation to test their spelling, in which most of the candidates fail more than in anything else. If a letter was brought up to the Secretary badly spelt, it should, of course, be written over again; and, therefore, we consider that writing, arithmetic, and spelling are the most important matters to examine them in.

74. Do you test them in composition?—We do not.

75. Then, if I understand you rightly, the entire of the examination is to ascertain if they write a good hand, spell correctly, and know arithmetic up to a certain point?—Yes, arithmetic up to decimals.

76. They are never examined by persons appointed for that purpose by the Civil Service Commissioners?—No. We never considered ourselves a Government department. The only connexion we have with Government is, that one of the paid Commissioners is appointed by the Crown, and we are bound to furnish a yearly report and yearly accounts to Government. I may also say, that although a competitive examination takes place, it is still the Commissioners who select the successful candidate upon the report of the first clerk. He reports the number of questions that have been answered in arithmetic correctly, and how many incorrectly, and how many not answered at all; secondly—how many words are correctly and incorrectly spelt; and in writing, how many words are left out, or how many other mistakes are made. These papers are all sent up to the Commissioners by the first clerk, and the time occupied by each candidate in answering the questions is also furnished to the Commissioners. I believe that we have selected the best clerks we could find out of the numerous candidates who appeared on each vacancy.

77. Lord De Vesci.—The appointment of all the clerks is vested in the whole Board?—In the whole Board, or any number of them who attend upon the day of appointment.

78. Then, notwithstanding that the paid Commissioners may recommend the Board to appoint a particular candidate after having received a report of his fitness from the Secretary or chief clerk, the full Board have the power of appointing any other person in contravention of the recommendation or report of the paid Commissioners?—They have; but the paid Commissioners' recommendation is usually adopted by the Board. There have been cases in which the paid Commissioners felt that two of the candidates were so equally qualified that they threw it on the full Board to make the selection. Upon a late occasion there were twelve candidates for one vacancy. At first six were selected out of the twelve, and of these six, two were so close, that we had to subject them to a second examination together; and, even then, they were still so equal, that Mr. Quin and I urgently requested the unpaid Commissioners to decide the question for us, for we felt it most difficult to do so ourselves. The Board have the power to take it out of the hands of the paid Commissioners if they think fit.

79. The Chairman.—You have handed in a paper containing the names and salaries of the clerks in the agency and book-keeping department, as well as the names and per-centage allowed to local agents employed throughout the country in the collection of rents, &c. Would you tell us why, with regard to the local agents, such a great discrepancy exists in the per-centage paid to some of them?—Some of them have the collection of a very large number of small sums, and we have always made the best bargain we could with these local agents, and paid them no more than they were willing to work for. Some of them have very much more difficult duties to perform than others, from the number of parties they have to collect from and the number of small sums to be received, and, therefore, they must get a higher per-centage.

80. The minimum rate is, I observe, five per cent., and it rises in a great number of instances to so high as ten per cent.?—I believe so; but some of these cases of high per-centage are for rentcharges, and small matters of that kind.

81. Have you ever heard of local agents receiving ten per cent. for collecting rents?—That per-centage is, I believe, applicable principally to rentcharges. I do not believe that we pay more than five per cent. for the collection of rents, unless where very small.

82. Amongst your clerks there is a gentleman who is called "the travelling assistant agent," Mr. Fetherston. He goes out periodically, and collects a number of rentcharges and rents. How comes it that in addition to him you employ a house of business in Dublin to collect rentcharges, and rents also—why could he not undertake that duty?—I am not aware why he could not, just at present. What is the case you particularly allude to?

83. I allude to this, that Messrs. Guinness and Mahon, for instance, collect money from the Prebend of Kilmeen and others. These moneys are collected by that agency firm, while your own travelling agent collects in distant parts of the country; can you explain why that is so?—Before the appointment of Mr. Fetherston as travelling agent at all, Messrs. Guinness and Mahon were collecting rents for us as our agents in the west of Ireland, and were selected, not because they lived in Dublin, but because they had local agents in the neighbourhood of our property in the West, and we found that they had peculiar facilities for obtaining payment of those particular rents. When Mr. Fetherston was appointed travelling agent, it was not thought expedient to take away that particular collection from Messrs. Guinness and Mahon, who had so efficiently performed their duty as agents; we also saved in travelling expenses by their appointment. Every time we send Mr. Fetherston to the country to receive rents, we have, of course, to pay his reasonable travelling expenses in addition to his salary. With respect to expenses, and per-centage, I believe that we have kept no local agents, except where we found that the agency department here in Dublin could not do the work so well. A very large saving took place upon the establishment of the agency department of our office. Previous to that we had local agents in every part of the country, to whom we paid five per cent. on our income for its collection, while the whole expenses of the agency department do not now amount to more than one and a half per cent. upon the greatest part of our income. Upon £95,000 a year of income, it does not cost us on an average more than one and a half per cent. for collection. It is only where we find the necessity of employing local agents, that we do so, and as I said before, most of the sums they collect, are very small sums, and the per-centage on small sums must be high. We do not send Mr. Fetherston to collect rents, except in places where we find it necessary to send a gentleman of superior intelligence, to work up matters that have been in arrear, such as the quarta pars of Clonfert, &c.

84. You did not get the full amount of money due to you before Mr. Fetherston engaged in the collection?—No.

85. Colonel Adair.—As regards the quarta pars you referred to, has it become the property of the Commissioners by statute or by succession to a vacant see?—I believe it was by succession to a vacant see.

86. Then it was not a reserve fund, as in the cases of Primate Robinson's and Primate Boulter's funds?—No.

87. The Chairman.—In appointing these local agents, do you make bargains with them as to the rate for which they will collect the money?—Within my own experience we have, I think, rather applied ourselves to get the best local agents we could than to screw them down to the lowest possible per-centage. I believe that we are giving the same per-centage now that we gave to our previous agents. Few of the agents were appointed in my time, and I am not sure if any efforts have ever been made to induce them to take a less per-centage than was previously given.

88. Have the Board ever considered what ought to be the per-centage at which rentcharges and rents should be collected?—Not in my time. I don't think any appointment of local agent has ever been made except by the general Board.

89. Has the matter ever been brought before a general Board, to ascertain the charge per cent. that should be paid for the collection of rents and rentcharges?—I have every reason to believe that the rate of payment to local agents in each individual case was settled by the Board, as contra-distinguished from the paid Commissioners, but without referring to the appointments of each of those local agents, and the Board minutes appointing them, I am not in a position safely to say that the subject of the rate of payment was considered by any particular Board. I have reason to believe that nothing was done by the paid Commissioners alone in any of those cases.

90. I asked my previous question with the view of ascertaining whether the Board have taken into their consideration that the collection of rents and rentcharges are made at a much lower rate than they pay by private individuals?—I have no recollection of any discussion at the Board on the subject; but my experience only extends to a period of nine years, and I believe that very few of these local agents have been appointed within my time.

91. Lord De Vesci.—You stated that the average per-centage for the collection of your income was one and a half per cent.; that is in the agency office as distinguished from the collection of rents by local agents?—Yes; but I believe I also stated the relative proportion of rent, &c., collected by each class of agency. £95,000 a year of our income is collected in our agency office, and but about £7,000 a year by the local agents.

April 24, 1868.

Arthur E. Gayer, esq., Q.C., LL.D.

Colonel Adair.—There is a larger sum than that collected by the local agents. It is, I think, £7,967 3*s*. 5*d*. a year.

92. Lord De Vesci.—Is the annual charge on the see of Derry paid in the agency office?—It is.

93. And on the see of Armagh?—Yes, my lord.

94. Is any per-centage paid on these sums?—I believe that the one and a half per cent. agency fees includes the whole collection, including these particular cases.

95. Is the ad valorem tax on benefices, &c., paid into the agency office?—Yes.

96. I find that these sums amount to £21,000 a year of the £95,000 income you speak of, and I may say that there is no expense or trouble in the collection of these sums. That being so, on what sum can you calculate the per-centage of one and a half per cent.?—I am afraid that I have not conveyed the actual state of facts. I never meant to say that anybody was paid one and a half per cent. for collection, but that the whole expense of the agency office, the payment of clerks, &c., which, if it were transacted by Messrs. Guinness and Mahon, or Stewart and Kincaid, would cost five per cent., did not amount to more than one and a half per cent. These clerks are, of course, not paid by a per-centage. I only speak of this in order to show the value of having an agency department.

97. Do you include Mr. Fetherston in the agency department?—Yes.

98. The Chairman.—In estimating this sum of one and a half per cent. for the collection of what is due to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, what expenses do you include?—I am not sure whether anything further than the salaries of the officers in that department was included. Of course the rent of this house, or of that room in this house, should be included, and the stationery account for that room, and the postage account for that room. I have not before me the paper containing Mr. Quin's evidence on a former examination on the subject, and I am not aware if these items were all taken into consideration in estimating the amount of the charge for collection at one and a half per cent. It was only a rough way of calculating the expense of collecting the rents by letter through the agency department instead of by local agents. I am not quite sure if these minor matters are included. I am pretty sure, at all events, that house-rent was not put in the calculation, and I don't think that stationery and postage were included either.

99. The heading of this paper you have handed in states it to be "the agency and book-keeping department." May I ask what amount of that sum does the book-keeping embrace?—I believe it takes a very considerable amount of the time and labour of the clerks in that department. I have already stated that Mr. Higginbotham is the head of the agency and book-keeping department, and he has in the room under him six or seven clerks; but how many of them are actually engaged in agency business, and how many of them in book-keeping, I am not prepared at present to say; however, that can be ascertained accurately if you consider it of importance. He has the general superintendence of both branches of that department.

100. Would you be kind enough to name any clerk in the establishment who could satisfactorily furnish us with that information?—I would name Mr. Fetherston, who is a most intelligent gentleman, and who is competent to give you any information you require.

101. Do the Commissioners take security from the local agents on their appointment?—I think I may say yes; in my experience no local agent has been appointed without giving security.

102. Colonel Adair.—In cases where your travelling agent is not able to visit the local agencies, what means have the Commissioners of overhauling the accounts of the local agents?—First, we have the rent-rolls of what ought to be collected; then we have their accounts showing what is actually collected, and we then have their expenses and charges, and we are pretty well able to see if it is all fair; we are also in a position to see if the poor rates and income tax are properly calculated. Then we have our bank books to see that all the sums are duly lodged and credited. If the arrears are unreasonably large we call the agent to account, to know why there are so much arrears; these are the only checks that we have; we have no means of personally knowing whether they have returned the arrears truly.

103. What are the class of agents you employ generally?—They are of different classes—some of them are professional men, and some of them are, by profession, land agents; some of them are local gentlemen, acting as land agents. I am personally acquainted with very few of them; most of them were appointed before my time, and have been satisfactorily performing their duties; we have every reason to believe that they perform their duties regularly. If they did not do so, we would have complaints from the parties who paid them money.

104. Lord De Vesci.—I find that the per-centage paid to these local agents varies from five to ten per cent. Could not that agency business be conducted at a cheaper rate by one of the great agency houses in Dublin?—I am not able to answer that question without applying to those agency houses, who, I presume, would not undertake the duty but at a remunerating price.

105. Have the general Board ever applied to these agency houses to know if they would collect the income of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners?—I am not aware that they have.

106. Has it ever been mooted at the Board as to the expediency of establishing such a mode of collection?—Not in my time, and I believe that very little benefit could be effected by altering the present system; and it is, I consider, bad policy to make a change in your agency arrangements if you can avoid it.

107. The Chairman.—Have the number of local agents been increased of latter years?—I think not; I should say that they have been, on the contrary, rather diminished.

108. If local agency be essential in remote districts, could not the local agents make their payments themselves into the Bank of Ireland, subject to the supervision of the travelling agent?—Any duty we impose on the travelling agent he should, of course, perform; but he is also largely employed here as a general clerk in the agency department. He is not merely our travelling agent, and he is such an efficient officer that we are rather reluctant to send him away. We frequently make use of him in this way: if a small property falls out of lease, and it is not considered worth while to send a professional sworn valuator down to make a valuation of it, we send down Mr. Fetherston to ascertain what he thinks would be a fair rent to put upon it, and also to inquire into the solvency of the parties tendering for it. Again, if an abatement of rent is asked for upon any special grounds, or allowances asked for improvements, we frequently send Mr. Fetherston down to report to us as to what it would be expedient for the Board to do under all the circumstances. He is more used by us in that way than in the actual collection of rents.

109. Colonel Adair.—Then, it would appear that the travelling agent reports to the Board upon any new agreement that may be proposed between the Board and its tenants?—Whenever necessary; but if we have a trustworthy local agent in the locality we refer to him.

110. Are all the subsequent payments of rent made founded upon his opinion or report?—Generally. The payments are afterwards made to the local agents, or in this office. Wherever we have a local agent we take his opinion, and he would consider it derogatory to his position if we were to send down our travelling agent to control him. We have every confidence in our local agents, and I do not think we ever sent down our travelling agent to control our local agents.

111. Are we to understand that the report of the local agents on new matters arising between the Board and their tenants is, without reference to any party, accredited by the Board?—We consider them all accredited to the Board. They are all respectable agents, and quite as trustworthy as Mr. Fetherston, or any other gentleman in our employment. We never had any reason to question their integrity.

112. What means has the Board of protecting itself against errors of judgment independent altogether of the question of integrity?—In a large transaction we never trust to the local agent alone, but we refer the matter to Messrs. Brassington and Geale, the well-known valuators, or some such firm, to make a full examination of the value of the property. It is only in cases of a very small class that we refer the matter to Mr. Fetherston, or our local agents. We have some very small properties.

113. Lord De Vesci.—You stated that the cause of the large per-centage being given in some cases to your local agents was in consequence of their being engaged in the collection of rentcharge. I observe in a paper furnished to us by your Board you state that Mr. Fetherston's duty is to take the necessary steps for the apportionment of rentcharge out of the local estates. Is it to be understood now that the chief duty of the collection falls upon Mr. Fetherston, the paid officer of the Board?—I rather think that the amount to be paid by each landlord is ascertained by an officer of the Board. It is merely the collection that is placed in the hands of the local agents in some cases.

114. Do I understand from you that it is merely the collection of the rentcharge that is the difficulty?—I believe so.

115. Does that sum of ten per cent. allowed to local agents for the collection of rentcharges include the duty of taking legal proceedings for their recovery and attending at the quarter sessions, if necessary?—The local agents would not pay the expenses incurred at the quarter sessions, of course; but they would not get more than their agency fees in any case.

116. I see that the duty of appearing in court at the quarter sessions falls frequently on Mr. Fetherston, and not on the local agents?—I do not know whether that observation refers to his own collection or not, but I should think it does.

117. In cases of ejectment Mr. Fetherston must, of course, inform himself of all particulars of such cases in order to render the proceedings effectual, and must afterwards attend and take possession, and report the condition of the premises to the Board?—Yes.

118. Then that duty is taken out of the hands of the local agents?—Yes; but that only applies to a holding of some kind. A very large proportion of our rents the local agents have nothing whatever to do with.

119. But this matter does not refer to local agents?—I am not very familiar with that particular subject, and Mr. Fetherston would be much better able to tell you what you may desire to know regarding it.

120. The Chairman.—In a paper which you have handed in relating to the agency department, you have stated that the expense of agency and book-keeping is £1,195 a year, and the expense of your local agencies £501 a year, making in all a sum of £1,696 per annum as the entire expenses of collection and book-keeping. May I ask, does that amount include the whole expense of collecting all the sums received in the agency office as well as the sums received by the local agents?—Yes; the whole expenses, unless you go into the minor questions of postage, and stationery, &c.

121. Lord De Vesci.—I find upon the evidence given by Mr. Quin, your brother Commissioner, before the Ministers' Money Committee in the year 1848, that he states that the per-centage paid to local agents was five per cent., and in the return handed in to us by the Board the per-centage in many instances, stated to be paid to local agents, is ten per cent.—can you state the cause of that increase?—I believe that a considerable number of these small properties have come into the possession of the Board since the year 1848 when Mr. Quin gave that evidence. I am not, without searching through the books, able to state the dates at which the per-centage of ten per cent. was fixed; but I will be able to furnish the information, if desired. I believe the real reason was, that those properties were very small and troublesome to deal with, and that most of them came into the hands of the Board since 1848.

122. Colonel Adair.—With regard to the actual sum mentioned as the cost of collection, it appears that a sum of £501 7*s.* 2*d.* is charged for collecting a sum of £7,967 3*s.* 5*d.*, which gives a gross or average per-centage of about six and a quarter per cent. Does it not appear that for such large transactions that six and a quarter per cent. is much above the rate at which professional agency could be procured?—If I were allowed to produce the local agents' accounts to show the very small sums they often have to receive you would, I think, consider it was not an unreasonable per-centage upon the average of all such collections. Mr. Fetherston could produce some of these local accounts to you, and you could judge for yourselves as to the reasonableness of the per-centage. The vast number of independent sums which have to be collected to make up that amount of £7,967 is a matter of great importance to be taken into calculation in considering the per-centage allowed to local agents. There are payments in sums of a few shillings, or a few pounds, in a great many of the cases, and it takes a large number of them to make up the amount collected, and the difficulty of collection is, of necessity, greater. I would desire that Mr. Fetherston should have an opportunity of putting in some of these local accounts for your inspection. I have now a paper before me which shows that the sum collected in this office amounts to £95,741 a year on an average, plus the renewal fines. If all the renewal fines vested in the Board were renewed annually they would come to about £12,000 a year, so that the sum collected in Dublin, wholly irrespective of local agents, would be somewhere about £107,000 per annum.

123. The Chairman.—In a paper you have handed in, you stated that there were forty-one meetings of the Board between the 10th of April, 1867, and 9th April, 1868, at which the attendance of the several members was as follows:—The Primate, twice; the Archbishop of Dublin, twenty-eight times; the Lord Chancellor, once; the Bishop of Meath, thirty-three times; the Bishop of Ossory, once; the Lord Chief Justice, three times; Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness, once; Arthur E. Gayer, esq., forty times; and William C. Quin, esq., forty-one times. The Board during the above period were summoned forty-six times, and on five occasions, there not being a third Commissioner present, there were not sufficient members to constitute a Board. Now, I wish to know have you stated periods for the meetings of the Board?—Yes. The Board is summoned for every Thursday in the year, with the exception of a month's vacation, which we enjoy from the 20th of August to the 20th of September, during which period there is no meeting of the Board held. There is occasionally also, a single day which may be kept as a holiday, such as Ascension Day for instance. There may be also some occasions on which Thursday falls on other holidays, and then there would be no meeting on that day; but usually every member of the Board is summoned to attend every Thursday at twelve o'clock.

124. Three members of the Board form a quorum?—Yes.

125. The paid Commissioners, it appears by this statement, are not joined often in the performance of their duties, except by the Archbishop of Dublin, and the Bishop of Meath?—Not often. The Lord Chancellor has such onerous duties of another kind to discharge that he cannot, I suppose, attend. The Chief Justice seldom attends either, and he complains of the early hour that we sit, as preventing his attendance. He has often wished us to postpone our meetings until three o'clock, but we could not do so, for we could not get through the work if we did not sit until that hour. Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness used to attend regularly, until he became a member of Parliament. He wished to resign then, but the Board were reluctant to part with so useful a member of their body. Before the deaths of the late Archbishop of Dublin, and Bishop of Meath, who were invalids for a considerable period, Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness attended the Board constantly. He and the present Archbishop of Dublin were afterwards very constant attendants. We usually have four Commissioners attending our weekly Board meetings; His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin, and the Lord Bishop of Meath (who comes up specially almost every week for the purpose), constantly attend.

126. Is the Solicitor of your Board paid by salary or fees?—By salary. He has a salary of £500 a-year, and £300 a-year for office expenses. The 23 and 24 Vic., cap. 150 provided that he should be paid by salary, and that the Lord Lieutenant's consent should also be got in writing, to the amount of his salary. In addition to his salary the only emoluments he can receive is that sum of £300 a-year for office expenses; but that, of course, does not include fees he may receive from our tenants upon the execution of leases.

127. I see by the paper handed in that the disbursements by the Solicitor as fees, have amounted, for the last two years, to a sum of £367?—That is for fees to counsel.

128. There is a note appended to that item which I do not understand. I find that a sum of £278 has been granted to parties in suits for costs given against the Commissioners. What is the explanation of that charge?—It should not have been described as "granted," but as paid. The proper word in that case would have been paid.

129. How does that sum of £278 come under the expenses of the Solicitor?—I cannot say. It ought not be there at all; but I suppose that it was considered correct to state that there were other law expenses to that amount, even although it was not paid to our Solicitor. We were beaten in a case, and unsuccessful litigants are obliged to pay costs. We have very little litigation, and if the question had applied to almost any other two years, I believe that there would have been no such item to insert.

130. Then that sum of £278 ought to go to the account for general expenses?—It ought, most certainly.

131. Does the Solicitor practice his profession otherwise than as your Solicitor?—Yes. He is in extensive practice in his profession.

132. Do you pay any of his clerks?—Not now; we used to do so before he was allowed £300 a-year for office expenses. We paid one clerk for him a salary of £200 a-year, but we do not do so now.

133. What constitutes the most important part of your solicitor's duty?—He has to advise the Board upon every question of title that arises in the office, either in renewal or perpetuity cases, he has to see that the renewals and perpetuities are made to the proper parties. He has to report on the legality of deeds granting sites for churches. He has also to sue for debts due to the Board—for rent, or tax, or any other debt. He has to enforce contracts, and take proceedings against contractors when they fail to perform their contracts. He has to superintend the preparation and execution of all contracts for the building or repairing of churches, and in general, he has to perform all the duties of solicitor to the Board, including what is a serious inroad on his time, namely, a weekly attendance on the Board. He attends from twelve o'clock until four every board day, that he may be personally communicated with by the Board, on any question of law that may arise. He gets no written case from us, and he has to perform every duty connected with the Board, as its solicitor. He has to consult counsel, and draw up cases for counsel, and correspond with the Board when necessary on every question of law which arises, and they are numerous.

134. I see that the entire law expenses of the Board amounts for the last two years to £1,967. I presume that all the law expenses are included in that sum?—I believe so, and that it includes the fees to counsel.

135. Are the renewals of leases prepared by the Board's solicitor?—Yes.

136. Has any rule been made by the Board as to the charge to be made for renewal leases?—I think the solicitor is restricted to a charge of £3 3*s.* in each case, but I can answer that question positively by-and-by.

137. Are perpetuity grants prepared by the tenants' solicitor or the Board's solicitor?—They are prepared by the tenants' solicitor, and a fee of £2 2*s.* is allowed to the Board's Solicitor, for approving of the draft, I think I can state that also with some certainty. I know that the solicitor is restricted by the Board's order not to charge more than a certain fixed sum in such cases.

138. Colonel Adair.—Assuming that renewal fines, if taken regularly, amounted to £12,000 per annum, are you of opinion that the existing regulations cause loss to the estate of the Commissioners?—I think not, I should rather say gain, because in several cases, and as in a large case I can now refer to (Lord Dungannon's), we may get the whole property. There is a gain also in this way. If renewals are regularly made, they are of course made on the customary fine, which may be small with reference to the value of the whole estate; but if irregularity takes place for a certain number of years, which I will explain presently, the party loses the benefit of the customary fine; another renewal takes place on the actual valuation of the improved present value. Under the original statute, no tenant was considered to lose his right to renewal until nine out of the twenty-one years elapsed, but by a more recent statute, the 23rd and 24th Vic., cap. 150, the Commissioners were authorized to fix a time within which each of their tenants should renew, in order to save the customary fine, giving notice to each tenant previously of what that period was. The course taken by the Board under that statute was this. They determed if the holding was considerable, they would require the tenant to renew every three years, and if he does not renew within the three years, or within the six months afterwards given by the statute, he shall lose his right to renew upon the customary fine. In smaller holdings we give them six years, because we consider that it would be rather hard to force a man to renew small leases under such a penalty every three years. If either of these classes do not renew within six months after the period fixed on in the notice, that is in three or six years, as the case may be, there is generally a rise in the amount of the fines; because, then the true value is estimated by a sworn valuator, or in small holdings by our travelling agent, or local agent. We then impose a higher fine on him than he would have had to pay, and that is all clear gain to the Board. I do not think in any case this Board loses by the delay in paying renewal fines, except by the temporary inconvenience of not getting the money at the regular time. It would be better, in my opinion, that the Board should have a fixed income, and that we should have all our property in perpetuity rents, and have nothing to do with renewals.

139. Colonel Adair.—We understand you to say that you consider it preferable that a system of renewal fines should be abolished, and that they should be converted into perpetuities?—That is not quite my meaning; but I should consider it advisable if all the renewal fines were converted into perpetuity leases, because then there would be a fixed income, and we would not be subject to the caprice of the tenants whether we should get the fines or not; sometimes I have known twenty years to elapse before we got the fines. It would certainly be more convenient that we should get them annually than in one bulk sum at the end of several years.

140. Would you consider it advisable that a tenant should be compelled to elect as to whether he would convert his renewal fines into a perpetuity?—Something of that kind was suggested in the inquiries made of the Commissioners, and I do not think that Mr. Quin or I ventured to advise a compulsory purchase. For my own part I do not think it would be any great hardship on a tenant to lose his right to purchase, if he did not purchase within a certain number of years. The purchase-money might be secured on the property at four instead of five per cent. At present we can take a mortgage at five per cent. and are limited to that, but I think that four per cent. would induce more tenants to purchase perpetuities, and it would be a considerable gain to the Board.

141. With reference to the average value of money, you consider that it would be a fair adjustment of that class of cases you speak of?—I think it would.

142. The Chairman.—Are your accounts kept by double entry?—I am not a very good book-keeper myself, and cannot explain exactly whether they are kept by what is technically called double entry. I will, if you desire it, produce our books for your lordships.

143. At the time of the examination before the House of Commons Committee on ministers' money, there appears to have been a gentleman who was book-keeper and also head of the general agency department; does that arrangement continue now?—Yes.

144. Has any professional person, such as a bank manager or a book-keeper of a great commercial establishment, ever been consulted by the Commissioners with a view to diminish the expense of the working of the establishment?—Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness who has been a member of this Board for a good many years, and who is very well acquainted with the mode of keeping books, and managing a very large establishment of clerks, applied his mind very much to the improvement of the book-keeping in this establishment, and assisted the Commissioners in devising a new method of keeping the books, which has been persevered in ever since; I do not know that the new mode of keeping the books was adopted on the grounds of economy referred to in the question put by your lordship. I do not think it was.

145. It had for its object the efficiency of the working of the establishment without any special regard to economy?—I think it had the effect of relieving the establishment of keeping a number of books, which were considered by Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness as useless; also of diminishing the labour of the establishment, and bringing it more within the compass of the existing staff.

146. In diminishing the labour of the clerks in this establishment, did Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness effect any diminution in their numbers?—It probably prevented an increase in their numbers upon the increase of business, but I am not aware that any clerk was dismissed in consequence of his suggestions.

147. Has it enabled you to carry on the business of the office without any additional supernumerary clerks?—It has.

148. How many ledgers are kept?—There are several. There is a See estate ledger; a Suspended benefice ledger, and numerous other ledgers; but several accounts are kept in the same ledger if they do not extend over a large number of items. I am not prepared to state the exact numbers kept, but they can be all produced. Some of them are small, and some of them extremely ponderous.

149. Can you state whether the accounts of each church are kept separately, under a separate head, and are posted up?—They are. There is a ledger in which an account is open for every church that we have ever built, enlarged, or repaired.

150. We wish to have the entire system of book-keeping in the establishment detailed to us, and perhaps we had better examine the chief clerk upon that point?—I think I can explain the whole process to your lordships.

151. Then have the kindness to give us an outline of the system of book-keeping as pursued in your office?—The first book I would refer to is the daily account-book, which was the principal novelty recommended by Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness. It is a book in which a great number of columns are introduced, headed conveniently for each class of receipt and expenditure. It was substituted for a number of journals and day-books which were rendered unnecessary by its introduction. Several matters in this book were previously kept in separate books. This book is kept in duplicate, one book is used on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays; and the other on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays. The object of that arrangement is that on the alternate days the books may be used in the book-keeper's department and posted in the ledger without interfering with the daily performance of duty. It struck us that that was an extremely ingenious and simple contrivance. There then is a monthly resumé of every day's work in the month, which I can also produce. In it you will see what is the total amount under each head for the whole of that month. Then there is a general account-book, which is settled once a month, and with which we square our account with the Bank of Ireland, on the last day of each month. From that account-book the annual account is taken and audited. (A day-book; a monthly-book; and an annual account-book were here produced by the witness for the inspection of the Commissioners.)

152. Can you give the Commissioners an account of the average receipts and the average expenditure of your office for one year?—I hold a document in my hand containing the receipts and proximate expenditure for one year. (The document referred to was then produced.)

153. Lord De Vesci.—Mr. Quin, in his evidence before the Committee of the House of Commons on Ministers' Money in 1848, stated, that the local agents of the Board were paid five per cent. for collection. It appears by the paper which we have here now that they receive ten per cent. in some cases. What is the cause of that increase?—I stated that a good many of these small properties came into our hand since Mr. Quin gave that evidence, and that the Board's order could be produced for every change which was made in the payment to local agents. It appears by a paper in my hand, that on the 30th of November, 1848, several of these small properties had come in to us; and we then applied, by letter, to Messrs. Guinness and Mahon, the extensive land agents, to know on what terms they would undertake the collection of the money, and I think their letter in reply, which is short, will be the most satisfactory answer to your question. They state, in substance, that they would be happy to undertake the collection of certain property of ours, as specified, in Galway, Roscommon, and Tipperary, amounting to about £450 a year, and that their charge for collection generally would be five per cent., unless where the sums were very small, in which cases their charge would be ten per cent., and that they would include those payers amongst the latter class. The Board had this document before them, and it was ordered that, having regard to the present circumstances of the country, ten per cent. should be allowed for the collection of those particular rents.

154. That only applies to Messrs. Guinness and Mahon, and that particular case. What explanation is there as to the other cases?—I do not know exactly the particulars of every case, but I can have them all investigated if the Commissioners require it. Whether we ought to have asked Messrs. Guinness and Mahon to have reduced their rate of remuneration in more prosperous times, is another matter; but, I know it was not done.

155. Will you produce to us to-morrow the Board's order for the payment to the different local agents for sums above five per cent. for the collection of their different rents?—I will have them searched for, and I have no doubt I shall be able to produce them.

156. Can you give us an account of the expenses of this establishment, so far as the general house expenses go, to-morrow?—I will try to do so.

157. Can you also furnish us with an estimate of the expenditure for repairing churches for the last ten years prior to August, 1867?—I think we could with great facility. (App. A.)

158. Could you also give us a statement of the expenses of building new churches for the same period?—Yes; but I would wish to know does the return you require include rebuilding churches, or merely the building of churches where there were none before. It would make a great deal of difference, for frequently churches are worn out, and it is impossible to repair them any longer, and then we must rebuild. (App. A.)

159. What we wish to have is a statement of the

April 24, 1868.

Arthur E. Gayer, esq., Q.C., LL.D.

sums expended in the building, repairing, and enlarging churches for the last ten years, ending the 1st of August, 1867, under different heads?—Yes, my lord, I can furnish it. (App. A.)

160. Colonel Adair.—With reference to the synopsis of the annual amounts, it appears that there are special items of receipt and expenditure, as, for instance, in the case of glebe house mortgage loans, &c. Is it the case that a portion of the revenue of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners is set specially apart for particular purposes, or are the funds taken from a general corpus fund?—We make such loans out of the principal of the perpetuity fund; we have the corpus of the perpetuity fund kept separate from the income of that fund; we have dealt with the income as part of our yearly income, but the corpus of the fund we considered as capital, and not to be spent; and every sum of money which is lent on mortgage loans is, therefore, taken out of the corpus of the perpetuity fund. Every sum of that character, repaid in to us, is replaced in the corpus of the fund, but the interest upon it is applied as the dividends on the unlent portion of the fund as part of our ordinary income. We spend the dividends and interest, or income, but not the principal. The sums lent on mortgage are much larger than the sums repaid from time to time, because we only get it back in "thirtieths." We have lent out about £48,000. All the interest goes into our ordinary funds, as the dividends on stock, and is treated as income.

161. Please detail for me the composition of the perpetuity fund, what source it is derived from?—Entirely from the sale of perpetuities, we have power under certain statutes to convert renewal leases into perpetuities. This proceeding requires that there shall be calculations made of the purchase money, and I believe that we have sent in to your Secretary, specimens of the mode of calculating this perpetuity purchase money. The perpetuity fund arises out of the conversion of renewable leases into perpetuity leases. It was originally about two and a half per cent. on the value of the tenants' interest in the land; latterly it was more. You will find amongst your papers, some carefully copied specimens of the mode of calculation adopted.

162. Then I would ask, is the perpetuity fund applicable to any other purpose than to the granting of glebe-house mortgage loans?—None, except to produce income for the Board for its general purposes, and that has been done by investing it in three per cent. consols. We are bound as I said, by statute, to invest in the Government funds, and we have kept that particular fund in consols, to distinguish it from the three per cents. belonging to the general fund.

163. Lord De Vesci.—In the conversion of a renewable lease into a perpetuity, instead of the payment of periodical fines, and annual rent reserved under the renewable leases, you only receive the annual rent agreed on, and the interest of the money invested in consols?—Yes, my lord.

164. Have you found that there has been any diminution of income in consequence of that mode of proceeding?—No; but on the contrary, an increase; in fact every sale of a perpetuity is a benefit to us. We are entitled to sell not only the perpetuity of the lands vested in us belonging to the suppressed bishoprics, but we can do it as to all Church lands. We could do it in the case of the property of the Archbishop of Dublin as well as of any other Church property.

165. The Chairman.—Does the perpetuity fund represent the amount of all the sales of perpetuities that have taken place since the commencement of proceedings under it?—I am glad your lordship has asked that question as I believe some misconception exists on the subject. This Board at its commencement had no property whatever, but only a prospective property to arise on the deaths of certain parties. When the vestry-cess was abolished, there was no fund to keep churches in repair, much less for building or rebuilding them, there was no means of assessing parishes for the payment of sextons' salaries, church requisites, &c.; and yet this Board was called on to provide for all these expenses; and it could only do so by first borrowing £100,000 from Government at four per cent., which was not repaid for some years. We found a large arrear of vestry-cess due, which was abolished; and we had a very large expenditure to make to keep churches from falling down; and the only fund outside that £100,000 available for such purposes was that arising from the sale of perpetuities; and up to the year 1844 that was the principal source of annual outlay. But for it the Board could not have gone on at all. Several bishops' properties became vested in this Board by their deaths; and about the year 1844, the Government, through Lord Heytesbury, who was then Lord Lieutenant, applied to this Board to know if the time had not come when the Board should restrict themselves to their income. The Board assured His Excellency that they had taken the matter into their grave consideration, and that, as soon as possible, they were anxious to limit themselves to their income; but that, at that moment, they feared it was utterly impossible to make the income and expenditure square without dipping further into the perpetuity fund. Soon after, however, they voluntarily restricted their expenditure to income solely, and from that time to the present, they have invested as capital all sums paid in under the head of perpetuities. It has been kept separate from all the other accounts; we have since that time only expended the interest and dividends on the perpetuity funds and mortgages.

166. You acted, I presume, under the advice of counsel with regard to spending the perpetuity funds originally?—I am not sure, for that occurred before I was a Commissioner. I believe it was a matter of absolute necessity, and if so, there was no use in consulting counsel upon the subject. The Board were called on to perform very costly functions, and they had no other income to pay them out of.

167. It was, I believe under the advice of counsel that you stopped using the perpetuity money for the payment of your annual expenses?—I am not aware that we consulted counsel on the point, for the Board seem always to have been most anxious to do so the moment they could square their income with the expenditure.

168. Lord De Vesci.—You have stated that the only use you made of the perpetuity fund was lending money upon mortgages?—Yes, mortgages for glebe houses.

169. And that for the repayment of that money you lent, you charged four per cent. interest, and that the principal was to be repaid in "thirtieths"?—Yes.

170. And that you put back into the perpetuity fund what you received on foot of these mortgages?—What we received for principal, but not for interest.

171. Do you put by the whole money you annually receive under this head, or only the "thirtieth"?—We only put by the instalments, i.e. the "thirtieth."

172. The four per cent. goes to annual income?—Yes, but it is of course reduced every year; we only charge four per cent. on the balance actually due, and not on the original sum.

173. Colonel Adair.—Amongst the items of expenditure for last year, I observe an item under the head of suspended benefices of £1,685. Under what regulation is that payment made, and is there any maximum and minimum of payment?—We are obliged to provide, under statute, for the occasional duties of suspended parishes. In some cases of suspended parishes, terms were imposed on us to pay so much to curates. There is no maximum or minimum that I know of. It is discretionary with the Board what they will give the curates of the suspended benefices, sometimes it is as low as £5 a year, and sometimes as high as £75 a year. If there is a licensed place of worship we sometimes give £75 a year, and in other cases £5, £10, £15, or £20 a year according to the duties. We generally take the bishop of the diocese into consultation as to what would be a reasonable amount, having regard to the distance that the clergyman lives from these dispersed Protestants. Sometimes he gives a cottage lecture in the week also, and then the clergyman would be considered entitled to a larger sum. Again, sometimes he has long distances to travel, and must keep a horse, and should be paid accordingly; however, I know that in some cases such curates only get £5 a year.

174. In proceedings for the employment of these gentlemen, and in arranging their remuneration, the authority of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners is, I believe, conclusive, although reference is frequently made to the ordinary?—There is no control over our power. The clause of the statute under which we act is the 116 section of the 3 & 4 Wm. IV., cap. 37, which gives the Commissioners the power of suspending the appointment of a clerk in any parish where divine worship had not been celebrated for a period of three years. We have no control over the appointment of a curate; our control is only over the sum that is to be paid to him.

175. Lord De Vesci.—In answer to a question, you stated that the interest you received on those mortgages reduced only the balances and not the principal sum. Are these balances calculated annually, or at longer dates?—Annually, and I may also add, that to save the clergy in a small way, where a considerable sum of money is advanced, we make these payments by instalments; if required by the bishop, we advance £50 or £100 at a time, and only charge interest on the actual advance, although doing so involves us in very troublesome calculations. We consider it but just to the clergy, and also a safeguard to the public, to prevent money being misapplied, and in order to insure its being properly expended. Another part of the mode of proceeding is, that the diocesan Architect certifies to the bishop that work has been done to the amount of £100 or £200, and recommends that the clergyman should be paid that sum. The bishop then writes to us to request we will pay that £100 or £200 as the case may be. We then order the money to be paid, and only charge interest on it from the day it is advanced.

176. The Chairman.—How many Architects do you employ?—Two. There were originally four, namely, one in each province; but it was found more advantageous to consolidate them. We had for a considerable time only, the late Mr. Welland, and an assistant, but on his death, the Board thought it desirable to appoint two gentlemen at a less salary than he had. Our present Architects are, Mr. William John Welland and Mr. Gillespie. They have each £500 a year, and I do not know two better officers, or more hardly earned money. Preparing plans for new churches is a very small portion of their work. We look to them for plans for the alteration, improvement, and enlargement of churches. We are guided by them in all the contracts we enter into; and they have the general superintendence of all buildings, repairs, improvements, &c.

177. Are your local inspectors architects or builders?—They are not necessarily architects, but several of them have been. It is difficult to define what the term "Architect" consists of, because I believe a man may be one who is not a member of the Institute of Architects, or acknowledged as such by that body.

178. They are, as I take it, all men conversant with building?—Yes, and they are all most competent to perform their duties.

179. How are they paid?—By salary.

180. What are their salaries?—The maximum salary I believe, is £250 a year, but I think some of the later appointments have not so much. We are authorized by the Lord Lieutenant to pay each of them £250 a year, but we are not bound to give the entire of that sum. After five years' service they get an addition of £5 a year biennially for long service.

181. In whom are these appointments vested?—In the Board.

182. Lord De Vesci.—Previous to the appointment of an Inspector, what course do you take to ascertain his fitness for the duty required of him?—There have been several vacancies since I became a paid Commissioner, and our mode of procedure was this: upon the first occasion after my appointment we advertised, and we had seventy-two applications, I think. Many of them were from parties in England. Each applicant sent in testimonials, and we found it extremely laborious and difficult to decide, but with the aid of the architects we carefully went through them all, and reduced them to a few; we then required to have a personal interview with those few who appeared to us to be the best recommended, and we ultimately reduced the applicants down to the person we believed to be the best man amongst the whole of them. The question was then brought before the full Board, and the Board consulted with the paid Commissioners, as to the respective merits of these several gentlemen, and we all ultimately agreed as to the individual whom we considered most eligible. The gentleman so appointed was unknown to either of the paid Commissioners, personally. That process I have described was so onerous, and disagreeable, that subsequently, when vacancies occurred, we did not advertise, but made private inquiries for candidates, and had no difficulty in obtaining competent men. There are usually applications on our books from parties anxious to become Inspectors. We also adopt the expedient, of first appointing them only as supernumeraries, and after acting for us for several years, as supernumerary Inspectors, they are afterwards appointed when a vacancy occurs. We find that system to work very well. We had one of them as a supernumerary for four years, and a very competent officer he proved to be, and when a vacancy occurred in the permanent staff, we appointed him to it.

The examination of witnesses was then adjourned to the following day.

SECOND DAY.—SATURDAY, 25th APRIL, 1868.

The Established Church (Ireland) Commissioners assembled this day, at 11 o'clock, at the office of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, No. 24, Upper Merrion-street, Dublin, and resumed the examination of witnesses viva voce.

PRESENT:

The Earl of MEATH, Chairman; Viscount DE VESCI, and Colonel R. SHAFTO ADAIR.

J. FAVIERE ELRINGTON, Esq., LL.D., Secretary to the Commission was also in attendance.

April 25, 1868.

ARTHUR EDWARD GAYER, Esq., Q.C., LL.D., (one of the paid Ecclesiastical Commissioners,) recalled for further examination.

Arthur E. Gayer, esq., Q.C., LL.D.

183. The Chairman.—I think, Dr. Gayer, that you stated yesterday that there were other books which you wished to produce for our inspection, would you now have the kindness to inform us what they are, and whether you are ready to produce them?—I was unable to produce yesterday the day-books kept in the Treasurer's office, which I would wish to lay before the Royal Commissioners; one is a book containing an account of the Treasurer's receipts for each day, specifying the head of account, and the name of the property, when it falls due, the amount allowed for poor-rates and income tax, the bank charge on cheques, the sums received, and from whom; whether on account of a see estate, or a suspended benefice; or on account of the interest on a perpetuity-mortgage, or in repayment of a glebe-house loan or tax on a bishopric; or tax on a benefice, or interest on glebe-house mortgages under the 23 & 24 Vic.; or for subscriptions towards rebuilding, or enlarging, or repairing churches, &c.

184. The Commissioners would wish you to hand in specimen sheets of each of the books you have produced for their inspection, filled in with the daily, or weekly, or monthly, or yearly occurrences, as the case may be; accompanied by such explanatory notes appended as you consider will clearly elucidate each transaction?—I will have that done, my lord.

185. Colonel Adair.—For instance, it would be desirable to show the pains which have been taken with regard to the keeping of the accounts of benefices, and for that purpose we would wish to have from you such explanatory notes as you consider desirable appended?—Most certainly; I would also wish to put in a book we have showing the valuation of taxable benefices as contradistinguished from the untaxable benefices.

186. The Chairman.—This book you now put in is headed "The Valuation of Taxable Benefices," may I ask you what class of benefices are taxable?—All over £300, or amounting to £300 a year—that is £300 a year, after making all legal deductions.

187. I see that these benefices are revalued at intervals, would you state whether they are revalued at stated intervals, or at the option of any individual?—They are all valued for taxation once a year, but frequently at shorter intervals on the application of the incumbent; or upon a change in the incumbency, or any special case arising.

188. Can you state whether the rentcharges and glebe lands are revalued at stated periods?—The rentcharges are permanently the same, unless upon the corn averages there has been a variation made in the amount of the tithe composition by magistrates. There is a clause in the "Tithe Acts" that at the end of every seven years they have a power to call for a revaluation.

189. Lord De Vesci.—Is it the clergyman has the power of calling for the valuation?—Either; sometimes the landlord calls for it, and sometimes we have called for it when we were owners of the tithe-rentcharge. I have, I think, but half answered the Chairman's last question, I answered it as regards the rentcharge only. With respect to the glebe lands, as long as the land remains in the same possession we do not alter the valuation of the land in the occupation of the incumbent, nor do we alter the valuation of the land in a tenant's occupation, unless we are informed by the incumbent that he has been obliged to abate his rent, or has got a higher rent; sometimes lands are let by the incumbent after some time that were previously in his own occupation. From the date of the information we get of that change, we alter the valuation of the living. We generally get more from our tenants than we usually charge for similar lands in the hands of an incumbent; we usually charge the incumbent the tenement valuation which is always under the full value, where the lands are in his own occupation.

190. Do you receive from each benefice a clear account of the status of that benefice, namely, if the land is let to tenants, is it let on lease or otherwise?—We do not.

192. Colonel Adair.—I wish to have an explanation as to the charge of five per cent. on money recoverable, and ten per cent. on money not recoverable. Am I to understand that the question of recoverability or non-recoverability is, with reference to the successor, in the incumbency?—It is—and the five per cent., and also the ten per cent., is regulated by the 20th section of the 3 and 4 Wm. IV., cap. 37.

193. How are these recoverable and irrecoverable sums of money regulated? Have they been uniformly charged under a similar system?—Prior to the passing of "Sir Joseph Napier's Act," in 1851, the sums recoverable by last predecessor against his successor were regulated by "fourths," without regard to the respective duration of the several incumbencies. Under "Sir Joseph Napier's Act," (the 14 and 15 Vic., cap. 73, sec. 8) building charges were made subject to progressive diminution in respect of lapse of time at the rate of £2 10*s.* per cent. upon the amount originally charged by the certificate. The power of charging a living by mortgage of a benefice, was given by the 18th and subsequent sections of the same statute; and as I have already stated, that mortgage system was by the 23 and 24 Vic., cap. 150, sec. 30, made practically available, by enabling this Board to lend money for such purposes upon mortgages of livings out of their perpetuity purchase fund, to be repaid by instalments of "one-thirtieth" each year, with interest at four per cent. upon the balances from time to time remaining due. I ought to add that the deductions for sums recoverable and irrecoverable applies only in the case of charges by way of certificate. In cases of mortgages the deductions allowed under the same 30th section of the 23 and 24 Vic., cap. 150, are the instalments paid in the year in question, and interest at four per cent. on the balances. These are the sums we allow, and then it is not a question of recoverability or irrecoverability at all.

194. It appears, then, that the present mortgage system is more favourable to the existing incumbent than the previous one, by the distribution of the burthen over successive incumbencies, or a long period of years if one incumbent remains in possession?—In my opinion it is more favourable to the existing incumbent to build or improve the glebe house by way of mortgage to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, than by expending his own money, and getting a charge upon the building by certificate; and in my experience since the passing of the Act of 1860, very few buildings or improvements have been made except by way of mortgage to the Commissioners. I wish to add, that in my opinion, a great improvement in the law would be effected by rendering the terms still more favourable to the existing incumbent than those regulated by the existing statute; and I have reason to believe that if the charge was spread over forty-two years instead of thirty—that is, if the repayment of the mortgage was spread over forty-two instead of thirty years, and a uniform repayment at the rate of five per cent. were adopted, to cover both principal and interest, many more mortgage loans would be sought for by the clergy, and more glebe houses built. I have calculated that a payment of five per cent. on the sum advanced by mortgage for forty-two years would repay the Commissioners, both principal and interest, at four per cent.

195. Lord De Vesci.—In case of a glebe house being built by mortgage to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, do you increase the valuation of the benefice? Do you take the glebe house into your calculation, and increase the value?—We are not allowed under the statutes to value glebe houses. The Commissioners are obliged by the 18th section of the 3 and 4 Wm. IV., cap. 37, to exclude the value of glebe houses from the valuation of a living for taxation; but we are in the habit, and are authorized by the same statute, in case of there being no glebe house, to allow a reasonable rent for a house, as a deduction, which, of course, is discontinued when a glebe house is built. Will you allow me now to hand in a paper distinguishing buildings, enlargements and repairs, and to give you, in a tabular form, what was spent under each of those heads for the last ten years, up to the year ending the 1st of August, 1867. (The document was then handed in. See Appendix A. Other documents were also handed in to the Commissioners, which had been called for in the course of the witness's examination. See Appendix C. and D.)

Mr. Godfrey Fetherston, examined.

196. The Chairman.—I see by a paper which has been handed in to us, that you have been described as "travelling and assistant agent?"—Yes.

197. As such are you required to give any security?—Yes, £2,000.

198. In this paper I have referred to, I see that the office you are employed in is the agency and bookkeeping department?—Yes.

199. What proportion does the labour of the agency branch of that department bear as compared with the labour of the bookkeeping branch of the department?—The bookkeeping is very much less laborious than the agency.

200. Are there particular clerks in that office told off for bookkeeping?—Yes, Mr. Gildea and Mr. Robert Knox are both engaged in bookkeeping.

201. And have nothing whatever to say to the agency branch of the department?—Not much; they might be called the bookkeepers.

202. Am I to understand, that all the other gentlemen are employed in the agency branch of that department?—All, with the exception of Mr. Higginbotham, who is principal both of the bookkeeping and agency department.

203. Is there any portion of the Treasurer's work prepared in this agency office?—The receipts for rent, and rentcharges are all filled in the agency office, and sent in to the Treasurer, and he signs them.

204. Is that done by those gentlemen who are engaged in the bookkeeping?—No, by the agency clerks, and not by the bookkeepers.

205. Colonel Adair.—In preparing the receipts, it is of course necessary to strike a balance between the tenants' liabilities and all claims for deduction; such as poor-rate, and income tax, &c. How are the deductions generally applied for, and how are they treated in the agency office?—In case of remittances, the party remitting states what the poor-rates or income tax are, and sometimes sends a docket giving the particulars. He generally makes the calculation himself, which we check, and if the remittance is not enough, we write for more to make up the deficiency; and if the remittance should be too much, we send the overplus to him. We get a return from the Poor Law Office, of all the rates struck through the year in the various electoral divisions, to guide us in our calculations.

206. Is every application accompanied by a verifying document?—There is a rule to that effect, but we cannot generally get people to adopt it.

207. The Chairman.—Do all the local agents send their accounts up to your office?—Yes.

208. Will you give us a detail of your system of management with regard to these accounts?—An account comes up to me, and I take it, with the previous one from the same party passed by the Board, and examine that the arrears, &c., are correctly brought forward, and the annual income correctly brought forward; in fact, I check all the details, and subsequently lay it before the Commissioners, who go through it with me. If there is an error, we point it out, and send it back, and if correct it is passed.

209. What system of accounts do the local agents keep. Is it at all similar to your system here?—We know nothing about it further than from the accounts they furnish to us.

210. All they do, as I understand you, is to send up the account, with the deductions they think are proper allowed?—They furnish an account or rental, as any gentleman's agent would furnish it to him, giving the names of the tenants, the rents paid, rents in arrear, and all the usual deductions for poor-rates, &c.

211. Can you put in a copy of one of these rentals to show us their mode of procedure?—Yes, my lord.

212. They send up the money they receive to you?—No, they send it to the Treasurer as they receive it from time to time.

213. Then the money received of the local agents does not come into your office?—Never, it always goes to the Treasurer.

214. Who is the person who verifies the deductions in the Treasurer's office with regard to the local agents' accounts?—The parties paying the local agents make a claim upon them for deductions, and they are answerable to them, and are also answerable to us that they have only allowed the proper amounts.

215. Lord De Vesci.—As I understand you, the local

April 25, 1868.

Mr. Godfrey Fetherston.

agent remits the money he receives direct to the Treasurer?—Yes.

216. Does he send in the rentals annually or half-yearly?—Annually.

217. Then each year you check the amount so returned to you with the sums returned by the Treasurer, you check the accounts the local agents send up with the Treasurer's books?—I check the money the local agents take credit for by the Treasurer's books.

218. Then the check on the local agents is only annual?—Yes, that is all.

219. Colonel Adair.—Is there any check or supervision by your personal visits, or the periodical visits of any officer of the Board, on these local agents?—There have arisen cases in which the Commissioners thought it right to send me down to inquire into certain matters. If anything of importance went wrong they would send me down to see after it, but that does not often occur.

220. The Chairman.—Do these local agents' rentals come before the Commissioners when they are sitting as a Board, or do these rental accounts appear in any of the books?—These annual accounts come before the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who go into all the details, and check them over with me. They examine them, prove them, and pass them; and then they are laid before the general Board and passed, but that is only a nominal matter.

221. Are these details entered in any ledger?—Nothing further than the cash.

222. Lord De Vesci.—You stated just now, that the money collected by local agents is remitted to the Treasurer, but I find in the rental you have handed in, that for the Deanery of Tuam cash was lodged in the Bank of Ireland by the local agent?—That is sometimes done.

223. Then, sometimes, they lodge the money in the Bank of Ireland, and sometimes remit it to the Treasurer?—Yes.

224. The Chairman.—Have they authority from the Commissioners to do that?—They have.

225. Does it entail any difficulty or trouble on you, the lodgment of the money directly in the Bank of Ireland?—Not the least. It is all the same to us whether they send it to the Treasurer, or put it in the Bank themselves.

226. Colonel Adair.—I hold in my hand a document, or paper, marked—"No. 41," and indorsed, November 26, 1867, referring to the Dromore estate; and I observe a note to this effect—"This is a clerical error, and should be notified to the agent." From what department does that remark emanate?—From myself.

227. You had reason to suppose that an error was made, and you thought it necessary to remark it for the information of the local agent?—Yes; and all these errors are noted in a duplicate account, which is sent back to him for amendment.

228. Do these errors often occur?—Not often.

229. I find amongst the account of suspended benefices, volume the first, an account open for the Vicars-Choral of Cashel, a matter I wish for an explanation of. This account is headed—"107. St. Patrick's Rock. Lady Emily Hankey, and Captain Daniel." What do the numbers after Captain Daniel's name indicate?—They represent the numbers in the book where Captain Daniel pays.

230. The accounts are entered half-yearly, and are resumed in another volume, in which the same account appears, as—"No. 107." Is that what you mean to convey?—Yes.

231. The local agent for Vicars-Choral of Cashel is a Mr. O'Brien?—Yes; but he has nothing whatever to say to that portion of the Vicars-Choral property.

232. The ledger you have produced—is that for transactions in the Dublin agency office without reference to local agents?—Certainly.

233. Why is a distinction taken between payments at the office and those made through Mr. O'Brien?—The portion of the collection handed to Mr. O'Brien is one that could not easily be collected in the agency office. Local agents are never employed when the work can be done with the same facility in the agency department.

234. Then the accounts in this ledger are simply of remittances, as in the case of Captain Daniel?—Yes.

235. The Chairman.—Can you state the reasons why several of those local agents are paid ten per cent. for their collections?—Upon account of the extreme trouble and difficulty of the collections.

236. What is the nature of the difficulty you refer to?—Let me take for instance the lands of Camas, in the See of Waterford. These lands were in a very bad state, and the Board had great difficulty in getting an agent to take them in charge. The previous agent resigned, and refused to collect the rents any longer.

237. Do you know when Mr. O'Brien was appointed agent to these lands?—I don't think I could tell you that just now, but it was about the year 1848.

238. That was about the time of the famine?—Yes, my lord.

239. Does the same reason apply to the collection of the Cashel Chancellorship?—The very same. There are four small tenants paying £3 or £4 a year each.

240. I see that for the Vicars-Choral of Cashel there is only a charge of £5 per cent. for collection?—Yes, that is so, and that is because the rents are large, and easily collected.

241. Is there generally more difficulty in collecting rentcharges than in the collection of other money from your own knowledge as collecting agent?—Large rentcharges are paid with great facility, but small rentcharges are always hard to be collected. The principal difficulty is the difficulty of recovering them, if the parties refuse, or do not pay.

242. Are there many cases of that class?—A great many cases of small rentcharges, but not very many who refuse to pay.

243. Generally, I observe that those small properties have been handed over to the local agents. Is that in consequence of the difficulty in collecting the money?—Certainly; the Board are not disposed to have local agents if they could avoid it, but they are obliged to have them in some cases.

244. Lord De Vesci.—I see in the return for the Deanery of Tuam, the local agent receives only five per cent. on a collection of £371; seven per cent. on £50; and ten per cent. on £103. Have the kindness to state for our information, why that great distinction is made, and the particulars of that collection?—Some of the sums collected are very small, and difficult of collection. He receives only five per cent. for receiving tithe-rentcharges out of Belclare and Tuam; seven per cent. in the parishes of Adrigoole and Lisgeevey; and ten per cent. in the parishes of Beevenagh, Clonbern, Templetogher, and Crosboyne.

245. State the particular circumstances of each case?—The ten per cent. payers pay their tithe rentcharge in very small sums, and there are a great many of them.

246. What is the cause of the difficulty in collecting the tithe-rentcharge from those very small payers?—The number of applications you are generally obliged to make. It is simply the difference that there is in writing to a man for payment of £50, or of 1*s.* 2*d.* The per-centage in one case is worth something, and generally got easily; and in the other case it is worth little or nothing, and is not got with the same facility.

247. Does the local agent live within convenient distance of the parties, generally?—Yes; within ten or twelve miles generally.

248. Has the local agent greater difficulty than a poor-rate or county cess collector in receiving the rentcharge?—I should say that the poor-rate or county cess collector has more difficulty, for he must go round personally to collect from the parties, the local agent need only collect by letter.

249. Yet a local agent receives, in some cases, ten per cent., although a poor-rate, or county cess collector does not receive more than from three to five per cent.?—I do not know anything of the poor-rate, or county cess collector's per-centage.

250. You stated that many of those local agents were appointed about the year 1848, the period of the famine?—Yes, I believe so.

251. There were, no doubt, particular difficulties in collecting money at that time?—There were, of course.

252. Do these difficulties continue to exist?—In some cases I would say they do, but not in a great many.

253. The Chairman.—Has any effort been made to your knowledge to reduce the per-centage paid to local agents?—No.

254. Lord De Vesci.—Do you collect money yourself?—I do.

255. The Chairman.—I see that certain districts for collection have been handed over to you in which you collect the revenues of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners?—Yes, my lord.

256. Is there any peculiarity in the collection of these districts that has induced the Ecclesiastical Commissioners to confide them to your charge?—The properties I collect were formerly collected by local agents, at a cost of ten per cent. in many cases, and very badly collected, and the Commissioners confided them to me with the view of bettering the condition of those properties.

257. How long have you had the collection of these districts?—Ever since I became travelling agent—since the year 1855. The gentleman who preceded me in the same office had that collection also.

258. You stated that this was a difficult property to collect; does it take you a long time to collect it, and do you experience great difficulties?—Very little difficulties now, because I have the property in hand, I understand it thoroughly; but when I got it my entire time was taken up in collection.

259. Was that in consequence of the district being in a poor state, or being now in a better condition generally?—No; it entirely arose from the rentcharges being sometimes very small. I have to keep 600 separate accounts for the collection of about £1,300 a year.

260. The rentcharges have not increased in amount, have they?—No.

261. And still you are enabled to collect them with little trouble now?—Little trouble as compared with the trouble which I had when I began to collect them.

262. Would there be any difficulty in any of these local agents getting their districts into the same good state that you have got yours with regard to the easy collection of money?—I don't think that the local agents who collect small rents in the towns could improve their collections in any way.

263. Lord De Vesci.—In case any of these local agents were to give up their collection, or there was a vacancy from any cause, do you conceive that you would be able to put their district in a better state, or under a better system of collection than it is now?—I should say not. The local agents generally have their properties in very good order.

264. Still you say that they get ten per cent. in many cases, on account of the difficulty of the collection?—Yes, and the same difficulties must always continue, namely, the vast number of small sums to be received.

265. You stated that your difficulties were removed by your mode of collection. Would not that observation apply to the local agents also, if the same means were adopted?—I do not think so, because, as I said before, they have a very small class of rent-payers to to collect from, and very small sums to collect; and I have rentcharges principally to collect.

266. Would you not be able to do so with the assistance of bailiffs?—I think not.

267. The Chairman.—The local agents have, I presume, bailiffs to assist them?—Yes, my lord.

268. Colonel Adair.—Is the local agent authorized to perform any of the duties of an ordinary land agent in recommending improvements; such as the consolidation of tenancies, &c.?—He may recommend anything he likes, and the Commissioners will pay all due attention to his recommendations, but he cannot carry out anything without the special orders of the Commissioners.

269. Has a local agent sufficient influence to enable him to improve the estate of the Commissioners by recommendations of any kind on behalf of the tenants?—He has.

270. Does it appear that the tenants are generally desirous of availing themselves of these recommendations?—The Board have frequently made grants for building and for drainage when the local agents recommended it.

271. Then in fact there is nothing to prevent the Ecclesiastical Commissioners exercising all the functions of a landlord, in the ordinary sense, and that they do so when the occasion arises?—Certainly.

272. You stated that remittances to the general agency office are not always accompanied by receipts for income tax and poor rates, and that with regard to the accounts of those gentlemen you trust to their reports?—Yes, to a certain extent; but we check every item of their accounts.

273. I observe that these reports are accompanied by a schedule of poor rates for the different districts for the time the account runs?—Certainly; and every item of that poor rate and income tax I have to check.

274. Lord De Vesci.—The local agents remit to the Treasurer sums of money on account, and at the end of the year you receive an account from the local agents which you check with the Treasurer's books?—Yes.

275. Do you do so annually?—Yes. It was formerly done half-yearly, but, upon my suggestion, it has been latterly done annually.

276. The Chairman.—Has the number of local agents been increased in latter years?—No, my lord.

277. What is the number of local agents now?—Twelve, including myself.

278. When necessary to take proceedings for the recovery of sums due by the tenants, is it your duty to attend at sessions, or otherwise to aid the local agents in the performance of their duty?—No; the local agents perform it in their own districts.

279. Are all expenses included in the charge of ten per cent., or do the local agents make separate charges for extra expenses in their accounts?—Such cases occur so seldom that I do not think I could give you a correct answer upon that point.

280. Lord De Vesci.—Do you never, in any instance, attend at quarter sessions to supply information which may be required for the recovery of the sums due, and which it may be necessary to proceed for?—I do, with regard to the Dublin agency department, but not as to the local agencies.

281. The Chairman.—In cases of ejectment, I presume that it is your business to inform yourself fully of all particulars, and to take possession when an habere is obtained?—In all cases except local agency cases.

282. When new lettings are made, is it your duty to value the premises?—Yes, in many cases, but not all.

283. Do you do so in cases where the property is under the management of local agents?—No; I have nothing to do with the property if under the care of a local agent; he values the property, and reports on it to the Commissioners.

284. In case of a revaluation for a reduction of rent, do you inspect the property, and report to the Board?—Yes, very often.

285. Is that merely as regards property of which you collect the rents?—By no means. I only collect the rentcharges; but, with regard to the general collection of rents down stairs in the office, I am sent down to the country to make valuations. If there is, for instance, an application by a tenant for an abatement of rent, I am sent down by the Board to see if it is a reasonable application or not, and to report upon it.

286. In fact, if I understand you rightly, you have a general controlling power?—No; only a general recommending power; I never go unless I get a special order to go from the Board. The applications come before the Board, and I must obtain an order to go down.

287. Lord De Vesci.—In cases of new lettings, do the Board leave the valuation to the local agents, or send you down to report to them?—They leave it to the local agent, if in his collection, and he reports what he conceives to be the value, and the Commissioners generally adopt it.

288. Are you aware of any valuation made by a local agent being checked by a reference to Sir Richard Griffith's valuation?—Almost always. The Commissioners have every possible information before them before they decide upon the question of value.

289. Colonel Adair.—It appears that the general agency office prepares the receipts for the Treasurer; would it not be well that a separate department for the purpose of adjusting accounts with tenants should be established under the Treasurer, and so relieve the general agency office from that duty?—I think it would be very undesirable. The Treasurer has to attend to his own work, and has plenty to do. He has to receive all the money and to pay all disbursements. We have to demand the money, and keep the accounts.

290. Is it not a fact that the Treasurer's office is simply a department of receipt and issue?—Yes; it is a cash department. He has not to calculate the amount of poor rate, or income tax upon the rents and rentcharges, or to deal with any question of land at all.

291. With regard to the preparation of receipts for the Treasurer, are any clerks specially employed for that purpose in the agency office?—One clerk has charge of the See estates; another has charge of the suspended benefices property; and another the tax and glebehouse loan instalments.

292. Do they verify the accompanying details?—When a party comes in to pay they make out a receipt, deducting poor rate, income tax, &c., and then, after the receipt is checked by Mr. Higinbotham or myself, it goes in to the Treasurer, who receives the cash, and enters the transaction in his books and signs the receipt, and passes it to the payer.

293. Could you inform the Commissioners how many, or about how many payments are made to each of those clerks in the course of one day?—They are frequently very numerous. On the 1st of June in each year, for instance, the demands for rentcharge are sent out. There are 1,350 separate accounts in the suspended benefice branch of this department, and the clerk in charge of that branch has to send a letter to each of those parties upon the 1st of June every year. These letters generally go out together, and we soon get in a large number of answers; we get them in daily in large quantities for the next fortnight; and then the number begins to drop off, and they become less and less from day to day.

294. Lord De Vesci.—That process occurs half-yearly?—Yes, my lord.

295. In the intermediate period, from half-year to half-year, is there any great amount of business in that department or branch. You say that at two half-yearly periods there are a number of these letters sent out, I want to know what is the nature of the business of the department in the intermediate time?—Upon the 1st of July in each year, all who have not responded to the letters of the 1st of June, are again written to, and again on the 1st of August in each year, a third demand is sent out to those who have not paid. The clerk in charge of this branch of the department has also to make out his half-yearly accounts.

296. Does that course of proceeding you have explained, take up the entire of the six months?—It does, my lord, and very fully.

297. I saw in the rental you handed in, that the arrears have increased in one year very considerably; whose business is it to inquire into the cases of those arrears?—The Commissioners.

298. To whom do they depute the inquiry?—Not to anyone, they do it directly themselves.

299. Whose duty would it be to inquire into the arrears appearing on the local agency accounts?—It would in such cases be my duty to bring them before the Commissioners, and write to the local agent, under the orders of the Commissioners, to take legal proceedings.

300. Who takes the legal proceedings?—The solicitor of the Board.

301. Then the legal proceedings are not taken by the local agents?—No, except what cases may arise for quarter sessions. All business in the superior courts is done by our own solicitor.

302. Do you conceive that you could yourself take charge of the entire local agency of the Board with the assistance of bailiffs?—Certainly not; I consider it absolutely necessary that there should be a person of good position on the spot.

303. Would not a bailiff be able to perform that duty in your absence?—I think not.

304. The Chairman.—I think I understand you to say that you issue half-yearly your letters demanding payment of all persons who owe money to the Commissioners. Upon what grounds do you imagine that such a demand is legally necessary?—I do not know that it is legally necessary, but if we did not ask for our rents I am afraid we would not get them as well as we do. The Commissioners' property is for the most part let to middlemen, between us and the occupiers, and of quite a different class from those tenants you would send round a bailiff to warn to come in and pay their rents.

305. Are these applications for payment made on printed forms?—They are all printed, and we fill up the amount, and the man's name. I would wish to make a remark on the subject of the agency fee of ten per cent. paid to the local agents. I have made a calculation, and I find, that the extra sum the Commissioners pay over five per cent. to all the local agents collecting, amounts to only about £80 a year. That would be the entire saving effected by the Board, by a reduction of the present per-centage to five per cent.

306. Colonel Adair.—Let us take the case of Mr. O'Brien, which was before referred to. It would appear that a sum of £832 18*s.* 10*d.* was received by him, and upon an average two-fifths of that amount is collected at a charge of ten per cent. Now, that being so, it would seem to me that the aggregate saving on these collections would reach a much larger sum than you suppose?—No, it would not. If you reduce them all to five per cent., it would only reach a sum of £81; I made the calculation carefully.

307. That remark, I presume, refers to all the items in all the local agency accounts, including all the sums collected at seven and a half and ten per cent.?—Certainly. Mr. O'Brien made a special application to the Board on this subject in the year 1850, and I would wish to read an extract from his letter of that year. He says:—

"I would further take the liberty of applying for ten per cent. on the collection of the rent of Camas. The tenants there are very poor, and neither very orderly nor intelligent, and there is, therefore, a good deal of trouble in managing them, and I can assure you that the fees on rents collected there from commencement of my agency to the present time, would not pay the expense of my visits to Camas, as I have been very anxious, if possible, to introduce a better system among the tenants, and was, therefore, more frequently on the lands than would otherwise be necessary." I beg to hand in a return as to local agencies, in which the per-centage allowed exceeds five per cent.

308. With respect to the keeping of the books, the Royal Commissioners have been informed, that some alterations were introduced in the system of keeping the books in the office upon the recommendation of Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness; you are, I presume, acquainted with the method adopted before the change was made, and I wish to know, do you consider it an improvement?—My own opinion is, that it was not an improvement at all.

309. I refer specially to the employment of clerks, and I wish to know whether it was possible to reduce the number of clerks in consequence of these improvements, or alterations?—Certainly not.

310. Has it not saved a great deal of labour?—I think not.

311. If you would wish to give us your reasons for saying so, we will be glad to hear them?—That is my own opinion, but I know that there is a great deal of diversity of opinion on the subject.

312. Do you anticipate that there will be a large increase of labour in your office, in the department of account, or department of correspondence, from the gradual increase of the property of the Commissioners?—It has been increasing in both ways largely since I first joined the office, and, no doubt, will further increase.

313. Do you suppose that it will be necessary to add to the number of clerks, in proportion to the staff now existing?—I think not; I think that the staff now existing is sufficient for the management of the property of the Commissioners in the present state of the law.

314. Lord De Vesci.—In fact, as I understand you, your duty as travelling agent is more in the collection of rentcharges connected with the districts under your charge?—Yes, my lord; I have one local district under my charge.

315. And you do not go to any local district but that one?—Not usually, but I am sent down, under special orders, to the other districts when anything peculiar may require it.

316. You do not visit the local agents' districts regularly or periodically?—No, never, except in very peculiar cases.

317. In fact, then, the local agents of the Board are in the same position as yourself?—They are, precisely, as regards the properties in their collection.

318. Your duty as regards them is that of auditor of their accounts when they come up to town?—Yes.

319. Colonel Adair.—The Royal Commissioners understand that the qualifications required from the clerks is simply reading, writing, &c., complete knowledge of arithmetic, and also writing from dictation. Such being the qualifications, do not the salaries of the junior clerks appear high in comparison with those given to young men in other establishments of a similar character?—They have always been thought very low.

Mr. Edmund John Armstrong, Chief Clerk, examined.

320. The Chairman.—We wish, Mr. Armstrong, to get some information from you on one or two points. In a paper which has been handed in to us by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, we observe an item of £9,570 for office, salaries, and expenses, &c. Could you tell us of what charges that large amount is composed?—I could do so, but not from recollection.

321. Can you state it by reference to the books?—Yes.

322. Will you be good enough to furnish us with all the items that make up that sum of £9,570 by referring to your books, and hand it in to us as soon as possible?—Yes, my lord.

323. I observe that you have in the office twenty-one permanent, and four supernumerary clerks. Can you account for the reason why their salaries rise so rapidly from one class to another?—No further than that such is the nature of the scale of progression.

324. By whom was that scale of promotion laid down?—It was prepared by the Board; submitted to the Lord Lieutenant, and approved of.

325. How many classes of clerks are there?—I think there are five classes.

326. Have you regularly defined classes amongst them?—Yes; and I think there are five classes.

327. Lord De Vesci.—How many clerks are under you immediately?—There are two in my office, but they are not of the same class. They are all, in fact, under me, as I am the chief clerk of the Board.

328. Who are the two clerks immediately under you?—Mr. O'Brien, and Mr. Shaw. The clerks rise in this office by seniority of years.

329. Am I right in assuming that there are five distinct and clearly defined classes of clerks?—Yes, in this way: originally there was a class of £80 clerks, a class of £100 clerks, a class of £120 clerks, a class of £150 clerks, and myself.

330. I don't think you are to be considered as a class, as you are the head of the office. I should say that there were four classes only, and a head clerk. I understand that the clerks have a competitive examination to go through before they are appointed. That competitive examination we were told by one of the Commissioners consisted in writing a good hand, and writing from dictation, spelling English correctly, and an acquaintance with arithmetic up to decimals. That competitive examination we were informed is necessary for every clerk before he enters the office. Would you tell me, whether in rising to the next class, a junior clerk has any other examination to pass through?—He has not.

331. And therefore, without any additional knowledge he obtains additional pay?—I could not say that, because at first he is a probationer, and in the time of his probation he learns sufficient to qualify him for promotion in the establishment whenever there is a vacancy.

332. But he gets on in the establishment without any additional examination?—Yes.

333. And he rises from class to class as vacancies occur without any further examination whatever?—Yes, that is the invariable course pursued.

334. Therefore the increase of payment depends in reality on the time that a clerk has been in the establishment and upon nothing else?—Yes; but if there were two candidates for a vacancy, or promotion, the Commissioners would judge which of them was the most efficient if they came to make an appointment between them. They would, in fact, judge which of them was most suited for the post that was vacant.

335. Colonel Adair.—Upon what principle was the payment of the lowest permanent salaries based?—It was only recently raised to £90, and was originally only £80.

336. Upon what principle is the pay increased from £90 to £125 a year?—The first step would be from £90 to £100 a year.

337. This document laid before us makes the rise or increase appear to be from £90 to £125 a year at once; how do you explain that?—These officers have got the maximum amount of increase, owing to the number of years which they have served; but, under ordinary circumstances, the increase is only from £90 a year to £100.

338. From £100 a year it would increase to what sum?—I think it would rise to £130, or could increase to that amount.

339. From £130 a year what would the next progression be?—The next class would commence at £120 a year, and he might rise to £185 a year.

340. Then it is to be understood that there is a distinct rise from class to class?—Yes, certainly.

341. What is the maximum sum which an officer in a clerk's situation can receive?—The highest that the first clerk can receive is £375 per annum, but he would commence at only £220.

342. In all the other classes it is by a progressive rise from the first, commencing with a permanent clerkship at £90 a year?—Yes.

343. How many years' service from the commencement will a permanent clerk take to rise from £90 a year to £130 a year?—Twenty-one years. After seven years there is a progressive increase of £5 every two years.

344. It is, therefore, probably, on account of the slowness of the improved pay that the entering payment is higher than our corresponding establishments in England?—I cannot answer that question, for I do not know the grounds on which the Commissioners arranged the various classes. That would be a question for the Commissioners to answer.

345. Lord De Vesci.—I observe on the paper handed in by Mr. Quin, one of the paid Commissioners, of his evidence before a committee of the House of Commons, that the duties of the first clerk are to open and read all the letters addressed to the Secretary; to take special charge of all taxes on bishoprics and benefices; to examine and prepare all the rentals, and examine into the correctness of the charges in each case; to carry on all the correspondence connected with the valuation of benefices; the charge of all proposals for church works, and also with reference to ministers' money; to go over all the calculations as to renewal fines; to calculate perpetuity purchases and renewal fines; to check all grants for church requisites; to check all sums allowed under all the various heads of account comprised in the drafts of the Treasurer; to take charge of all the applications for augmentation to small benefices, and for loans for glebe-houses; and to draft all the minutes made by the committee of the Board in any special branch of his department, &c. These comprise your chief duties?—Yes.

April 25, 1868.

Mr. Edmund John Armstrong.

346. Do I understand you rightly, that you have only four clerks under you to assist you in the discharge of all those duties?—I have only two clerks immediately under me, but my duties are spread out through all the offices; for instance, the church requisites are under the charge of two other clerks in another part of the house.

347. Then you have the assistance of other clerks beyond the two in your own immediate department?—Yes, and I am, in fact, over all the departments.

Mr. William John Welland.

Mr. William John Welland, Architect, examined.

348. The Chairman.—You are, I believe, one of the Architects of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners?—Yes.

349. How many are there?—Two.

350. What are the duties you have to perform?—Our duties are very onerous; we have the planning of the greater part of the church works throughout the country; the examination of plans that may be sent in by other architects; the superintendence of works, and making of estimates for the Commissioners, at their special meetings, of the cost of the works required. We have, in addition to that, to be in daily attendance here; to note the correspondence which comes before the Commissioners, for their assistance in making orders, which is a very heavy correspondence, for there are upwards of 11,000 letters annually in our department.

351. Will you state the process which takes place when an application is made to repair or build a new church?—When an application for a building takes place, if there is a church existing, it is our duty to visit that church to see whether it is in a state to be condemned or not, to be able to advise the Commissioners on that point. If it should be rebuilt we then form an estimate of the cost of a new church for the accommodation which the Commissioners decide will be required in the particular place; and, of course, when all that is done, we prepare the plans.

352. You lay all that information before the Commissioners?—We lay all that before the Commissioners before their special meeting in November in each year, which is the only time they grant money for such a purpose. In cases of repairs an Inspector is directed to attend at the church, and to send to this office an estimate for the necessary repairs, which estimate comes into our hands. It is examined and certified by us, and sent forward to the Commissioners with a recommendation as to how far that estimate should be allowed.

353. In consequence of an application by the local Inspector, or by the parishioners, are estimates prepared by you?—The estimates for repairs are not prepared by us. They are only lodged with, and examined by us. They are prepared by the Inspector who visits the church. We only make an examination of them, and make such amendments and alterations in them as we consider necessary before laying them before the Commissioners.

354. Are your local Inspectors brought up as builders?—Some of them have been, and some of them have been brought up as architects, or clerks of works. We get men of experience in that way as much as we can.

355. They are men on whom you can rely and place confidence?—Certainly.

356. Do you and the other Architect divide Ireland between you?—No, my lord. There is no divided responsibility.

357. How many Inspectors have you throughout the country?—Seven, and one supernumerary Inspector, who is not on such large pay as the others.

358. Has there been any increase latterly of Inspectors?—Yes; there was one Inspector and a supernumerary added some years since. I can't tell you the year from memory, but I can find it out. It was since I was appointed in the year 1858.

359. Upon what grounds was that augmentation made?—We found that one of our Inspectors was so over-worked that the business in his district was falling into arrear. They are all, I may say, over-worked. We found that the six men then appointed were not sufficient, and the Board appointed another; and also appointed a supernumerary, for they thought it desirable to have a young man in training to be ready to fill up any appointment which might become vacant, or to render assistance if required.

360. Have these Inspectors districts allotted to them?—They have.

361. Having stated the duties of the Inspectors with regard to rebuilding and repairing, would you state more particularly the functions you have to perform when their reports come up to you?—The Inspectors have nothing to say to applications for the rebuilding of churches, but only to those for repairs. When an application for rebuilding comes in we take it into our own hands. In all cases of rebuilding, one of the resident Architects inspects the church, and takes the different steps necessary for the rebuilding. In the examination of repairs the Inspectors act.

362. Lord De Vesci.—In the course of the building of a church, do not the Inspectors act as clerks of works, and see if the contractors perform their duty?—Yes.

363. Does he visit these churches periodically, or at certain periods, to see that the materials are proper according to contract; to see that the timber, and lime, and stone are of the proper description?—That is one of his most important duties.

364. Do you make occasional inspections of such works yourselves?—We inspect them occasionally, but the District Inspector has to go there frequently.

365. And act in fact as a kind of clerk of works under you?—Precisely.

366. The Chairman.—You stated just now that on the application for rebuilding a church, you yourself, or your brother architect, inspect the old church with the view of furnishing a report to the Commissioners. Where a new church is to be built, do you or the other architect inspect the position in which that new church is proposed to be placed?—We do. The Commissioners won't accept a site until one of us has approved of it, so that in case of a church being erected, we must approve of the site before it is accepted.

367. Then an application is first sent to your office?—It comes to the Commissioners and is forwarded to us by the proper officer.

368. Every such application comes direct before you?—It does.

369. It is referred to you to report to the Commissioners with regard to the propriety of the position in which the church is proposed to be erected?—So far as regards its architectural character, and so far as regards the site for a foundation or drainage. We also always make a point of finding out whether it is convenient for the parishioners, by questioning the clergyman, although I am not quite clear that that is any part of our duty.

370. What are the steps taken by the Commissioners to ascertain the necessity of a church being built?—That is a question which they themselves could much better answer. I know that they always require to ascertain the Church population of the parish. They make inquiries of that nature by correspondence in the first instance, so as to satisfy themselves of the urgency of the case. If the church is to be in the place of a church then existing they require to know what is the reason for condemning the old church, and all other particulars.

371. Then the Commissioners, previous to coming to any decision with reference to building a new church, apply to you for your opinion?—They do in this way: when an application comes in for the building of a new church, it is the duty of the architect to be prepared with the necessary information as regards the state of the present building, if an old church exists, or the proposed new site, before it comes before the Committee of the Board.

372. With regard to the building of an old church they apply to you for your opinion as to the state of the old church?—Yes, my lord, we call the case of an old church rebuilding, and call the other cases building.

373. With reference to construction, and ascertaining how far contracts for new churches have been fulfilled, is the process of inspection, &c., the same as to the repairing of churches?—It is. It is the duty of the Inspectors to pay frequent visits to all works going on in their districts.

374. When you are building a new church, or rebuilding an old one, have you frequent reports from the Inspector of the district?—We have.

375. If any delicate or difficult matter occurs do you visit the church yourselves with a view of getting over the difficulty?—If it appears at all desirable we visit the church ourselves; in fact, we always visit a new building frequently during its construction.

376. When churches are reported to be finished, do you yourselves inspect them before they are taken off the hands of the contractor?—Not necessarily, having frequently inspected them during the progress of the works. We do not make a final inspection. That is done by the Inspector as a rule.

377. That you consider the duty of your Inspector?—We do, for no one who had not been visiting the church constantly during its construction would be able to close the contractor's bill, for many things are covered up as the work proceeds, and we ourselves have seen the important parts during the progress of construction.

378. Colonel Adair.—I think that there is a distinction between a diocesan architect and an architect of the Board?—Yes.

379. The duties of the diocesan architect are subject to the approval of the bishop, I believe?—They have no reference to this Board at all. They have only to do with glebe-houses. Our Inspectors have been called diocesan architects, but it is an incorrect term.

380. Then these diocesan architects have nothing to do with the churches under the care of the Commissioners?—They have not.

381. In fact, as I understand you, the Inspector makes the employment of a clerk of works unnecessary on the construction or repairing of a church?—They do; and it is a matter of economy, and we are convinced that it is a much better plan.

382. The Chairman.—How are the Inspectors paid?—By salary.

383. Does each Inspector receive the same salary?—No; they commence at a certain sum, and rise by a gradual scale of payment every two years.

384. What do you commence at?—I would prefer you would get this information from some other officer; I can tell you their present salaries, but I cannot give you all the information you require correctly. I know that they commence at £200 a year.

385. Independent of their salaries do they receive anything for travelling expenses?—They do.

386. Is there any maximum allowance put on their yearly travelling expenses?—No, but they are obliged to send in an account every month, with a declaration taken before a magistrate that the amount was expended travelling on the business of the Commissioners, and that it was calculated on as low a rate as possible.

387. To what office is that account sent in?—To our office.

388. Is it passed by you?—We examine it, and certify that the charges appear reasonable, and it then comes before the Commissioners, who order payment if they approve of it.

389. Is it the business of the Inspectors to make an annual inspection of the churches in their district, or to make inspections at any stated periods?—Neither; their duty is to make an inspection whenever a clergyman applies for it, or of any church which is on the route to any church which they may be specially sent to inspect. They could not possibly inspect every church in their districts annually.

390. What are the average number of churches given up to the charge of each Inspector?—About 211. It ought even to be counted more than that, because there is a class of buildings they are sometimes sent to which would increase that number. I mean licensed places of worship; including them it would give an average of about 221 to each Inspector.

391. Colonel Adair.—How many licensed places of worship have come under your inspection?—I cannot answer that question at present, but I know that there have been 74 which have been repaired, and there have been a great many more that the Commissioners have granted assistance to.

392. The Chairman.—Do the Ecclesiastical Commissioners take all churches under their care and superintendence that have been consecrated?—I can't answer that question with certainty, but I think not. I am not sure that that is a sine quâ non, it is the legal constitution of the church which is the matter considered.

393. Colonel Adair.—Then as a rule proprietary chapels are not under the care of the Commissioners?—They are not, I believe that they could not take charge of them.

394. The Chairman.—With the exception of proprietary chapels, do all the churches which have been consecrated come under the supervision of the Commissioners?—I think I had better refer you to the Commissioners for information upon that point, for I cannot answer that question with accuracy.

395. Who prepares the estimates for repairing churches?—Our Inspectors.

396. And who prepares them for the building of new churches?—We do.

397. These estimates having been brought under the notice of the Commissioners, what becomes of them?—We must treat them separately, because they are dealt with by us separately.

398. Then these estimates with regard to the repairs of churches having come before the Commissioners, what becomes of them?—The Commissioners make an order granting a certain sum of money on the estimate. A copy of that estimate, omitting the amount, is then sent to the clergyman for his approval and signature. If he approves of it he signs his name to a printed form upon the back of it, stating that he approves of what is proposed to be done, and makes such observations as he may think fit with regard to works omitted, or that he wishes to have done. It then comes back to the Commissioners' office. If that document comes back without any amendment or alterations, the works are proceeded with. The Inspector prepares a specification for the guidance of builders and the works are in due time advertised, if they are above £10. If under that value he invites proposals himself, and sends the specification to the clergyman to invite proposals. When the tenders come in they come to this office, and are opened by the first clerk, and put into a list, and then sent up to the Architects' department. They are then referred to the Inspector by the Commissioners to report on them according to a printed paper, 1st, that they contain all the items in the specification; 2nd, that the prices are reasonable; 3rd, that the proposer is competent to do the work; and 4th, that the sureties named (when such are required) are solvent. This document comes back to the Architects, who recommend the Commissioners to accept one of the proposals. Usually the lowest proposal from a competent man is selected, and the Commissioners themselves make the selection.

399. What is the course pursued as to the rebuilding of churches?—These orders are only made once a year. Statements are submitted to the Commissioners to guide them in making their grants. The Commissioners have our statement of what the probable cost of erecting a church to hold so many people would be, and they make their grants based upon that.

400. Then you place all the requisitions for the rebuilding of churches before the Commissioners at their annual meeting, held in November, for that purpose; and the Commissioners select according to what money they have in hands what churches are to be rebuilt?—Yes. It is generally done, in the first instance, by the Committee, but it is open to the revision of the special Board. The Committee generally make the selections according to their own judgment, and upon the inquiries they have made, but it is ultimately decided by the general Board.

401. Is the course pursued as to the building of new churches the same as to the rebuilding of churches?—It is.

402. These estimates having been opened, and the rebuilding or building of certain churches sanctioned by a general meeting of the Commissioners, what is the next step that is taken?—As a rule there are conditions attached to the Commissioners' grants; such as, the procuring of subscriptions to a certain amount, conveyance of site, &c.; and nothing is done until all preliminaries of this kind are completed. Then the plans are prepared, if they are to be furnished from this office; and tenders are obtained by public advertisement, as a rule, and the builder is selected upon his giving solvent security for the due completion of the contract.

403. Colonel Adair.—It is not necessarily the lowest tender which is accepted, I presume?—Not necessarily. The Commissioners have always depended very much upon the character of the builders they employ.

404. The Chairman.—On the completion of a new church, do I understand you to say, that you are satisfied with a report from your Inspector that the contract is properly fulfilled?—Yes; having, as an invariable rule, frequently seen the churches ourselves during their progress of erection. The clergyman also certifies on the contractor's bill that the works have been done to his entire satisfaction.

405. Lord De Vesci.—In case an application is made for rebuilding a church, and the plans are prepared by an architect not belonging to the Board, are those plans sent to you for your approval or correction?—They are, and we are bound to give them a very strict examination.

406. Is the construction of a church carried on under the same system as if the plans were prepared by the architects in their office?—It is; we require all the plans to be furnished to this office, and we keep them in the office, and we are very particular in requiring any amendments that we consider right to be added in the first instance.

407. You do not then depend on the supervision of the architect that prepares the plans, but consider yourselves bound to see the construction properly carried on?—In every case.

408. Then the same labour in every case devolves on you, as if you yourselves prepared the plans?—The same labour, except the preparation of the plans. In some cases the parties have contracted for the works themselves, in which case the regulations are slightly altered, but even in those cases the works must be inspected by the Board's officers.

409. The Chairman.—Can you state the annual average expenditure for the repairs of churches for the last six or eight years?—I have taken an average of ten years previous to the 1st of August, 1867, and it gave £17 10*s.* per church per annum, but that does not include internal painting. Internal painting the Commissioners do not undertake now as a repair; they do it only when half the cost is subscribed. There are many cases in which it would be desirable, where they cannot do it.

410. What is the annual total amount of repairs for the last ten years, at an average of £17 10*s.* per church?—£26,362 8*s.* 0*d.* The entire cost of church works for those ten years amount to the following sums, viz.:—

|---|---|---|---|
| Buildings, . . . | 175,867 | 15 | 10 |
| Enlargements, . . . | 78,446 | 14 | 11 |
| Repairs, . . . . | 263,624 | 7 | 11 |

which give an annual average for repairs of £26,362 8*s.*

411. Colonel Adair.—Have the Commissioners any jurisdiction in repairing graveyards, or mortuary chapels?—When the church is in the graveyard they do so, but that is for the preservation of the church only; but in graveyards where no churches exist, they do not do it.

412. Lord De Vesci.—Do the Inspectors report their visits to each church to you?—Yes. It is part of their duty to do so in cases of rebuildings.

413. Are the Inspectors bound to visit the various churches in Ireland at certain periods?—Not annually, but whenever they are travelling they must inspect all the churches on their route.

414. Do they report these visits to churches to your office?—No. If there are any repairs required they send up an estimate for the repairs, but not otherwise.

415. If a church was reported to require to be repainted, will the Commissioners not make an order for repainting, unless the parishioners pay half the expense?—They paint the churches externally once every four years, but they do not paint internally now, except one half the cost is subscribed by the parishioners. That is the general rule.

416. In case the parishioners do not subscribe half the expense, and there was a necessity for repainting, would the Commissioners still refuse?—They would, as they do not look upon internal painting as a necessary work to keep up the fabric of the church.

417. Will all works reported to them as necessary to keep up the fabric of the church, be executed as necessary independent of subscriptions?—Yes.

418. Colonel Adair.—As regards the insurance of churches, are there not certain arrangements made with each parish?—There are.

419. What do they do in these cases?—The Commissioners have become their own insurers like many great ship companies. They put by a certain sum of money annually, and they expect each parish to insure for half the value of the parish church; but there is no power to compel the parishioners to do so; and in a great many cases it is not done.

420. In case the parishioners insure for half the value, the Commissioners will, as I understand you, bear the expenses of the new erection?—In case the parishioners insure for one-half, the Commissioners will rebuild the church if anything happens to it.

THIRD DAY.—MONDAY, 27th APRIL, 1868.

The Established Church (Ireland) Commissioners assembled this day, at 11 o'clock, at their offices, No. 3, Lower Ormond-quay, Dublin, and resumed the examination of witnesses viva voce.

PRESENT:

The Earl of MEATH, Chairman; Viscount DE VESCI, and Colonel ROBERT SHAFTO ADAIR.

J. FAVIERE ELRINGTON, Esq., LL.D., Secretary to the Commission, was also in attendance.

---

JOSEPH KINCAID, Esq., Land Agent, examined.

April 27, 1868.

Joseph Kincaid, Esq.

421. The Chairman.—Mr. Kincaid, we have requested your attendance, having reason to believe that you would be able, from your great experience as a land agent, to give us some valuable information applicable to the inquiry we are engaged in. Would you have the kindness to inform us what is your system for the collection of rents, and your general system for the management of estates under your charge?—With respect to the management of estates generally, the practice adopted by Mr. Stewart and me is to look after every matter ourselves as far as we possibly can. Then we have a number of assistants in our establishment, some of whom reside on or near the country estates, and some transact business in our office in Dublin. These gentlemen, either by themselves or accompanied by one of us, visit all the estates at particular times, for the collection of rents, or for the purpose of carrying on or directing improvements. All our collections are made generally at stated periods. Each estate has its own fixed period for the payment of rents, and so far as that goes there is no trouble connected with it; but with regard to the looking after improvements, and works, and the tenants generally, it is the duty of our assistants in the country, or one of our Dublin assistants or ourselves to look after them at all times.

422. In fact, you have travelling agents to represent you?—Yes, and all of them are brought up in our establishment, having served regular apprenticeships to us.

423. Do you require the assistance of local agents and bailiffs?—We have a number of local agents, but they are not in any case confined to any one estate; they are located in districts. We have, for instance, a resident assistant in Limerick, another in Cork, another in Roscommon, another in Galway, another in Longford, and another in Sligo; and we also have a second local agent in Cork, who principally attends to the city business of our office. These are our resident assistants, and each of them is expected to look after all the estates in his district.

424. Colonel Adair.—Is your resident assistant in each county placed on the Grand Jury of that county?—Not always, but sometimes he is.

425. As the representative of the properties he collects the rents of?—Yes. For example, our local assistant in Limerick, is on the Grand Jury there. Again, another of our assistants is on the Grand Jury in Roscommon. In Longford when I do not attend myself, and in Sligo when my son does not attend, the local assistants are generally on the Grand Jury.

426. The Chairman.—In addition to these local agents, do you employ bailiffs?—Yes, on almost every estate there is a bailiff.

427. In the collection of small rents in towns, do you find any difficulty in obtaining them through the medium of bailiffs and local agents?—A good deal of that would depend on whether the rents are paid weekly, monthly, quarterly, half yearly, or yearly. We find it an advantage sometimes to collect small rents weekly or monthly. For instance, in Sligo some portions of the properties there are occupied by almost a pauper tenantry. These rents are looked after through our agent or assistant, by a person he employs as bailiff, who goes round the tenants weekly or monthly, and accounts with our assistant at stated periods. In Shanagolden our assistant receives these rents himself, and employs a bailiff to notice the tenants to come in to him. In the old town of the city of Limerick we receive a number of rents, and have, at different times, employed persons in the city of Limerick to collect for us, and have had a great deal of trouble and loss with them. Mr. Knox is now acting for us, and all the business is now done there by him as our resident agent, and not by bailiffs.

428. Then some of these rents must be exceedingly small?—Very small.

429. Can you tell us about what these rents are?—The rents we receive vary from a shilling a week to £1,000 a year.

430. Lord De Vesci.—In the case of small tenants in towns, do you consider that you could collect these rents without the assistance of a resident agent?—I don't think so; at least not well. At the same time we do not employ resident agents chiefly for the collection of rents. Their chief business is to look after the estates and the tenants—the collection of rents on country estates is done generally at stated periods by visits from Dublin. Some of the tenants do not pay regularly, and then the local agent would collect them, but generally the rents are either paid in Dublin or collected by one of the principals or assistants from our office in Dublin.

431. Then the chief use of your local agents is to look after the improvements rather than the collection of rents?—Yes.

432. Then they have bailiffs under them?—Yes; but they are more for the noticing of tenants than the actual collection of rents.

433. Do the bailiffs collect small rents?—Not generally. Our system is that every rent must be paid in the office—either into the local office in the country or head office in Dublin. We have one man, of the class of bailiff, who is employed in the town of Sligo to collect weekly and monthly rents from a large number of tenants.

434. Are the resident agents belonging to the staff of your office?—They have all served their time in our office, and belong to our staff, and are paid by us.

435. Are they paid by salary or a per-centage?—No per-centage in any case. They have all salaries. We do not, I should state, prevent their taking any other agency they can get for themselves in the county; on the contrary, we encourage them to do so, for our work is not sufficient to employ their entire time. We pay them generally about £200 a year, and give them permission to take other agencies in the neighbourhood. Almost all have other agencies in the counties in which they reside.

436. The Chairman.—How do these local agents transmit the money they receive?—By bank credits.

437. Through the local banks?—Yes.

438. Colonel Adair.—Is there any limit to the improvements that may be suggested to your office by your resident assistants?—The duty of our resident assistants would be to suggest improvements of any kind they thought proper, but they do not execute any improvements without direct orders from us. On several estates we are limited as to the amount we should expend. Sometimes a proprietor may say that we may expend £1,000 or £500 or £200 a year on his property. We are often so limited; but no assistant could in any case execute improvements without orders from us. There is scarcely a drain made on an estate that we are agents for without our special orders.

439. Is there any difference as to salary between

April 27, 1868.

Joseph Kincaid, Esq.

town resident assistants and country resident assistants?—Our resident assistants are attached to counties. They have charge of all the estates in a particular county that we are agents to. We have one, for instance, in Sligo, and he has all the estates in the county Sligo, and also in the town of Sligo, to look after. The agent in Longford has all the estates in the county of Longford and town of Longford to look after; there is, in fact, no difference between a town and country resident assistant.

440. There is a combination of duties in fact?—Yes. In Roscommon alone our resident assistant has eleven estates to look after of every variety of character, but some of them are small.

441. The Chairman.—Could you state to us about what number of tenants you receive rent from in the course of a year in your office?—As near as I can guess, I should say about 10,000.

442. Besides rents, are there any other moneys that you receive at your office for your employers?—Yes.

443. What are they?—We receive a great many tithe rentcharges, interests, jointures, and other remittances on private accounts.

444. Do you find any practical difficulty or any difficulty in collecting rentcharges when the sums are small?—We have had a good many tithe-rentcharges to collect in our time. It is not as desirable an agency as landed property, but I do not think it is more troublesome. The first we had was for the Archdeacon of Emly, whose tithe property was in Meath, and that was in the year 1837, the first year of the tithe-rentcharge; we had to make out the rental from the tithe composition books, and to calculate the amounts payable by each proprietor. It was very troublesome, but that was so long as thirty years ago. I don't know that it involved us in any great expense, but it did in a great deal of labour for the time. Since that period we have received a large amount of tithes. We have received the tithes of the Deanery of St. Patrick's, &c., also of the Deanery of Raphoe, and a large number of lay impropriators' tithes. Once the thing is settled, or arranged, there is practically no difficulty. You have only to write for it, and they pay.

445. Lord De Vesci.—In some cases it is I believe very small?—Yes, from one shilling upwards.

446. And you have no practical difficulty in collecting them?—It is more troublesome in those small cases, and there are more frequent applications.

447. What is the system you adopt with regard to them? Do you send notices to them, or do you expect them to pay voluntarily?—The great majority of them are paid in the Dublin office, and are written for generally twice a year. Places so distant as Raphoe require to be visited, and I have gone myself there once a year.

448. In the case of Raphoe, you go yourself to collect?—Yes.

449. Do you send out notices, or do you expect the parties to come to your office themselves, like other tenants?—We send out notices, and the landlords or their agents either remit or pay in the office. Some, of course, have to be frequently written to.

450. In case of the non-payment of these small rentcharges, what means have you of recovery?—Generally civil bill process.

451. Who do you employ for that purpose?—A local sessions attorney.

452. Are the instructions given to him by your assistants?—No; it goes through the office. Our resident assistants have generally very little to say to the collection of tithe-rentcharge. We take cheques on country banks from parties in the country in payment, and don't generally charge for them. Most persons charge for cashing county cheques, but we do not. For instance, if we get a cheque on a bank in Longford for rent or rentcharge we take it as cash, without making any charge.

453. The Chairman.—You employ a great number of clerks in your office in Dublin?—We do.

454. Do you experience any difficulty in finding qualified candidates?—We have found no difficulty. If I were to advertise for a clerk I should say that I would receive 200 applications. I belong to a great many public boards, and I find that such is the case.

455. Do you generally find that these candidates who present themselves at these boards you are conversant with are well-informed men?—Generally.

456. Do you subject your clerks to an examination?—We take apprentices who pay in a fee for remaining with us for three years. We always have six or seven of them who do junior work, and thus learn their business as agents. These young gentlemen who serve their apprenticeships to us, if they appear deserving and wish to remain, we keep on at a salary, and appoint them afterwards as our local agents as vacancies occur, or recommend them to gentlemen who require agents. Many landed proprietors in Ireland have land agents recommended by us, and who served their apprenticeship in our office.

457. When their period of probation is over at what rate of remuneration do they begin?—About £80 a year.

458. Up to what sum can they rise as clerks in your office?—We have not any higher than £200 a year.

459. Lord De Vesci.—Do you require security from your cashiers?—We do.

460. How many estates, may I ask, have you under your charge?—From seventy to eighty; and we keep a separate account in our ledgers for every estate. Sometimes one estate belongs to two or three separate landlords, and sometimes one landlord will have two or three separate estates, which would make a difference in the exact number; still I think I have answered the question accurately, or nearly so. We manage about seventy separate estates or properties, I hold a list in my hand of eighty-five estates, but there are only, I think, about seventy owners to them.

461. The Chairman.—Upon an average how many of these estates would fall to the management of one of your local agents, or resident assistants, as you call them?—A great many of these estates have no local agents. We have no local agents in the counties of Dublin, Meath, Wicklow, Wexford, or Kildare. We have but seven local agents altogether. I find that there are eight estates under the management of the local agent in Sligo; seven in Limerick; eleven in Roscommon; seven in Longford; and four in the county Cork.

PETER DUBEDAT, Esq., examined.

462. The Chairman.—We have taken the liberty, Mr. Du'Bedat, to request your attendance here for a short time, to ask you to give us some information on a subject specially within your province. You are, I believe, secretary to the Bank of Ireland?—Yes.

463. Will you have the kindness to tell us what system the Bank of Ireland pursues in acting as receivers and treasurers for public bodies?—The accounts are kept in different ways, but the principle is to have one general working account into which all moneys are lodged, and transferred from that account to any other account the parties may choose.

464. Is there any limit below which they refuse to receive sums in lodgment?—No, none.

465. Are separate books kept for each public body that has an account in the Bank of Ireland?—Certainly, separate pass books.

466. Have you not a separate ledger independent of the separate pass books?—Yes, separate ledger accounts.

467. These are ledgers in which item by item everything is entered for that public body?—Certainly.

468. Do you give pass-books for each head of account?—Certainly, if asked for.

469. Dou you notify receipts of lodgments to the credit of a public body?—We do, as the public body may require. The practice is, for the parties to send in their pass-books daily if required, and have them written up accordingly.

470. Is the Bank of Ireland Treasurer to many public bodies in Ireland?—Several.

471. The various counties in Ireland keep their accounts with you?—We opened about half a dozen county accounts, but the remaining counties bank with other banks; we are the Treasurers for six counties.

472. At what period of the year do you balance your accounts for public bodies?—Once every month regularly, but we will balance them at any time the parties may require it. We balance our own accounts monthly.

473. Lord De Vesci.—Do you balance the accounts of public bodies periodically, or only as they require it?—Only as they require it.

474. Colonel Adair.—With regard to the counties for which the Bank of Ireland is Treasurer, has any difficulty arisen from the direct transfer of public money without the intervention of a special Treasurer?—In the accounts we hold the change has not yet taken place, but there will be no difficulty I apprehend.

475. The Chief Remembrancer, now the Receiver Master, is aware of the intended change, and has made no objection?—No, quite the reverse.

476. As I understand, the counties have been always subject to the direction of the Chief Remembrancer?—Yes.

477. Lord De Vesci.—In cases where you are treasurers for counties, do the cess collectors pay the money into your banks as they receive it in small sums?—I believe not. They take out letters of credit for the money, and when they get in the whole collection, they then give in their receipts, on furnishing their collection they hand them to the Treasurer.

478. Where you are treasurer, would the county cess collectors be allowed to pay small sums into the bank?—I do not believe that they are obliged to do it; they may lodge any sum of money they think fit, and take out a receipt, which is lodged to the account of the county Treasurer.

479. You have stated that in six counties the Bank of Ireland acts as direct Treasurer, in these cases will the Bank of Ireland receive small sums from the collectors of county cess if they wish to lodge them?—Most undoubtedly.

480. Colonel Adair.—I think the business can be transacted between the county cess collectors and the Bank of Ireland?—Assuredly.

481. The Chairman.—You never heard of any difficulty arising from the system we have described?—None.

482. I believe that the same system is pursued by the several Poor Law Boards throughout the country, they bank with the Bank of Ireland, and the money is sent up to the bank by the poor-rate clerk or collectors, and no difficulty, that you know of, has arisen from that system?—Quite so; I dare say I receive forty or fifty letters of a morning on poor law business, sending up half notes, &c.

483. Lord De Vesci.—In case of poor law collections, do they send the pass-books in every day?—Whatever they wish us to do we do.

484. The Chairman.—Do you allow interest on the balances in hand on a current account in such cases?—None.

485. What interest do you allow on a deposit account?—At present only one per cent.; we allow interest on deposits according to the state of the money market.

486. What is the lowest amount you receive as a deposit account?—£10.

487. Colonel Adair.—There must be a certain time allowed to elapse before a deposit can be withdrawn?—One month.

488. The Chairman.—What interest, if any, do you charge public bodies for overdrawing their accounts?—The bank rarely charges for temporary overdrafts on public accounts, and none to Poor Law Boards.

489. Lord De Vesci.—In case a public body leave a sum of money in your hands for a certain period, and that at other periods they overdraw their account, do you charge them interest?—Our practice has not been to do so.

490. The Chairman.—In the Bank of Ireland you must, of course, have a great number of clerks?—A great many.

491. How many gradations or classes of clerks have you in the Bank of Ireland?—I am afraid that is a question I could not answer myself. We have three classes of clerks; but there is no cast-iron rule, and we take them out of any of these classes occasionally for promotion. When clerks are newly appointed they receive £60 per annum, and £70 the second year, and at the termination of the seventh £80, as a matter of course, if still eligible; but after that there is no positive increase; but they are eligible to be placed upon any of the following classes as ordinary clerks:—

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1st class, | . . | £150 per annum. |
| 2nd „ | . . | £125 „ |
| 3rd „ | . . | £100 „ |

492. Lord De Vesci.—What do you call ordinary clerks?—They hold no special situations, such as tellers, or book-keepers, &c. These clerks do not hold special situations.

493. Are they cashiers?—No.

494. The Chairman.—Do you take any security from clerks on their appointments?—Personal security for two years in £2,000. After two years they are eligible to be members of the Clerks' Guarantee Fund. It is a fund established by the clerks, which is responsible for all losses or defalcations that may occur in the Bank of Ireland.

495. Colonel Adair.—Is that fund, established by a subscription to the guarantee fund, applicable to government offices generally?—No. It is a different thing altogether. £1,000 of the original security may be upon the London Guarantee Fund. The interest and profit of the Bank of Ireland Guarantee Fund goes to another fund for the benefit of the widows and children of the officers of the establishment; and it has worked admirably.

496. Lord De Vesci.—The first salary you give is £60?—Yes.

497. At the end of the seven years they get £80. Is the maximum salary they can get in an ordinary clerkship £150 a year, and during that period of service is it possible for them to receive £150 a year?—It is.

498. For good service?—For eligibility.

499. The Chairman.—Under what system do clerks rise from the lower to the higher classes?—They are not sure of getting beyond the £80 salary, except for talent or special eligibility, which might arise at any time after they come into the bank—even in three years after they first come into the establishment.

500. In what way are the cashiers paid?—They are paid additional salaries for the risk.

501. Do they give security?—£1,000 more than ordinary clerks. They give £3,000 instead of £2,000.

502. Colonel Adair.—You spoke, I think, of the heads of departments. Into how many general departments is the bank divided?—There are only three divisions.

503. In all establishments of account do you consider it is desirable that special duties should be allotted to particular clerks for the transaction of business?—Yes, under a controlling head.

504. Is there in the Bank of Ireland a department in which the payments made on behalf of public bodies are subjected to verification upon account of those bodies? For instance, if a payment was made of rent, would a deduction be made by the bank for income tax, poor-rates, or the like?—No.

505. You, in fact, only receive money on account, or deposit?—Yes. We receive money on account, and if the parties desire it, we pass a receipt for it.

506. Do you invest money in the public funds for your customers?—Always.

507. The Chairman.—How do you obtain candidates for the vacant clerkships in the Bank of Ireland?—By the voluntary applications of the parties.

April 27, 1868.

Peter DuBedat, Esq.

508. And not by public advertisement?—No; we do not require it.

509. Have you always a list of candidates for forthcoming vacancies?—We have, when any party applies at my office, and says he wants an appointment in the bank, after some inquiry, I give him a printed application to fill up, which when filled up, is sent to me. It is registered, and when a vacancy or vacancies occur—for we never appoint less than five or six at a time—we examine all those parties whose names are registered in my office, and select the best we can find. They all undergo an examination.

510. What examination?—The ordinary examination for such appointments. History, writing from dictation, and the first four rules of arithmetic.

511. They must write well?—The object of making them write from dictation is to test that fact; we have, of course, had a specimen of their handwriting in their application, which must be written by themselves.

512. When from seniority or vacancies in a class above, a clerk becomes entitled to a step higher, is he subjected to a second examination?—No, not at all; I may tell you that seniority is almost abolished in the bank; promotion is by merit. If there was a senior clerk and a junior clerk applying for the same position, and they were both equally competent, the senior would get the preference, but that is all.

513. Lord De Vesci.—You get the best men you can?—Certainly.

514. The Chairman.—Have you numerous applications registered in the book you have alluded to, for clerkships?—Very numerous.

515. Then you find no difficulty in getting respectable, intelligent, and trustworthy persons to come forward and seek for the office of clerks?—As far as respectability and trustworthiness goes it is all very well, but we find some difficulty in getting intelligent persons.

516. Do you find amongst the applicants the sons of men in some of the higher professions; and the sons of men of some standing in society?—Certainly; we have applications from persons of the highest respectability.

517. Lord De Vesci.—In the case of the appointment of a special officer, such as cashier or manager of county banks, do you take them from the best men you can find amongst your ordinary clerks, or are they special appointments altogether?—Invariably all those appointments are made from the establishment, and we have no difficulty whatever in finding good men there.

[The further examination of witnesses was then adjourned to the office of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, No. 24, Upper Merrion-street.]

Mr. Robert G. Seymour.

Mr. Robert G. Seymour, Treasurer's Clerk, examined.

518. The Chairman.—You have, I believe, daily books in your office of receipts and disbursements?—Yes.

519. Produce and explain the nature of these to me?—(The witness here produced "The Treasurer's Daily Receipt Book.")

520. Lord De Vesci.—Are all moneys received in the Treasurer's office daily entered in this book under the different heads of account as they now appear in the book?—Yes, my lord.

521. Do I understand you that the moneys received by the Treasurer each day are entered under the different heads as they appear in the accounts, and in the Treasurer's receipts?—Yes.

522. Are the accounts under the head of General Fund Account kept in another office?—Yes.

523. In what office?—The bookkeeping department.

524. Then in the Treasurer's office the money received is only put down in a page under Treasurer's receipts?—Yes.

525. The Chairman.—Let us take one transaction, say of the 2nd of March last, in the Treasurer's office, the transactions of that day are what we see in this particular page under that date?—Yes.

526. No other payments were made on that day, except those entered on that day?—Nothing else.

527. What daily work have you in your office besides receiving and entering the sums received, and appearing in the Treasurer's receipts?—The disbursements of the Commissioners.

528. Show us the disbursement books?—The witness then produced two books entitled "The General Fund Draft Books."

529. These books are both the same?—Yes, we have alternate books—one for Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays,—and another book for the other three days of the week.

530. Explain to us what transactions took place in these books in the Treasurer's office on the same day—the 2nd of March?—Certain stipends were paid on that day, and the entry shows the diocese, parish, amount, clergyman's name, &c. Some were, it appears, paid by post-office orders, some by bank post bills, and some by cheques. The cost of the post-office order is placed underneath.

531. Are there any other duties devolving on the clerks in the Treasurer's office beyond what you have explained to us in connexion with these books, relating to the receipts and disbursements?—There are.

532. State them?—The clerk who enters all these items in the Treasurer's book of receipts has to direct covers to send out the receipts to the different parties, and circulars have to be filled up for all these payments.

533. What I wish to know is, if there is any other duty to be performed beyond what you have stated. The filling up of circulars and directing envelopes is a mere matter of form?—Yes. These letters have to be all docketed. In many cases we do not send any remittance until we get the receipt beforehand; generally half a post bill is sent, and when we get the receipt we forward the second half.

534. Lord De Vesci.—I see in the book entitled "General Fund Drafts" there are large sums made payable in cheques; and that those sums are then divided into small sums, and made payable to individuals, which were forwarded by bank post bills. Are these cheques on the Bank of Ireland drawn in the Treasurer's office?—Yes.

535. Are the bank post bills obtained by the clerks in the Treasurer's office?—Yes, we send down a list to the bank from the Treasurer's office to get them made out.

536. Is the transmission of these different bank post bills made direct from the Treasurer's office?—Yes.

537. Colonel Adair.—With regard to these transactions of the 2nd of March, how many clerks were employed upon them in the Treasurer's office?—One for the receipts, and one for the disbursements.

538. Then the clerk who has to deal with the disbursements has the most to do?—Yes, for the time, but the clerks take it in turns. The disbursements are much heavier than the receipts. One clerk takes the receipts, and two or three for the disbursements generally. The clerk who enters the receipts has also the bank business to do as well, and it takes an hour or an hour and a half in the course of the day to attend to the bank business.

539. The Chairman.—Has he to go to the bank?—Yes, my lord.

540. Having filled in your daily books, what is your next process?—They are posted into the journal in the bookkeeping department.

541. Then you only keep the daily books in the Treasurer's office?—Yes, the daily books of the receipts and disbursements.

542. In this book of Treasurer's receipts I see upon the opposite of the page a heading of "General Fund Account," which I think you have nothing to do with in the Treasurer's office?—Yes, that comes into the bookkeeping department.

543. Can you explain from your own knowledge the system of the bookkeeping department?—I cannot.

Mr. Robert G. Seymour.

544. Lord De Vesci.—You stated that the heaviest part of the duty in the Treasurer's department is the disbursements on account of the number of large sums which you have to transmit to the country. Are these sums which you have to pay periodical payments, or do they go through every day in the year?—Many of them are periodical, but most of them are irregular payments. Most of them, such as ministers' money, should be paid on the first day of every quarter; or the 1st of January, 1st of April, 1st of July, and 1st of October.

545. Are salaries to incumbents and salaries to schoolmasters, quit and crown rents, and other such payments, periodical or not?—They are all periodical.

546. Then I am to understand that the general disbursements from the treasurer's office are periodical, and not payments extending over every day in the year?—Under the head of Church works the payments are very irregular, and could not be considered as periodical.

547. Are they heavy payments or in small sums?—They are very heavy, and are payments to contractors and to clergymen, varying from one shilling to £1,200.

548. Colonel Adair.—The applications for estimates come in within a certain limited time?—A book is sent in to us from the different departments stating the parties to be paid, and we have to send out the payments to those parties by bank post bills, or post-office orders.

549. The demands for general estimates pass to you from another department, such as a demand for church requisites, &c.?—Yes.

550. From what department would such a demand come?—From the church requisites department.

551. Lord De Vesci.—Are they periodical?—They are generally; but there are other payments going on through the entire year in that department.

552. How are the officials in the office paid? At what periods?—The clerks are paid monthly.

Mr. Jones Gildea, assistant book-keeper, examined.

Mr. Jones Gildea.

553. The Chairman.—You are assistant book-keeper in the office?—Yes.

554. How many clerks are in your office?—I have one assistant. There are but three in the office altogether.

555. We wish to ascertain what your labours are daily, and see your books?—(The witness here produced some books).

556. What do you call this book?—It is the treasurer's receipt-book for the previous day, the receipts are entered in it in the treasurer's office, and I take them out the next day, and place the various entries under the different headings.

557. How do you know from the gross sums how to make the entries, how to dissect it, and put it under its different heads?—I know that from my experience in the office. The details of these entries I tot up, and the total should be the same as that in the treasurer's office; one side of the book is a check on the other side.

558. How do you know, for instance, that this sum of £25 5*s.* is applicable to a particular heading, for there is nothing stated about it here?—By the head of account put to it in the treasurer's office, by the treasurer's assistant; I know how to place it in my account. I know it by the initials.

559. Lord De Vesci.—How do you know when there are no initials?—I compare it with the cash book, which is kept by an assistant clerk in the office.

560. Is that book kept in your office or in the treasurer's office?—It is kept in the agency office, and the book-keeping is done in the same office. This book is supposed to be kept in the agency department; but it is, in fact, kept by the assistant-clerk.

561. The Chairman.—What is your next labour?—To post up in the respective ledgers.

562. Show us the posting of the same day, the 2nd of March, as we are following up the process of book-keeping on one particular day, for illustration?—The witness here produced "The See Estate Ledger." The amount for that day is the same as in the other books, £87 9*s.* 2*d.*, and the entries give the names and all the other particulars.

563. You have, I presume, besides this See ledger, a "Glebe-house Ledger" and other ledgers for the various branches or departments?—Yes.

564. Having posted up all the sums received on the day before, by the treasurer, what is your next duty?—I then take up the disbursements after I complete the receipts, and go through precisely the same form.

565. From what book do you receive an account of the disbursements?—From "the Treasurers' Disbursement Book." (The witness here produced "the Disbursement Ledger.")

566. What is the next business transacted in your office?—We have all the other ledgers to keep, such as the ledgers for church requisites, &c.

567. Colonel Adair.—Is there, in fact, a separate ledger kept for each head of disbursement?—There is.

568. Lord De Vesci.—How many different heads of disbursement are there?—About sixteen, we sometimes may have more or less, but that is about it, generally.

569. The Chairman.—After all that is done what is your next business?—When all the items are posted we tot up the books. We first tot up the receipts, and add the amount to the abstract account, and then tot up the expenditure and do the same with it. We tot them up each day, and show the totals under the different heads; and upon the last day of each month we complete the tots, and finally arrange the books for the monthly account.

570. Colonel Adair.—Then the totals should correspond in each book?—Yes, and our balance must correspond with the Bank Book.

571. It does not appear that you bring forward the bank credits, but only record the transactions of the month?—Yes.

572. Lord De Vesci.—Are the disbursements periodical?—Some of them are, some are not.

573. I observe on looking into the monthly accounts, that on some days there are no entries of disbursements. How do you explain that?—That no doubt sometimes does occur, but it is very seldom.

574. Colonel Adair.—Does it occur that you have ever to work over hours in your office?—It does; I have to work from the commencement of May, and all through that month, and through June and July, at over hours.

575. Do you receive any extra allowance for that?—I do not, and have never asked for it. I have also to do the same thing in November, December, and January, each year. The receipts are coming in in November, December, and January, generally, and the payments have to be made in May, June, and July in each year.

576. The Chairman.—When do you leave your office generally at ordinary times?—Four o'clock.

577. If you have no work to do in the office would you be allowed to leave before the specified hour?—No. We are supposed not to leave until four o'clock.

578. Have you any holidays in the year?—We have.

579. How much?—A month; from the 20th of August until the 20th of September. The office is then closed; at least it is generally closed, unless with few exceptions, when some of the clerks must attend to send out the payments due on the 25th of September.

580. Colonel Adair.—It is a month's vacation, with the exception of a very short period in the course of it, in which there is some business proceeding?—Yes.

581. The Chairman.—Have you anything to do with the posting up of the books in the agency office?—No; I have nothing to do with that. I post from the treasurer's books.

April 27, 1868.

Mr. Jones Gildea.

specified to us, and would wish to mention?—I could not say that there are.

583. You have specified all the daily duties you have to perform?—Yes.

584. Colonel Adair.—How do the Church estimates come under your observation? From what department do you receive the items as to all the Church works and estimates?—I get that information from the Church works, and Church requisites departments, and post the items into the respective ledgers.

585. Lord De Vesci.—Is that a heavy duty?—It is very laborious. There are four ledgers kept, and also two contract ledgers kept for the Church works and requisites departments. There are in fact seven books kept for the Church works alone.

586. The Chairman.—Have you in your office anything to do with calculating the taxes on benefices?—No. That is done in the first clerk's office; and it is then sent into our office, and the demands are made from our office.

587. Lord De Vesci.—Who calculates the interest due on glebe houses?—I think it is Mr. Higginbotham.

588. And the subscriptions for repairs, how are they arranged?—Subscriptions are arranged in this way: The Commissioners first determine the terms upon which they will do any particular work, and if they require a subscription from the parish, the Incumbent, or some one, must come forward and lodge the amount required. A receipt is, of course, then passed to the party. That receipt is handed into the Treasurer's office, and entered in his receipt books.

589. Does the subscription from the Commissioners depend on the sum proposed to be spent by the parishioners?—I believe so; but this is not within my department.

590. The Chairman.—What is the meaning of the heading—"Monies returned"?—That may occur during any portion of a year or half year. Suppose that a parish clerk or sexton dies, or something of that kind occurs, the clergyman should return his salary.

591. Colonel Adair.—We have now done with the daily and monthly transactions. With regard to making up the balances for the year, how are they prepared?—Our year ends on the 31st of July, and as soon as the accounts can be made up after that date they are made up. The balance from the bank is taken, and compared with the several books, and the true state of the accounts ascertained. The books show the receipts and expenditure by the day, week, month, and year, and then show the balance remaining; you can have a view in fact of the entire receipts and expenditure for the year at once.

Mr. Godfrey Fetherston.

Mr. Godfrey Fetherston, Travelling Agent, recalled and further examined.—(Ante, page 35.)

592. The Chairman.—We wish to know how the business of the agency office is transacted every day, and to see your books. (Book produced.) What is this book?—"The Suspended Benefices Rental."

593. Explain how the entries are made in it?—Suppose that any gentleman, Mr. ———, for instance, came in to pay his rentcharge, the first thing done is to open this book, look for his account, and ascertain how it stands. Suppose that he came in on the 5th of July, 1867, we would look to his account, and see that he had paid up to November, 1866, and only owed for May, 1867, we would then take a receipt, and fill it for the sum of £8 19*s.* 9*d.* We would first see that he was allowed for poor rates on the last payment, and was only now entitled to an allowance for income tax. Having ascertained all that, we would fill the receipt, making all the proper deductions, and the receipt would then be handed to Mr. ———, who would take it to the Treasurer's office, where he would pay in the cash. The Treasurer would sign the receipt, which we send in ready filled and stamped for signature.

594. Lord De Vesci.—The whole operation of receiving the money is in fact done in your office with the exception of touching the hard cash?—The whole of the calculations are made in our office.

595. The Chairman.—The book you have produced is a day book?—It is an account we keep of each tenant's rent and rentcharge.

596. Colonel Adair.—There are only two entries in each case in the year in this book?—Yes; but before the party go into the Treasurer's office to pay in the cash, the receipt is entered in another book called "The Agency Department Cash Book," which is a check upon the Treasurer's department. Every transaction in the agency office is entered in this book, and it is compared with the Treasurer's book the next morning to see that every entry is duly made. It sometimes occurs that a party goes into the Treasurer's office to pay, and that something arises there to postpone the payment, such as his being short of cash. In that case it might not be paid on that day, and we would have to strike out the entry.

597. Lord De Vesci.—Do you send a docket to the Treasurer's office to enable him to put down under what head this entry should be made?—No. The receipt gives him every information he can require.

598. Colonel Adair.—That is entered by the supernumerary book-keeper in the book-keeper's office?—Yes. This is the book which he keeps.

599. What is the next transaction?—We have similar transactions with regard to the different properties. We have, for example, similar ones with regard to the See estates, but it is scarcely necessary to describe them all in the same way, for they are all much the same.

600. Lord De Vesci.—Is the same mode of proceeding adopted in the suspended benefice department?—Yes, my lord.

601. And with regard to the interest on glebe loan mortgages, and all other matters?—They are all entered in the books in very much the same way. (Another book produced.)

602. The Chairman.—What is this book?—"The Tax Rental."

603. Who makes the calculations for it?—They are all made in the chief clerk's department. He furnishes us each half year with the calculations of sums payable by each clergyman, and we collect it.

604. Lord De Vesci.—Then there are no calculations made of the amount of tax due, in your office?—No; we are furnished with the amounts.

605. When these taxes are transmitted from the country do they come to your office or to the Treasurer's office direct?—To the Treasurer direct.

606. How does he know that the amounts are correct?—He takes out the money and sends in the letter to us, with the amount remitted marked on it, and we make out a proper receipt, and send it in to him.

607. Then the check on the accuracy of this account is in your office?—Yes, we check the account.

608. The Treasurer is, as I take it, merely a ministerial officer?—Yes.

609. You are able to check those payments from the returns furnished to you from the chief clerk's office?—Yes.

610. The Chairman.—Is this a daily book?—It is entered up daily; but it is for half-yearly payments.

611. Lord De Vesci.—With regard to the interest on glebe-house mortgages, do you make any calculations, or in what office is that done?—They are made in our office.

612. Are they the same every year?—No, they vary every year. The interest is only on the balance due after the instalment is paid.

613. Are receipts for subscriptions for enlarging churches and repairs prepared in, or do they come from, your office?—Yes. If a gentleman comes in and says he wishes to lodge £500 for a particular church, we send up to the church works department to see as to the correctness of the sum proposed to be lodged, and if it is all right we fill up a proper receipt for it.

614. The Chairman.—What system do you pursue in regard to disbursements?—We copy out the Treasurer's cash books consecutively, and it is then brought out in our office under the different heads.

615. Lord De Vesci.—Suppose the Treasurer has to pay Dublin Curates stipends, how is he to know what sums he is to pay?—They are all fixed charges, and he gets a schedule of them, and is directed to pay them on certain days, and he does so.

616. From what department does that order come?—The chief clerk's department.

617. From what department would the orders as to curates of suspended benefices come from?—The same department.

618. And from what department would the orders for payment of salaries to incumbents emanate?—From the same department. All these orders for payments come from the same department—namely, from the chief clerk's department.

619. Do the payments made by the Treasurer all come from the agency department?—No.

620. Then the agency office is merely to prepare for the Treasurer what receipts he is to get, and not for the disbursements?—Yes; except with regard to payments of poor-rate, income tax, &c.

621. Then, with the exception of the items you mentioned, the agency department has nothing to do with the disbursements?—Nothing.

622. The Chairman.—I wish to know what your daily duties are?—They are principally looking over the books, and seeing that they are all right, and giving suggestions and advice to the parties who keep them; I direct what answers should be given to this and that letter, and how the accounts of rents and rentcharges should be furnished, &c.

623. How many clerks have you in the agency department distinct from the book-keeping branch of that department?—Three.

624. And your duties are principally consulting with them, and giving opinions?—Yes. I do not keep any of the books, except the books in connexion with my own local agency; I have to correspond with the local agents, and to assist generally in the agency office. For details I would refer to the return of duties of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners clerks, made in 1860.

625. Colonel Adair.—Some of the clerks in the establishment appear to me to be unaccounted for, I would wish to know if there are any special clerks attached to the church works department, and church requisite department, &c.?—Yes, there are clerks belonging to each separate department.

626. Then in fact, certain clerks in the office are detailed off for duty in certain departments?—Yes.

627. Has the Secretary a special clerk?—I believe not.

628. Are the draughtsmen in the Architects' office included in the return of clerks laid before us?—I don't know. Mr. Taylor is in the Architects' department. (The return referred to in this question was then put in evidence, see Appendix E.)

Mr. James Cooper, Church Works Clerk, examined.

Mr. James Cooper.

629. Colonel Adair.—You are, I believe, senior clerk in the church works department?—I am.

630. Is that department under your special control?—Partly.

631. Who are associated with you?—Mr. John Webb and Mr. Edward Winder.

632. Would you be kind enough to detail for us the course of your business?—In the morning we get all the correspondence of the previous day which was laid before the Commissioners, connected with Church works. We look over these documents, and draft the letters in reply to all such as require replies for the approval of the Secretary previous to his signing the same. We also bring to the Secretary all certificates upon which payments are to be made, who enters the same in his book called the Secretary's Book, in which the Commissioners' grants have been previously entered. This book is then sent to the book-keeper, who makes a corresponding entry in his ledger, and initials the entry in the Secretary's book for payment. We subsequently enter the same for payment in the pay-book from the original documents, which is also brought to the Secretary, who compares these entries, and, upon being satisfied of their correctness, initials the entry in the pay-book, which is then initialed by one of the Commissioners for payment by the Treasurer. After that the letters of the day come in; we endorse all those letters, and regulate the correspondence, making reference to the previous minutes bearing upon these letters, so that the Commissioners can refer to these documents as they come before them.

633. Is your duty simply to carry out the minutes or orders of the Commissioners?—Simply as to the correspondence; there may be some letters which we might act on without laying them before the Commissioners, but that would only be in very small matters, indeed.

634. Would you be kind enough to produce your books and explain them to us?—(Books produced.) We do not keep many books in our office, but the correspondence is very large.

635. What book is this?—"The Pay Book." No payments can be made to any clergyman or contractor that does not go through this book, and that are not sanctioned by the Commissioners for payment.

636. Is this book countersigned?—It is first signed by the Secretary, and then by the Commissioners; we make all these entries of payments to the different contractors and clergymen, as the case may be, before it comes before the Secretary.

637. Do you balance these books?—We leave that to the book-keeping department, but we make a monthly tot of the amount of expenditure in each month, which will show, at any time, the amount paid for ordinary repairs, and also for extraordinary repairs.

638. Are there any other items of account that pass through your hands?—All the contractors' accounts pass through our hands.

639. You have probably some abstract in the ledger of these accounts?—We have "The Secretary's Book," and the pay book to which I have referred.

640. The entry requires a further signature from your department, and of the Commissioners?—Yes.

641. Where are the original contractors' papers kept?—In our office.

642. From these original papers the entries in the contractors' ledger are made?—Yes; they are entered in what we call "The Secretary's Book."

643. Does your correspondence undergo any supervision, or does it go out at once from your department?—All the correspondence is signed by the Secretary.

644. Are there any periodical payments, according to the practice of the Commissioners, made to the contractors?—Not as to church repairs, because the contractors are sometimes paid money on account. The Inspector reports that they have executed works to such an amount, and then they are paid so much money on account. In the same way payments are made on account with reference to enlargements and rebuildings. The payments are made when called for, but there may be a greater pressure at one time than at another. We have not what I would call periodical payments for church works, as the Commissioners are frequently obliged to make payments on account. Some contractors are not very rich, and must get money from time to time to carry on the works.

645. Do you recollect the amount of advances generally made to contractors?—That altogether depends on the amount of the work done, but there is always a certain sum kept in hand as a check over the contractor until the end of the work.

646. Lord De Vesci.—In the case of new churches the payments to contractors are large?—Yes.

647. When the work is reported as finished, who calculates the balance that is to be paid to the contractor?—The contractor furnishes his account, and the Inspector of church works checks it, and the Architect must check it also.

648. Is it returned to your office from the Architect's office?—It is.

649. Does the same observation apply to the extensive repairs of churches?—It does to all repairs.

650. Extraordinary repairs come into your office generally from the clergymen?—Generally.

651. Are they also checked in the Architect's office?—They are.

652. Then all payments made in your office must be first ascertained by the Inspector or Architect, or both?—Yes.

653. Colonel Adair.—There are two gentlemen in your office?—Two, and we also have another assistant occasionally.

654. Lord De Vesci.—Do I understand you that the payments passing through your office are not periodical?—They are not. They occur at every period of the year.

The viva voce examination of witnesses was then adjourned sine die.

APPENDIX No. 4.

REPORT of the Earl of MEATH, Viscount DE VESCI, and Colonel R. A. SHAFTO ADAIR, in reference to the BOARD of ECCLESIASTICAL COMMISSIONERS.

The undersigned Commissioners, in pursuance of a resolution adopted at the meeting of the Royal Commission on Wednesday, April 1, proceeded to Dublin for the purpose of investigating the manner in which the Irish Ecclesiastical Commissioners have hitherto conducted the business of their office, and the system pursued in the collection of the revenues derivable from the properties vested in them by the Church Temporalities Act, and the disbursements which under that Act and the amending Acts they have annually to make, as well as to consider whether any alteration should be made in the constitution of the Board.

From the examination of Dr. Gayer (one of the paid Commissioners), and of certain subordinate officers, the Commissioners are of opinion that the system of book-keeping is clear and satisfactory, and that the general business of the office has been carried on efficiently.

They are, however, prepared to recommend certain alterations in the constitution of the staff, and in the arrangement of the duties which devolve upon them, which, while it will insure a thorough amount of efficiency, will also materially tend to reduce present expenses.

1st. They recommend that the constitution of the Board shall be altered, and that in future it consist of:—

The Lord Primate.

The Archbishop of Dublin.

And the following, who are all except one paid Commissioner, to be nominated by the Crown:—

One Bishop from each of the Provinces of Connaught and Munster.

Three laymen and two paid Commissioners, one of whom must have been a practising barrister.

One of the paid Commissioners to be nominated by the Lord Primate.

2ndly. They think that the office of treasurer may safely be dispensed with, and that the paid Commissioners, with the assistance of the Bank of Ireland, should act as treasurers.

3rdly. That the employment of a head clerk in the agency office is unnecessary.

4thly. That the salaries of all the clerks may be remodelled.

5thly. That a different arrangement of the architect's office is desirable by the appointment of a head architect, with the necessary skilled assistance in the office, and by an improved system of local inspection.

6thly. That the per-centage paid for the collection of rentcharges and rents to local agents may be materially reduced, and that the supervision of their rentals and accounts may be improved.

7thly. We also think that there should be an annual audit of the accounts of the Board.

The undersigned have been induced to lay before their brother Commissioners this outline of the framework on which the Ecclesiastical Board, in their estimation, might be efficiently re-modelled, with the view of confiding to it a very extended superintendence and management of the temporalities of the Irish Church.

ALEX. SHAFTO ADAIR.

APPENDIX No. 5.

CORRESPONDENCE between the ESTABLISHED CHURCH (IRELAND) COMMISSIONERS and the BOARD of ECCLESIASTICAL COMMISSIONERS for Ireland, in reference to PERPETUITY GRANTS of LANDS held under the Bishops, Dignitaries, and Commissioners.

---

SIR,

In the course of the investigation held by the Commissioners of the Established Church (Ireland) Commission, into the property of the Church, they have ascertained that many of the tenants holding by leases from the Bishops, and from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, have as yet neglected to avail themselves of the provisions in the Church Temporalities Acts, which enable the conversion of the leaseholds into perpetuities.

With a view to consider whether it might not be expedient to make some variation in the laws regulating the prices paid for the perpetuities, so as to induce the conversion of the leaseholds still remaining unconverted, the Commissioners request that you will obtain for them, from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, information in relation to the following matters:—

1st. In what manner, on the conversion of a lease into a perpetuity, do the Ecclesiastical Commissioners calculate the annual value of the lands and premises, which under the 145th section of 3 & 4 Wm. IV., chap. 37, forms the basis of the calculation of the purchase money?

2nd. Has any variation taken place in the mode of calculating this annual value, and if so, when, and the reason of such change?

3rd. In estimating the value of the fee simple, as directed by the same 145th section, at how many years' purchase, upon the annual value ascertained in the answer to query one, is the fee simple estimated?

4th. Assuming the lease which is about to be converted to be fully renewed for twenty-one years; then for the purpose of deduction of the value of the tenants' interests under the same section—at how many years' purchase is the lease valued, and on what basis of annual value?

5th. Assuming the lease converted to be for lives all in being, how is its value ascertained? It is requested that the Commissioners do furnish an example of actual calculations for the purchase of perpetuities in a lease for years, and in a lease for lives.

I am, sir, your obedient servant, J. FAVIERE ELRINGTON, Secretary.

To the Secretary of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

24, Upper Merrion Street, Dublin, 14th January, 1868.

SIR,

I have the honour to acquaint you for the information of the Commissioners of the Established Church (Ireland) Commission, in answer to the first inquiry in your letter of the 3rd instant, that when the lands are held under an Ecclesiastical Landlord, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners require answers from the Ecclesiastical Landlord to certain queries, a copy of which is herewith sent with the answers applicable to the accompanying Example No. 1, and also require from the party applying for the perpetuity, a Rental and Valuation of his property. If any doubt exists as to the value of the lands for the purpose of the calculation of the terms of purchase, a professional Valuer is employed. When the lands are held under the Ecclesiastical Commissioners a similar course is adopted, with the exception of the issuing of the queries above mentioned.

In answer to the second inquiry, I am directed to state that since the year 1844 a variation has taken place in the mode of calculating the annual value, the reason of which change was that the Board was advised by the Right Honorable Richard Moore, afterwards one of the Judges of the Queen's Bench, the Right Honorable T. B. C. Smith, afterwards Master of the Rolls, and Mr. Richard Wilson Greene, afterwards one of the Barons of the Exchequer, that they should ascertain the full improved annual value—a mode of proceeding which differed from that advised in the year 1835 by the then Law Officers of the Crown, which was to adopt the annual fine as the basis of the full improved annual value.

In answer to the inquiry No. 3, I am to state that the Commissioners have from the first adopted twenty years' purchase of the full improved value, after deducting the Rent to be reserved in the Perpetuity Deed in estimating the value of the fee; and after a long correspondence with the Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council in the year 1846 when the propriety of so valuing it was fully discussed and reconsidered—the Board have, with the concurrence of his Excellency and Council, continued to adopt the same rate ever since.

In answer to the inquiry No. 4, I am to state that the value of the tenant's interest under his lease is ascertained on the same basis of annual value calculated after deducting the rent theretofore payable by him under his lease, at the number of years' purchase represented by the multiple 12·821 in the 5 per cent. column of Inwood's Tables, page 4.

In answer to inquiry No. 5, I am to state that the Commissioners consider that a satisfactory answer can best be given by referring to the example No. 2, herewith furnished with the accompanying papers. And I also furnish in paper No. 1, an example of an actual calculation for the purchase of a perpetuity in a lease for years, and in No. 2, an example of the calculation for the purchase of a perpetuity in a lease for lives.

I am, sir, your obedient servant, ROBERT F. FRANKS, Secretary.

J. F. Elrington, Esq., LL D., Secretary to the Established Church (Ireland) Commission,
3, Lower Ormond Quay.

Established Church (Ireland) Commission,
Dublin, 3, Lower Ormond-quay,
4th March, 1868.

Sir,—I am directed by the Established Church (Ireland) Commissioners to state that meetings in London, to commence on 16th March, have been arranged, and that it would very much conduce to the despatch of business there, if the Ecclesiastical Commissioners would at once give the following information in round numbers:—

1. Gross rental derived by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners from lands.
2. How much of this arises from perpetuities?
3. How much from rents and annual fines?
4. Gross income from tithe-rentcharge now vested in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.
5. Amount received from perpetuity purchases to the end of the year 1844.
6. Amount received since 1st January, 1845, from same.
7. Amount applied, pursuant to Church Temporalities Acts, of perpetuity fund, for Church purposes.
8. Amount of perpetuity fund remaining unexpended, and how invested.

To answer these queries as of the present date might inconvenience the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, from their calculations not being fully made out, and therefore it is suggested that they should select such date as to each subject as their existing calculations respectively reach.

The Commissioners also desire to know, whether the Ecclesiastical Commissioners have ever computed what sum would be produced by the conversion of all leaseholds remaining unconverted into perpetuities; and if such calculation has been made, then in round numbers about how much was anticipated, and whether it is found that of late years the purchase of perpetuities has decreased.

The information sought by this letter is not required to be given with critical accuracy.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

J. Faviere Elrington, Secretary.

To the Secretary of Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

Ecclesiastical Commission,
9th March, 1868.

Sir,—I am directed by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland in reply to your letter of the 4th inst., to state that upon such estimate as they have been able to make within the limits of time allowed them by the Royal Commissioners, the following figures contain the replies to your several queries:—

|---|---|
| Firstly, the rental of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners from lands is | £58,938 |
| Secondly, of which arises from perpetuities, | 32,936 |
| Thirdly, of which arises from rents and annual fines, | 24,993 |
| And from other lands, | 1,009 |
| Fourthly, income from tithe-rentcharge vested in the Commissioners, | 20,465 |
| Fifthly, perpetuity purchase-money received up to 1st August, 1844, | 471,244 |
| Sixthly, perpetuity purchase-money received from 1st August, 1844, to 17th February, 1868, | 168,026 |
| Seventhly, amount of perpetuity fund applied for Church purposes, | 520,867 |

It is to be observed that this £520,867 was spent under the Church Temporalities Acts, in repairing, rebuilding, and enlarging churches (many of which were given up to the Commissioners in nearly a state of ruin), and providing salaries for church officers, and requisites, &c., during the early years of the Board, and before the revenues of the suppressed bishoprics and dignities, and of the suspended benefices, fell in, and livings became taxable on vacancy.

Out of this £520,867 was paid £100,000 with interest, to the Board of Works for loans made to discharge arrears of vestry cess, and to meet current expenses while the Board had no income.

|---|---|
| Eighthly, the amount of perpetuity fund unexpended is calculated at | £138,089 |
| Of which there is in consols £79,493, valued at | 73,400 |
| Outstanding on perpetuity mortgages, at £5 per cent. | 20,766 |
| Outstanding on Glebe-house loan mortgages, | 43,923 |

The Commissioners have in a rough way computed that the sum likely to be produced by the conversion of all leaseholds remaining unconverted into perpetuities would probably be about £400,000, which together with the sales already made would, if realized, somewhat exceed the sum at which the whole was roughly estimated in 1833, which was £1,000,000.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

ROBERT F. FRANKS, Secretary.

APPENDIX No. 6.

QUERIES in relation to the purchase of PERPETUITIES, and answers.

1. Have you, either as Solicitor or Land Agent, had experience of the present system, under which tenants holding Church lands immediately from either the Bishops or the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland, are enabled to purchase perpetuities?
2. Do you consider the present rate of purchase too high?
3. Have you, in the course of your experience, found the tenants unwilling to purchase at the present rate?
4. If there be any fact in connexion with this subject, or any suggestions for the improvement of the existing system, which you are desirous of bringing under the consideration of the Commissioners, you are requested to state it.

ANSWERS of JOHN EDW. VERNON, D.L., LAND AGENT of the Estate of the Earl of PEMBROKE in IRELAND, and for some time LAND AGENT of the SEE of KILMORE.

1. I have had some experience, having been for several years Land Agent to the See of Kilmore, and having also had the management of some property held under leases for twenty-one years, and of some of which the perpetuity has been purchased.

2 and 3. Although the terms are perhaps not absolutely too high, if the presumption be practically admitted that the tenant's interest can at any time be run out by the lessor, they are relatively high, taking into consideration the improbability of the interest being determined, and the small amount of immediate money advantage gained by the purchaser, for, bearing in mind that the rate of purchase varies inversely with the rate of the customary fine, it follows that it is precisely in those cases in which the tenant's interest in the twenty-one years' lease is of most value that it is least for his advantage to purchase, save under the apprehension of his interest being about to be run out, or of his fine being about to be raised.

As I understand the existing law, the tenant can always in either of the above contingencies fall back upon the purchase, and this consideration must in proportion to the small amount of his fine tend to make him indifferent to the purchasing, but anxious to keep his lease fully renewed.

In my opinion the tenure on leases of twenty-one years renewable by custom on payment of fines, which may at any time be varied by the joint action of lessor and lessee is unsound. Where the tenure of the lessor is uncertain, the Ecclesiastical income derivable from these leases must be more or less precarious. It will in many cases be affected by the age or the necessities of the lessor, and the nature of the tenure may lead to a system of bargaining in which the amount to be paid must be decided, not by the value of the premises to be demised, but by the relative circumstances of the contracting parties; necessarily following from this, it will be found in practice that the due proportion of fine to value is by no means uniformly maintained.

Apart from the foregoing consideration, the ecclesiastical tenant, who is generally an intermediate landlord, is debarred from giving such an interest as is calculated to promote improvement on the part of his subtenant, who is always ignorant as to whether his immediate landlord's interest has or has not been renewed, and consequently ignorant of his own position. If it be further had in consideration that previous to fixing the terms upon which a perpetuity will be granted, the Commissioners have the power of obtaining a valuation of the lands to be conveyed, it would appear to follow that it is neither for the interest of the Ecclesiastical tenant, nor yet for that of his subtenant, that any great improvement shall be made on land held on the tenure referred to.

4. I entertain a very strong opinion that all holders of lands leased for twenty-one years should be compelled to purchase on equitable terms (giving to them powers to make the purchase-money a first charge on the lands purchased), and if they declined to do so after a given number of years' notice, I think their leases should not be renewed. Obviously this would make it necessary to provide for the income of the Bishop, where the lands do not form part of a suppressed See, but although out of place here, it would not appear very difficult to suggest the details of a scheme which while making a just provision for the rights of the tenant, and securing the income of the Ecclesiastical Corporation, would place the property to which reference is here more particularly made, upon a basis calculated to secure its more efficient administration, as well as very materially to enhance its value.

I do not know whether the existing tenure of glebe lands comes within the scope of the present inquiry, and I abstain therefore from making any comments upon the general condition of that class of property as far as it has come under my own notice.

Answers of Leonard Dobbin, Solicitor for the See of Armagh.

1. I have as Solicitor from the establishment of the Commissioners under the Act.
2. I do.
3. Yes, and I have been deterred myself from so doing.
4. I consider the refusal of the Commissioners as a public body to give the calculations which they are directed to make in establishing the future rent and rate of purchases highly objectionable. It prevents the tenant from ascertaining any error that may arise thereon or on his own calculation.

Leonard Dobbin, Solicitor,

Answers of John Collum, Solicitor.

1. I have.
2. I do.
3. I have. Several of my clients have so expressed themselves to me. I hold several townlands under the Ecclesiastical Commissioners under different leases, and one under the See of Kilmore, and am very desirous to purchase the perpetuity if sold at a fair and moderate price.
4. I would suggest that the rate of purchase should be reduced (considering that the tenants to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners can now enforce a renewal of their lease within three years); as a further inducement to tenants to obtain perpetuities, I think £3 per cent. would be fair and reasonable interest on the amount of the purchase money to be secured by mortgage on the lands, and that the tenants should have the option of paying off principal and interest by half-yearly instalments, say in twenty-two years; this would give a large additional income to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners without loss to any person, and would give the tenants a more secure interest, and be a great encouragement to the toties quoties undertenants to improve their lands.

I would also suggest that the Ecclesiastical Commissioners should be obliged to state to their tenants the basis upon which they make out the sum demanded for the purchase; at present they decline to give any information on the subject.

Answers of Godfrey Fetherston-H., formerly Solicitor to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland.

1. I have.
2. Not always so. But by reason of there not being a uniform system of valuation it sometimes appears unequal, as different valuators take different views. If one valuation such as the Ordnance or Government valuation were uniformly adopted, I think it would be more satisfactory.
3. I cannot say I have. I have heard conversations on the subject occasionally.
4. I think it would be advantageous to introduce measures to coerce the lessees of Church lands to purchase perpetuities in their respective holdings, and thus enlarge the funds of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners by the interest on the purchase-money, and insure regularity of income by abolishing fines and converting them into rent. I think the lessees might without injustice be compelled to purchase. Their doing so would eventually, if not immediately, be advantageous to their own properties. This compulsory purchase should in the first instance be confined to the tenants in suppressed Sees, and by allowing them a certain number of years, say five or seven, to come in voluntarily and purchase, with liberty to mortgage for the purchase-money at 3½ per cent. if desired, it would not seem unreasonable in default of their doing so within that time, to prohibit the Commissioners from granting further renewals, with a provision empowering the Ecclesiastical Commissioners or some other tribunal to enlarge the time in cases of tenants for life or other shorter term, holding under settlements or wills bearing date or taking effect prior to the date of the Act of Parliament to be passed.

By this means the compulsory purchase would only come into operation when the interest in the lease was vested in some person who would really be benefited by the improved tenure of the property.

It will be observed that the above suggestion has reference only to tenants in suppressed Sees, the reason of this is obvious, for if Bishops or other ecclesiastical landlords were prohibited from renewing after the expiration of the five or seven years, it would be necessary to provide for payment to them of the fines which they would otherwise have been entitled to receive if left at liberty to grant such renewals.

In the continuing Bishoprics it would seem expedient that the prohibiting clauses should be postponed until after the next avoidance of the See, and not then be brought into operation in any See until the Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council, upon the recommendation of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners should so direct.

By this means the several continuing Bishoprics might be taken in succession according as the perpetuity fund might be enabled to bear the expense of paying the fines properly payable on each lease which the Bishop might be prohibited from renewing, and provision might be made for repaying to the perpetuity fund all advances made thereout for such fines with interest, out of the increased rents to be obtained for the lands on the expiration of such leases, and for the application of such increase in future.

It is most probable that the sums required would be very small, for it would be the interest of every tenant to purchase unless such tenant held only for life under a settlement or will, and the power to postpone the purchase in such cases would prevent any injustice, and thus in a few years the whole evil of renewable leases would be done away with, and a very large fund would be accumulated, the income of which would be available for the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, whilst the enlarged tenure of the tenants would induce improvements on lands held under ecclesiastical leases, and take away the reproach that such lands are in general the worst cultivated and least improved in the country.

Answers of Henry Milner, Land Agent, of the See of Armagh.

1. There has been only one purchase of a perpetuity in the See of Armagh since I have been Agent. The arrangements are entirely between the tenants and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who merely send the Primate formal notice. As former agent for the See of Kilmore, the same course was adopted in two cases of purchase of perpetuity which occurred there.

2 and 3. I hear that some tenants have been anxious to take out perpetuities, but declined on learning the terms. They are generally thought to be too high.

4. I can offer no suggestion in reference to this subject. The tenants will not purchase perpetuities unless they can obtain more favourable terms.

Henry B. W. Milner,
Agent for the See of Armagh.

Answers of Thomas Crozier, Solicitor.

1. I have had considerable experience, as a Solicitor, of the present system.

2. I think it is much too high.

3. I have frequently found tenants unwilling to purchase at the present rate charged for perpetuity grants. Indeed, I have known parties of great intelligence, and of the highest respectability and position, after incurring much expense in endeavouring to obtain from the Commissioners renewals or grants in perpetuity on what they considered and were advised were fair and reasonable terms, to eventually abandon the taking out of either grants or renewals, and to surrender the possession of the lands to the Commissioners, in consequence of the excessive sums required to be paid as the consideration for such grants or renewals.

4. I beg to remark, that I think the tenants have at present good cause for complaining that they are not furnished from the office of the Commissioners on application with a statement of the basis on which the account of the renewal, and also of the perpetuity fines demanded by the Commissioners, is made out.

I have never known such information to be afforded by the Commissioners, even though repeatedly and most respectfully requested, and with good and proper reasons, in my opinion, assigned for requiring it.

I respectfully submit that the Commissioners should, on such application being made by their tenants, at once furnish such information, the absence of which not only frequently prevents renewals or perpetuity grants being taken out, but renders it quite impossible for the immediate tenants of the Commissioners to ascertain what proportion they are fairly and reasonably entitled to get back from their own tenants holding by lease, with toties quoties covenants, on their executing renewals or sub-grants in perpetuity to such tenants.

I also think it would be judicious to give the tenants holding under the Commissioners the right of purchasing up the rents reserved by the perpetuity grants. But this should be done on some defined rate of purchase, such as the rate charged for the purchase of Crown rents, and should not be left solely to the discretion of the Commissioners.

I have never had the honour of an interview with the Commissioners; at the same time I have pleasure in stating that I invariably received the most kind and polite attention, not only from the late secretary (Mr. Bushe) in his lifetime, but also from Mr. Franks, the present secretary of the Board.

Thomas Crozier,

APPENDIX No. 7.

Observations upon the Laws regulating the Leasing and Granting in Perpetuity of Lands belonging to Ecclesiastical Persons and Corporations.

Dr. Ball.

The annual income derived by the Established Church in Ireland from lands let to tenants, exceeds £200,000: but so far as the property of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, Bishops, Dignitaries, and Corporations aggregate (forming by far the largest portion of Church lands), this income bears a small proportion to the actual value of the soil as held by the occupying cultivators. In these lands, too, the custom of renewing the chief or immediate lease having become established, there ensued a system of subletting, with an engagement to renew on each new extension of the tenure. Leases of this kind are known as leases with toties quoties covenants for renewal. Thus it often happens that between the Church and the cultivator there are several distinct derivative interests, each depending for its continuance upon the continuance of the next superior interest. And in this manner it occurs, that the laws regulating the tenure of lands belonging to ecclesiastical persons and corporations affect not only a large extent of property, but a great variety also of interests subsisting in, and maintained by, that property.

At common law, the right to lease or alienate lands belonging to the Church was as follows:—Corporations aggregate, such as deans and chapters, masters and fellows of collegiate bodies, might of themselves, and without obtaining the consent of any other authority, lease or grant away the lands belonging to the corporation, in any manner that the corporate body thought fit. Corporations sole, such as bishops, deans, dignitaries, rectors, and vicars, could lease or alien, provided they had certain confirmations or consents—the bishops, with confirmation of their respective deans and chapters, and parsons and vicars with consent of their respective patrons and ordinaries.

The result of this state of the law was that the Church property in Ireland was improvidently leased and often wholly alienated.

To remedy the evil, and prevent the impoverishment of the Church, the Act 10 & 11 Car. I. ch. 3 (Irish) was passed, by which this power of leasing and alienating without limit was taken away; and in lieu thereof was substituted a power for bishops, deans, deans and chapters, archdeacons, prebendaries, and other ecclesiastical dignitaries, and for masters and governors of colleges and hospitals, to lease for twenty-one years their lands (excepting their dwelling-houses and demesnes) whereof there should be no other lease or estate then in being which should not expire or be ended and determined within one year then next coming, at a moiety of the true value, to be ascertained as provided by the Act. And in the case of houses (not their dwellings) situate in cities, towns corporate, or market towns, to lease for forty years, at a like rent of half value.

By the Act 35 Geo. II. ch. 23 (Irish) the enabling powers of the 10th & 11th Car. II. were further extended, and the same persons as mentioned in the former Act were empowered to take a surrender of existing leases, and make the same leases as under the former Act, upon reserving not the half value as rent, but such rent as had been paid for twenty years preceding the lease.

By the Acts 14 and 15 Car. II. ch. 2, and 17 & 18 Car. II. ch. 2, Bishops are enabled to lease their augmentation lands (that is, lands granted to certain bishoprics by the Act of Settlement of Charles II.) for three lives or twenty-one years.

It will be observed that while the disabling clauses in this code extended to parsons and vicars, the enabling did not; and consequently no parson or vicar could, of his own authority, lease, much less alienate, so as to bind his successor.

Under the system established by these statutes, the leasing of the property of ecclesiastical persons and corporations aggregate, (except such as, like the Vicars Choral of St. Patrick's Cathedral, were held to be lay corporations, and outside the statutes,) continued down to the passing of the Church Temporalities Acts; and under the same system, but subject to some modification from provisions contained in these Acts, which will be afterwards mentioned, the leasing still continues.

A bishop or a dignitary could lease at the old accustomed rent to the tenant for twenty-one years, and in the case of augmentation lands, for three lives, taking whatever fine he could obtain; and he could do this every year, the new lease operating as a legal surrender of the old. He could, also, if he chose, run his life (as it used to be expressed) against the existing lease; and when that had expired by efflux of time, he could make a lease to a member of his family, or to a trustee for himself; but this should be at half value. On the other hand, the tenant could also let his lease run on without renewing, and take the chance that as the Bishop grew older, he would be glad to take a less fine than ought to have been paid, lest by dying he should lose it altogether.

The usual habit, however, in leases for twenty-one years under the bishops, was to renew annually; and by degrees there grew up a nearly uniform mode of estimating the annual fine in see lands, namely, in all dioceses except Armagh it was calculated at one-fifth of the profit rents received by the tenant, after deducting the rent paid to the bishops, and not debiting the tenants with the value of their buildings. In the case of the Armagh lands, the fine was one-eighth instead of one-fifth.

To meet the variation in the value of lands, revised valuations were from time to time made of the profits derived by the tenants from them; but these were generally at long intervals from each other, seldom by surveyors, and more generally according to returns by the tenants themselves. At present in some dioceses a very lengthened period has elapsed since there has been any general valuation. Very much the same system prevailed as to the lands of the other ecclesiastical persons, who were by the Act of Charles empowered to lease. When the lease was for forty years, as it might be of houses in a town, or for three lives, as it might be of the augmentation lands of certain bishops, the renewals generally were at long intervals; in the former cases sometimes every seven or fourteen or twenty years. When these cases of long intervals occurred, the fines were calculated to meet the times of payment.

This system was open to many objections. It created great uncertainty in the incomes of ecclesiastical persons. The present incumbent might be deprived of his fines or a large portion of them during his life, and his successor receive the whole amount with interest in one sum. On the other hand, the tenant and his subtenants again, after great expenditure on the lands, and family arrangements on the faith of the accustomed right of renewal, might lose all, by a young bishop running his life against the lease. This insecurity of tenure discouraged improvements. Besides, the whole system of bargaining and trafficking about renewals and the fines to be paid from time to time, was unsuitable to the habits and functions of ecclesiastical persons.

In the year 1833 was passed the first of several statutes known as the Church Temporalities' Acts, the Act 3 and 4 William IV., chap. 37. This Act contained provisions whereby all tenants holding immediately from the bishops, or other sole ecclesiastical corporations in Ireland, or from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, for terms of twenty-one years, or of three lives, or of forty years, were empowered to purchase a conveyance of a perpetual estate in their lands subject to a fee-farm rent. This rent is ascertained by adding together the rent payable under the lease which is about to be converted into a perpetuity and the average renewal fines ascertained as directed by the Act. It is liable to vary with the average price of wheat or oats; a standard price of either grain (whichever of the two shall be most grown in the district where the lands are situate) being stated in the conveyance; such variation to be applied for and ascertained in the manner pointed out in the 142nd section of the 3rd and 4th William IV., chap. 37.

The price to be paid for the purchase of a perpetuity grant is directed by the 145th section of the same statute, to be calculated as follows:—The Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland are to ascertain, by issuing a commission of valuation, or otherwise, as they think fit, the full and improved yearly value of the lands, estimated in the usual and accustomed mode of estimating same adopted by the bishop or corporation sole, in whose diocese, dignity, or promotion the lands are situate.

Taking the excess of this estimate of annual value above the rent to be reserved as the basis of calculation, they are then to find the value of the fee. Then they are to allow £4 per centum on this value of the fee-simple; and from the sum thus estimated they are to deduct the value of the existing lease. The balance is the purchase-money to be paid. The calculation in each case is to be submitted to the Lord Lieutenant in Council for approbation.

The Ecclesiastical Commissioners having in this manner fixed the sum to be paid, certify the amount to the tenant; and on his lodging the sum certified in the Bank of Ireland to the credit of an account directed by the Act to be opened by the Commissioners, and to be called the "Perpetuity Purchase Fund Account," the fee-farm grant is executed by them.

If the tenant is dissatisfied with the price certified, he may compel a reference to arbitration in the manner provided by the 145th section.

In cases where the owners of derivative interests could have compelled a renewal of their subleases, they can be compelled to contribute to the purchase-money paid by the immediate tenant according to their interests, on pain of forfeiting the right of renewal. And subtenants holding by leases with toties quoties covenants of renewal, can, on contributing to the purchase-money paid by their immediate landlord for his perpetuity, obtain from him a subgrant in fee-farm, subject to a rent ascertained and varying in the manner provided by the statutes.

As in order to purchase, it is necessary that the lease should be fully renewed, provision is made whenever the fine has been for some time in arrear, to compel the bishop or other landlord to accept the proper sum for his fines, according to the customary estimate, with special clauses to meet cases in which the fines have been irregularly paid. Thus by buying the fee, the tenant can always compel his landlord to renew.

With the object of facilitating purchases of the fee, the statutes enable the tenant, whether chief or subordinate, even although under disability, to mortgage the lands for the purchase-money, in priority to all other charges and incumbrances.

The Act 23 and 24 Vic., chap. 158, makes provision for inserting in the grants of perpetuities, proper clauses to secure an additional rent or royalty, in case mines shall afterwards be discovered and worked.

It will be observed that the lands of corporations aggregate, though generally let on the same principle as bishops' lands, are omitted from the provisions enabling the acquisition of a perpetual interest. But there seems no sound reason for this distinction; and it is scarcely just to the tenants to place them in a more disadvantageous position than those of See lands.

Assuming a fair price charged for the fee—this system, so far as the tenant of lands to which it applies is concerned, sufficiently protects his interest. The bishop or other ecclesiastical landlord can no longer run his life against the lease; the tenant can always buy the perpetuity, and as part of the process of purchase compel his landlord to take the proper sum for any fines due. But it does not by any means make so satisfactory provision for the benefit of the ecclesiastical landlord; for there being no time limited within which the tenant is to purchase, and no obligation on him to renew, he may let his fines go in arrear as much as he thinks fit. Thus the incumbent prelate or other ecclesiastical landlord may be deprived of the arrears, and his successor receive the whole accumulation.

The Ecclesiastical Commissioners state that for some years after the constitution of their Board they estimated the annual value, which, under the 145th section of the 3rd & 4th Wm. IV., c. 37, is the basis of the calculation of price, by taking the fine payable by the tenant of the lease to be converted, and, in Armagh, multiplying it by eight, and in all other dioceses by five. In most of the dioceses the result was an estimate very much below the real annual value, because in most, the valuation on which the fine was received was old, and made in a superficial manner. This mode of proceeding was according to advice received as to the construction of the statute, in 1835, from the law officers of that time. It was continued in practice down to the year 1844. In that year the Commissioners were advised by the then law officers that the mode previously adopted was erroneous, and that the true annual value was to be ascertained, and to form the basis of the calculation. Accordingly since that period this has been done; and, either by obtaining from the tenant his own rental, or by adding a proper proportion to the official valuation, known as the Tenement valuation, or by an actual survey and valuation by a professional person, a fair estimate of the true annual value, exclusive, however, of buildings, is, on every purchase, obtained.

From this estimate of the annual value, the fee-farm rent to be reserved in the grant is deducted, and twenty years' purchase of the surplus is allowed as the value of the fee. The value of the leasehold with which the tenant is to be credited, is found by allowing such a number of years' purchase of the tenants' profit rent, as is given in the most approved tables of calculation for an annuity or annual profit rent, for the same term of lives or years. But from the examples of calculations supplied by the Commissioners, the estimate appears to be upon the basis of allowing £5 per cent. for money. In the case of a lease for twenty-one years (the most usual term of lease), the number of years' purchase allowed is represented by the multiplier 12·821.

The inquiries instituted by the present Commission, show that considerable dissatisfaction exists with the rate of purchase, which is now required by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. There is no doubt that since the change which, in 1844, was made in the mode of calculating the price to be paid for the perpetuity, there has been much less willingness to purchase. It is computed by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners that the amount received from the conversion of leaseholds into perpetuities up to 1st August, 1844, was £471,244; and from that period to the present time £168,026. The fee-farm rents paid to ecclesiastical landlords by all lands converted into perpetuities amount to about £72,000 per annum; and the amount of annual income received by ecclesiastical landlords from leaseholds, which are capable of being converted into perpetuities, and have not been converted, may be estimated at £66,000 per annum.

The right of purchasing a perpetuity of tenure having been once conceded by the Legislature, cannot now be withdrawn without injustice, not merely to the immediate tenants, but also to all the derivative and subordinate interests which, on the faith of the right, have been created or continued. Assuming this, it is plain that to fix the rate of purchase so high as to discourage the tenant from buying is disadvantageous to the interests of the Church; for the price, whatever be its amount, if paid, is a gain; if withheld, a loss for ecclesiastical purposes. Viewed with regard to social interests it is equally objectionable. Without a perpetuity grant there is no security for the subtenants, or finally for the cultivators of the soil in the improvement of their lands. They may pay the rent or fine, or fulfil any other condition imposed by their immediate landlord, but unless the tenant of the bishop or dignitary keeps his lease renewed—and they have no power to compel him to do so—all the fruits of their expenditure may ultimately be lost.

It is difficult to fix upon a just measure of the price which ought to be required for the conversion of an ecclesiastical leasehold into a Perpetuity. The leasehold is not a mere leasehold for the specified term; but such a leasehold with a customary right of annual renewal on very moderate terms. Practically, therefore, the tenant, especially with the usual term of twenty-one years, does not gain as much as might upon a first consideration of the subject be supposed. If instead of buying the fee, a tenant holding for twenty-one years, chooses to go on renewing with his landlord for the customary fine every year, he for practical purposes is in many respects as well circumstanced. He always has his twenty-one years tenure in advance. The aggregate amount of annual rent, fine, and fees, which he has to pay, is the same as his fee-farm rent, if he obtains a Perpetuity. No doubt his fine is liable to be raised upon a new valuation of the profits of his lease; but so also, may the rent reserved in the perpetuity grant fluctuate with the price of corn ascertained at septennial periods. The perpetuity grant, however, frees him from the yearly expense of renewal leases; he is protected from future legislative interference with his tenure; and there is a difference in estimation in the land-market for loans, or sales, between a tenure that depends on periodical payments for its continuance, and a tenure that is itself necessarily permanent.

In the example of calculation for a lease of twenty-one years, furnished by the Commissioners (Appendix, page 57), the price certainly bears a large proportion to the value of the entire property—more than one-fourth. An estimate has been made of what would have been the price if the annual value were computed according to the system adopted by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners down to 1844, i.e. by multiplying the customary fine by eight. The annual value would then have been taken at £337 5*s.* 4*d.* instead of £462 17*s.* 2*d.*, and the profit on which the twenty years' purchase for the fee is calculated at £273 11*s.* 3*d.* instead of £418 11*s.* 10*d.*, and the purchase-money would have been £1,177 10*s.* 4*d.*

The objections made by the tenants to the present system are, however, not merely to the amount, but also to the ex parte character and expense, of the estimate of annual value, and to the concealment of the calculations on which the price asked by the Commissioners is based. They also complain, that in the estimate of annual value, they are charged with their own improvements, no matter how recent or unexhausted. These objections would be removed, if not entirely, certainly to a great extent, by adopting the Tenement valuation as the standard of annual value. It is accessible to every one; made by an independent and impartial authority; and below the full improved value in a degree sufficient in most instances to leave out of the estimate recent improvements. Its adoption would also facilitate the calculations of the contributions towards the purchase-money payable by each subordinate leasehold with toties quoties covenant, to its immediate landlord.

The letting of the lands of rectors, vicars, and other parochial incumbents, seems to be at present regulated by the following statutes:—

By the Act 14 and 15 Vic., chap. 73, section 57, rectors, vicars, and incumbents are prohibited from leasing their glebes, when either suitable to build thereon a glebe-house, or having such house actually built thereon, to the extent of twenty acres; but the excess above that, or glebe unsuitable for a glebe-house, they may, with consent of the bishop, lease for a term not exceeding thirty-one years, in immediate possession without fine, at the best rent.

By the Act 20 and 21 Vic. ch. 47, building leases of glebe lands in or near towns, for ninety-nine years, may be made with such consents as therein.

By the Act 23 and 24 Vic., chap. 153, any limited owner (and the words are defined to include any body corporate, any corporation sole, ecclesiastical or lay), may grant agricultural leases for a term not exceeding twenty-one years; improvement leases, with the sanction of the Chairman of the county, for a term not exceeding forty-one years; building leases, with like sanction of the Chairman, for a term not exceeding ninety-nine years; and power is also given to a Judge of the Landed Estates Court to sanction leases for building for such longer period as he shall direct.

Bishops empowered to unite vacant benefices to benefices which are full. 4 & 5. W. iv., c. 90, ss. 5, 7. 7 & 8 G. iv., c. 43, s. 21. And, with certain consents, to divide benefices which are full.

Every vacancy of a benefice in the collation of a Bishop shall be reported to the Commissioners by such Bishop, with a written statement of his reasons for recommending that—

(1.) Such Benefice be united to another or other parishes, or to a part of another or parts of other parishes, or that it

(2.) Ought to be divided, or

(3.) Filled up without being divided, or united to any other parish.

Before a Bishop shall collate a clerk to any Benefice, the Commissioners shall,—

(1.) Examine into its situation, income, and population, and

(2.) Into the situation, incomes, and population of the adjoining and neighbouring parishes; and

(3.) Certify that such benefice ought to be divided, or

(4.) United to another, and to what other parish or parishes, or part or parts of other parishes; or

(5.) Filled up without being divided, or united to any other parish.

Commissioners to examine into and certify the fitness of union or division.

Notice shall be given to the Bishop of the diocese of any meeting at which the Commissioners shall take such benefice into consideration; and such Bishop shall have a right to be present thereat and in respect of such benefice shall at such meeting possess the powers of an Ecclesiastical Commissioner for Ireland.

Bishop to be associated with the Commissioners. 3 & 4 W. iv., c. 37, s. 117.

If the Commissioners recommend a union or division of a benefice in the collation of a Bishop, he shall make an order in compliance therewith; and such order shall recite the recommendation of the Commissioners.

Bishop to order union or division.

Within fourteen days after making the order of such union or division, the Bishop shall report the same, together with the reasons for making such union or division, to the Lord Lieutenant in Council; and if such union or division be not disapproved by the Lord Lieutenant in Council within six weeks from the date of such order being received at the Council Office in Dublin Castle, such order shall be valid; but every Episcopal union or division of parishes which shall not be so reported, or which shall be within such period disapproved, shall be void.

Order to be submitted to Lord Lieutenant in Council. 7 & 8 G. iv., c. 43, s. 21.

No collation to a benefice continuing undivided, or to a benefice continuing ununited to another parish, shall be valid, unless the Commissioners have certified their approval of its not being divided or united to another parish; or unless the Lord Lieutenant in Council have disapproved of the order for uniting or dividing such benefice.

Collation void unless Commissioners have certified their Approval. 4 & 5 W. iv., c. 90, s. 9.

If by reason of the uniting of a parish or part of a parish to another the net income of the union (after deducting the cost of collecting such income, and the tax payable to the Commissioners, and all the charges allowed for its assessment) shall exceed the annual sum of £500, the incumbent shall pay over to the Commissioners the surplus, and the Commissioners shall carry such payment to their general account.

If net income of union exceed £500, the surplus above that sum to be paid over to the Commissioners. 3 & 4 W. iv., c. 37, s. 54.

Provided, that if a parish be united to a parish which is full of an Incumbent, and the net income thereof, after deducting the tax payable thereon, exceeds £500, the Incumbent of such Union shall only pay over to the Commissioners the full amount of the income of the parish so united to his former benefice, after deducting the cost of collecting such income and the salary of a Curate (which shall not be less than £100 per annum), and the income of his benefice shall not by reason of the formation of such union be reduced in value.

A full parish shall not be reduced in value by reason of its union with another.

Benefices inadequately endowed, in which, owing to the largeness of the population, the spiritual duties are onerous, may be augmented by the Commissioners up to the amount of three hundred pounds per annum; and benefices in which the spiritual duties are so onerous that, in the judgment of the Bishop of the diocese and the Archbishop of the province, the assistance of a Curate is indispensable to their due discharge, may be augmented by the Commissioners up to the amount of four hundred pounds per annum, out of which one hundred pounds shall be paid as a salary to such Curate; and the claims of such benefices to be augmented shall have precedence of other

Benefices with onerous duties to be augmented to £300; if assistance of a Curate be required, augmented to £400, of which £100 to be the

Churches and Glebe Houses in Unions.

If two churches in a union, one of them shall be a chapel of ease.

If there be a parish church in each of the parishes united under this Act, the Bishop of the diocese shall direct which shall be the parish church of the union, and the other church shall be a chapel of ease thereto.

Glebe house of new parish to be the glebe house of the union.

If in a parish united to an adjoining or neighbouring parish there be a glebe house, and if there be no glebe house in the parish to which it is united, the Incumbent of the union shall reside in such glebe house as the house of residence of the union, if the Bishop so direct; or such house may, with the approval of the Bishop, be let by the Incumbent to a tenant; and if there be a charge upon the benefice in respect of such glebe house, the Incumbent of the union shall be liable for its payment.

Apportionment of charge for building or improving glebe house. 7 & 8 G. iv., c. 43, s. 5.

If there be a glebe house in a benefice divided under this Act, the Bishop of the diocese shall by an order determine the proportions of any existing charge in respect of such house which shall be borne by the respective Incumbents of the parishes to which portions of such benefice have been united; and the Bishop shall also determine the proportion of procurations and synodals, and of salary for the diocesan schoolmaster, which the respective Incumbents shall pay; and the order determining such payments shall be submitted to the Lord Lieutenant in Council at the same time with the order for the division of such benefice.

If there be two glebe houses in a union, one of them shall be occupied by the Curate, or shall be let to a tenant.

If any parish or part of a parish which contains a glebe house be united to a parish which also contains a glebe house, the Incumbent of the union shall be allowed (subject to the approval of the Bishop) to reside in either of such glebe houses; and the glebe house which shall not be occupied by the Incumbent shall, at the discretion of the Bishop, be assigned to the Curate as a residence; and the Bishop shall, out of the revenues of the parish, allocate a sum to be applied to the annual repairs of such house, which sum so allotted for repairs shall be deducted in estimating the net income of the union for the assessment of the tax to be paid to the Commissioners; or the Incumbent of the union may, with the consent of the Bishop, let such glebe house to a tenant.

Incumbents may be compelled to exchange glebe land for building on. 14 & 15 Vict., c. 73, ss. 38, 43.

The Bishop of the diocese shall be empowered to compel the Incumbent (if need be by sequestration of the benefice) to exchange glebe lands, which are inconveniently situated, and to accept in exchange other land suitable for the building of a glebe house; and in such exchanges of land the provisions contained in the sections numbered 38 to 43, both inclusive, of the Act of the fourteenth and fifteenth years of the Queen, chapter 73, shall be incorporated in this Act, as far as they shall be applicable and not inconsistent therewith.

Bishop may sequester a vacant parish until funds be accumulated to build a glebe house without liability to lapse.

If any benefice shall become void in which there is not a glebe house, the Bishop of the diocese, with the concurrence of the Archbishop of the province, shall be empowered to sequester such parish, placing it in charge of a Curate, until a sufficient sum be accumulated for the building or purchase of a glebe house; and during such sequestration no lapse of the right of presentation to such benefice shall occur.

Church Temporalities Acts incorporated with this Act.

The Act passed in the third and fourth years of his late Majesty King William IV., chapter 37, and any Act amending and extending the same, shall, so far as their provisions are applicable and not modified by or inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, be incorporated with and construed as forming part of this Act.

Observations on the Union, Division, and Augmentation of Benefices, accompanying Draft Bill.

Union.

There are two reasons for uniting together parishes which adjoin or are near each other. One is because a single parish may not have an income sufficient for the support of an Incumbent, and therefore, in order to provide an adequate maintenance for a minister, two or perhaps three small parishes have to be held in union. This was the chief reason for uniting parishes in former times; and it is recited in the preambles of the Statutes 14 & 15 Chas. II., c. 10, and 2 Geo. I., c. 14.

Another reason for uniting parishes together is the fewness of the members of the Church within their bounds, not affording sufficient employment for a minister. The effect on his own mind of being placed in a position where he has not work enough to occupy him is most injurious to a clergyman. Young men of energy and promise decline to be located in such benefices.

Examples of benefices of this kind can be pointed to in the Diocese of Armagh and County of Louth.

When placed in charge of parishes with few members of the Established Church, clergymen pine and become dissatisfied, and long to be removed to a sphere in which they would have more than two or three families to minister to.

The counties within the old English pale furnish a great many instances of parishes of this kind, very small in extent and with a population greatly diminished.

Two Kinds of Unions.

There are two kinds of unions of parishes (1) perpetual, formed by the Lord Lieutenant in Council, and (2) terminable, formed by the Bishop of the diocese.

1. Under Statutes 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 43, s. 1, and the first amendment of the Church Temporalities Act, 4 & 5 Gul. IV., c. 90, s. 5, and 8 & 9 Vict., c. 54, and 11 & 12 Vict., c. 41, the Lord Lieutenant in Council (six at least consenting) may, with the advice and approval of the Archbishop of the province and the Bishop of the diocese, unite parishes together, or part of a parish to another. These unions are perpetual, and are called "real." An Order in Council being necessary, the Law Officers and the Officers of the Council are entitled to fees thereon, which are heavy. They must be paid by the Bishop, for there is no one else to pay them. This has occasioned a difficulty in making use of the Statutes above cited.
2. Bishops can unite parishes together, and such unions subsist only during the incumbency of the existing Incumbent, and on his avoiding the benefice the parishes become again separate. Every such union must (under the provisions of 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 43, s. 21), be previously notified to the Lord Lieutenant in Council, with a statement of the reasons for uniting the parishes; and if not disapproved of within six weeks after notice has been received at the Council Office, the union is valid. As in such cases no Order in Council is required, fees are not payable to the Law Officers.

Advantage of Episcopal Unions.

When the country is in a transition state, as it is evident that Ireland now is, it is more desirable to make episcopal unions, which fall to pieces again at the next avoidance, than to make perpetual unions by Orders in Council, which would require another equally expensive order to dissolve them. The changes of population arising from emigration and from alterations in tillage, and from the introduction of factories, are such that a union which would at present be advantageous might become in ten years hence an injury to the Church.

It is desirable, therefore, that on every avoidance of a union the Bishop should be obliged to review the circumstances of the parishes which had been united, and reconsider the reasons for uniting them again.

And further, it is to be observed that private patronage in the advowsons of parishes raises a difficulty in the way of making perpetual unions, for the turns of presentation of the patrons must be settled by the Orders in Council, so as to satisfy the parties, often a very troublesome matter. Whereas, if a Bishop should find that the lay patron has made choice of a suitable clerk to fill a parish on the present occasion, he may be glad to commit to the care of such an Incumbent an adjoining parish in his collation, without being bound when a vacancy occurs to revive the union should the lay patron make a less suitable selection of an Incumbent.

Defect of Episcopal Unions.

A Bishop can, as the law now stands, unite only vacant parishes together. He cannot unite a parish that is vacant to a parish that is full of an Incumbent. Hence a great delay occurs in the forming of unions, although they manifestly ought to be made. The parish of A. ought to be, as everyone agrees, united to the parish of B., but the Rev. Mr. C., (rector of A.) is alive when the Rev. Mr. D. (rector of B.) dies, and the Rev. Mr. C.'s successor is alive when Mr. D. dies, and Mr. D.'s successor is alive when Mr. C.'s successor dies, and unless both of the parishes are void at one and the same time, the union cannot be formed by the Bishop.

This defect the Bill proposes to remedy by enabling a Bishop to unite a benefice which is vacant to any adjoining or neighbouring benefice, the Incumbent of which is alive, provided that the Incumbent consents to accept the charge of the additional parish; and provided the patrons of both the parishes give their consent to the union. This amendment of the law would greatly facilitate the uniting of parishes together.

Financial Effect of Unions.

The immediate effect of uniting parishes together, viewed financially, is to produce a better income for the Incumbents. A clergyman who was struggling to support a family on, say £220 a year, if an adjoining one of equal value were united to his parish, would be able to give £100 a year to a curate, if need be, to serve the second church, and would have an increased income for his own maintenance. There is a further advantage would arise from it, inasmuch as a tax on the united parishes would be paid to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, which would be available for the augmentation of poorly endowed benefices elsewhere.

All parishes under £300 a year are exempt from the tax payable to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. Livings of £300 pay a tax of £2 10*s.* per cent.; of £305 pay £2 15*s.* per cent.; of £315 pay £3 per cent., and so on, rising gradually in the per-centage on the value of the livings.

It is evident then that two parishes which when held separately contributed nothing to the common fund at the disposal of the Commissioners would, if united, become liable to a tax. In this way the revenues of the Ecclesiastical Board would be increased, and their power of helping impoverished Incumbents would be enlarged.

Enforcement of Unions.

In order to secure the carrying into effect the provisions of the Bill respecting the uniting of parishes, it is proposed that the Bishops shall be required to report to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners every vacancy that occurs of benefices to which they have the right of collating. As the law stands (4 & 5 Gul. IV., c. 90, s. 9), a Bishop must report to the Commissioners every vacancy of appropriate parishes, and cannot fill up any such vacancy until a month has elapsed after giving notice, in order that the Commissioners may have an opportunity of considering whether such appropriate benefice ought to be subdivided or altered. This provision of the First Amendment of the Church Temporalities Act, it is now proposed to extend to all benefices in the collation of Bishops. It is not intended to apply this rule to parishes in the gift of lay patrons, as their rights of property are not to be in any way infringed by this Bill.

When reporting a vacancy, the Bishop is to state whether he recommends that the benefice should be united to another, or should be divided, or should be filled up as it stands, without being divided, or without being united to another parish.

The Commissioners have in their office returns of the value of every benefice in Ireland. They can ascertain at a glance the income of the vacant living. The Ordnance Maps show them its extent, and that of the parishes which surround it on every side. They know the Incomes of those parishes also. The Census Returns of the Religious Persuasions will be accessible to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. So that they have all the materials at hand for forming a judgment as to the propriety of uniting the vacant benefice to another, or of refraining from doing so.

As the law now stands (3 & 4 Gul. IV., c. 37, ss. 116, 117), the Commissioners are empowered, if they see fit, to suspend the appointment of Incumbents to benefices in which Divine worship was not celebrated for three years preceding 1st February, 1833; and on the occasion of considering the propriety of suspending any such benefice, the Bishop of the diocese is to be associated with the Commissioners, and is pro hâc vice constituted a member of the Board. It is proposed to extend this provision of the Church Temporalities Act; and whenever the expediency of uniting a vacant benefice to another is under the consideration of the Commissioners, the bishop of the diocese is to receive notice, and to be associated with them in deciding upon the question.

It may be objected that a very large amount of additional business would thus be thrown on the Commissioners. But keeping in view the number of benefices in Ireland which are in the collation of the Prelates, and calculating the average number of vacancies per annum, it would be found that (with the assistance, perhaps, of an additional clerk) this new burden would not be excessive.

It has been suggested, indeed, that special Royal Commissioners ought to be appointed to inquire into the unions of parishes that ought to be made throughout Ireland, and that their report should be taken, though not as definite, as indicative of what parishes in each diocese ought to be united. But such a Commission would be attended with great expense. And as vacancies in many of the parishes would not occur for perhaps ten years, or fifteen, or twenty, or it might be thirty years, the recommendations of such a report would have to be reconsidered when each vacancy occurred, and all the information respecting changes in the circumstances of the benefice itself and the adjoining ones would have to be sought for and gone into. In the transition through which Ireland is passing, but little value would attach to the recommendations of a report made a quarter of a century before the vacancy occurred. And the Ecclesiastical Commissioners might as well and as easily, with the help of the Bishop of the diocese, institute the inquiry into the case ab initio, as review the opinion of a defunct Royal Commission on the subject, and go over the ground again in reference to each particular parish.

It is not intended to alter the law (7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 43, s. 21), which requires that the Lord Lieutenant in Council should be informed of every proposed union of parishes, and of the reasons for making it. The Bill preserves to Her Majesty's Representative the power of disallowing the order made by a Bishop for the uniting of parishes in his diocese. And the Bishop is also restrained from disregarding the recommendation of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and filling up a benefice singly, if they should decide in favour of the formation of a union, unless, indeed, the Lord Lieutenant and Council disapprove of the union being made.

Check upon too large Incomes.

The opprobrium attaching to Episcopal Unions of Parishes in former days, when two or three were joined to make up an overgrown income for personal aggrandizement, was guarded against by Statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 43, which rendered it necessary to submit every proposed union to the supervision of the Lord Lieutenant in Council, and thus hindered the undue forming of unions. But now, when the diminution of the population makes it advisable to encourage the formation of unions, it becomes necessary, at the same time, to provide that such large incomes should not be the result of forming them as would be utterly disproportioned to the spiritual duties to be performed by the Incumbent.

It is right that there should be prizes in the Church, held out as rewards to encourage men of ability to enter the clerical profession. But the class of parishes which it is the object of this Bill to unite, ought not to be made the prize benefices of the Irish Church Establishment; they would be quite unsuitable for this purpose. If a parish containing fifteen members of the Church, with an income of £300 a-year, were united to another parish with twenty Protestants, and an income of £400, it would be absurd to bestow such a union on a distinguished orator, for he would have a miserable audience, or on a zealous pastor and able administrator, for he would have no field for his abilities, or on a man of great learning, for he would be far removed from literary associations. It would be impossible for all the Incumbents of all such unions to procure private pupils to give them employment in tuition, and their having an ample income derived from their benefices would render the labour of keeping pupils unnecessary for their support. Such benefices, then, ought not to be prizes in the Irish Church. And those ministers who deserve to obtain prize preferments would shrink from accepting such parishes as these, which would condemn them to idleness. A few benefices with little duty to attend to, might indeed be used as retirements for old and enfeebled ministers; but the number of such aged and worn out clergymen is less than the number of parishes in Ireland with a population of fewer than thirty Protestants.

What is needed for the benefit of the Church is to group together two or three of the smaller parishes, so as to make up an income of £300, with £100 to pay a Curate's salary, who should officiate in the second church in the union, which would be a chapel-of-ease to the parish church.

If, however, the result of uniting together two parishes with small congregations would be to create (after paying £100 a year to a Curate) a net income exceeding £500, it is proposed that the surplus should be paid over to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and added to their general fund for the purposes of the Church at large.

(1.) The plan of handing over a surplus income to the Commissioners was sanctioned by the Church Temporalities Act. The Archbishop of Armagh is required to pay into their general fund £4,500 a year, the Bishop of Derry has to pay £6,160. 3 & 4 Gul. IV., c. 37, s. 54.

(2.) The disappropriated revenues of sinecure dignities have been likewise handed over to the Commissioners. 4 & 5 Gul. IV., c. 90, s. 1.

(3.) The revenues of suspended benefices are, during their suspension, vested in the Commissioners. 3 & 4 Gul. IV., c. 37, s. 116.

(4.) The tax imposed on all benefices above £300 a year in value, is another instance of the application of the same principle, namely, the requiring parishes which possess endowments of a certain amount to contribute, in proportion, towards the general wants of the Church throughout the country.

The proposal, therefore, contained in the Bill, that unions of parishes which have a net income exceeding £500 a year should pay over the surplus to the common fund, is not introducing a new principle in Church legislation; but is only an extension of the principle on which the Church Temporalities Act was established.

Financial Result of the Bill in respect of Unions.

It is to be observed that the surplus is to be calculated on the net and not on the gross income of the unions. The net income is defined in the Church Temporalities Acts; the poor's rate, the interest on money expended on building or improving the glebe-house, the salary of a Curate, and the tax payable to the Commissioners, are to be deducted in estimating the net value. And it may be accepted as a general rule that no union with less than a gross income of £700 will yield a net income of £500. So that those unions only which have a gross revenue exceeding £700 will have any surplus to hand over to the Commissioners.

In one-third of the dioceses of Ireland no unions will be formed, because the parishes as they now exist have in each a Church population requiring the services of an Incumbent Minister. In the remaining two-thirds of the dioceses, one-half of the parishes, at the least, are similarly circumstanced. So that the provisions of the Bill as to the uniting of parishes would not probably apply to more than one-third of the benefices in the whole country; and many of them are in lay patronage; and most of them would, when united, have net incomes under £500.

In the diocese of Armagh, for instance, there are ten parishes which might with advantage be united so as to form five unions; but only one of these unions would yield a surplus, and that of small amount.

A large accession to the funds of the Commissioners is not to be expected from the surplus payable out of unions; but a considerable sum would be received from the tax derived from the unions. Parishes, as before explained, which when held singly, paid no tax (because under £300), will when united be liable to taxation.

Division of Benefices.

It is proposed to give to the Bishops the power of dividing benefices, subject to the same restraints as in the case of uniting parishes. Its chief use would be in reference to existing unions, which might in many instances, with advantage to the interests of the Church, have one or more of the component parishes detached from the Union and joined to other parishes in forming a new and better constructed union.

The Church Temporalities Act (3 & 4 Gul. IV., c. 37, ss. 106–113), gives the Commissioners power, with the consent of the Lord Lieutenant in Council, and the consent of the Bishop of the diocese, and of the patron of the parish, to divide a single parish, the annual value of which exceeds £800, provided that it be not by such division reduced below the sum of £300. So that the proposed Bill, in giving a power of dividing as well as of uniting parishes, follows the principles adopted in the Church Temporalities Act.

Augmentation of poorly endowed Benefices.

The Ecclesiastical Commissioners were empowered by 3 & 4 Gul. IV., c. 37, ss. 93–100, out of the surplus funds at their disposal, after providing for the building and repairing of churches, paying parish clerks, sextons, &c., to augment benefices up to the yearly value of £200. By the amendment of that Act, 23 & 24 Vic., c. 150, s. 32, they were empowered "out of any funds or properties now vested or which may hereafter become vested in them," without waiting for the accruing of an actual surplus, but after making "due and reasonable provision," for the purposes above mentioned, to augment benefices up to the value of £200.

Under these provisions the Commissioners have as yet augmented benefices up to the value of only £100 a year. It is proposed to empower the Commissioners to augment benefices in which the spiritual duties are onerous to the amount of £300; and where the duties are so onerous that, in the judgment of the Bishop of the diocese and the Archbishop of the province, the assistance of a Curate is indispensable, to augment up to £400, of which sum £100 is to be given as a salary to the Curate. And it is proposed that the claims of benefices such as these, in which the duties are onerous, shall have precedence of other benefices.

The reason for such an amendment of the law is obvious. A clergyman newly ordained and possessed of slender abilities may be placed in charge of a benefice with but 100 souls to minister to. But a parish containing many hundreds can be intrusted only to the care of a clergyman of experience and ability; and it is unreasonable to expect that such persons can be obtained or retained in charge of a laborious parish if sufficient means be not afforded for their support.

If it be suggested, as perhaps it may be, that the surplus derived from uniting parishes in the south ought not to be applied to augment parishes in the north, but that the surplus thus obtained ought to be expended in increasing the inadequate incomes of parishes in the dioceses wherein those unions are situated; it is to be observed, in answer, that such a plan of proceeding would be directly contrary to the policy of the Church Temporalities Act; for be it remarked,—

(1.) The surplus income taken from the Archbishopric of Armagh by that Act is not set apart for Church purposes in the diocese, or in the province of Armagh; it goes into the Common Fund, and is available for all Ireland (3 & 4 Gul. IV., c. 37, s. 54). The surplus taken from the Bishopric of Derry, in like manner, is not restricted to the diocese of Derry, nor reserved for the benefit of the north, as distinguished from the south.

(2.) The revenues of the disappropriated parishes belonging to the Deanery of Emly and the Deanery of Lismore are not put into a separate account for the exclusive advantage of the Dioceses of Emly and Lismore (4 & 5 Gul. IV., c. 90, s. 1).

(3.) The revenues of the suspended benefices in the Diocese of Cloyne are not devoted to the exclusive use of that diocese (3 & 4 Gul. IV., c. 37, s. 116).

(4.) The tax derived from benefices in the South which are above £300 a year (3 & 4 Gul. IV., c. 37, s. 14), is not set apart for southern purposes, but goes into the general fund.

To claim, therefore, any surplus arising from a union of benefices in the counties of Cork or Tipperary, in order that it may be expended in augmenting poorly endowed benefices in those counties only, would be wholly at variance with the principles on which the Church Temporalities Act was constructed. The aim of that Act was to generate a common fund for supplying the wants of the Church, wherever those wants existed.

Churches and Glebe Houses in Unions.

If parishes are to be united it becomes necessary to provide arrangements respecting the churches and glebe houses which may be existing in them.

As to churches, should there be a parish church in each of two parishes which are to be united and form one benefice under one Incumbent, it is provided that one of the churches shall, during the subsistence of the union, be a chapel-of-ease to the other; and the Bishop of the diocese is to decide which of the two shall be the parish church of the union.

As to glebe houses, three cases may arise; there may be two parishes united with a glebe house in one, and none in the other, or a glebe house in each of them, or no glebe house in either of them.

(1.) A parish with a glebe-house may be united to another in which there is none, but the Incumbent of it (the future Incumbent of the union) may have rented a suitable house, well situated for performing the duties of the united parishes. It might be hard to compel an Incumbent so circumstanced to leave his hired house and to live in the newly added and less conveniently situated glebe-house. It is proposed, therefore, to leave it to the Bishop to decide whether or not the Incumbent of the union is to reside in the glebe-house. If he is not to reside in it, power is given to the Incumbent to let it to a tenant. But should there be a charge due to the predecessor or his representatives for the building of the glebe-house, the Incumbent of the union is made liable for the payment of that charge.

(2.) If there be a glebe-house in each of two parishes which are to be united together, the Bishop shall decide in which of the two the Incumbent shall reside; and the house which is not occupied by the Incumbent may be assigned to the Curate to live in, and a sum shall in this case be reserved out of the revenues of the parish for keeping the premises in repair; or else the house may be let by the Incumbent to a tenant.

(3.) If there be no glebe-house in either of two adjoining parishes which might otherwise with advantage be united, and if there be no suitable house to be hired, and if the union thereby be hindered, or if in any single parish which it is not desirable to unite to another there be no glebe-house, the Bishop is empowered to sequester such a parish (placing a Curate in charge of it) until a sufficient sum is accumulated to build a glebe-house; and during such sequestration the patron is not to be deprived of his right of patronage by lapse. When the house is built the parish may then, if desirable, be united to the adjoining one.

The building of glebe-houses is sometimes hindered by reason of the glebe-land being inconveniently situated as regards the Church or the dwellings of the great body of the parishioners. By Statute 14 & 15 Vict., c. 73, power is given to an Incumbent to exchange such glebe-land for other land conveniently situated for building; and power is given to the owners of land to exchange; and the mode of valuing the land by a jury is prescribed (Sects. 38–43 of that Act.) But instances have occurred in which, from indolence or other causes, an Incumbent who possessed glebe-lands inconveniently situated was unwilling to take the trouble of effecting an exchange of them for suitable lands, which a proprietor was willing to give for them. And hitherto the Bishop had no power of compelling an Incumbent to make an exchange of lands for the purpose of building a glebe-house. It is proposed to give such power to the Bishop, taking care that the safeguards provided in the Act of 14 & 15 Vict. respecting the exchange be attended to.

The importance of making the Clergy reside on their benefices is evident. They cannot, in many cases, procure houses to hire suitable for the purpose; hence the expediency of compelling them to build; and by the Act 14 & 15 Vict. c. 73, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners are empowered to lend money for the building of glebe-houses, taking a mortgage of the benefice to secure the gradual repayment of the money lent. So that the difficulty of obtaining the means of erecting glebe-houses has been in a great degree removed.

APPENDIX, No. 9.

SUGGESTIONS by the PRELATES for RE-ARRANGEMENT of certain BENEFICES within their respective DIOCESES.

1. ARCHBISHOP OF DUBLIN.

Balscaddan.

This is a parish without a church or glebe. A few years ago there was in it only a single Protestant family; there are now a few more. They attend the chapel at Balbriggan. On its last vacancy it was saved from suppression only by a point of law. In the natural order of things the rectorial tithes will lapse to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners at the next. The rectory is worth £88, the vicarage £48, the former being attached to the treasurership of Christ Church. In the neighbouring parish of Balrothery there has grown up a town of considerable size, Balbriggan, to which in summer there is a large influx of visitors. There is here a chapel, built in the main by George Hamilton, esq., of which the endowment is less than £100 a year. There is to this no cure of souls annexed, but it has been usual for the incumbent to have the spiritual oversight of the inhabitants of the town. It would be very desirable that Balbriggan should be joined to Balscaddan, with a district assigned. It would be further desirable that both should be united to Balrothery and should constitute one parish whenever the opportunity for this occurs.

Blesinton and the Parishes adjoining.

Much might be done with profit in the re-arrangement of the boundaries of this and some neighbouring parishes. Thus I should recommend to detach from it and to unite to the parish of Kilbride and Kilteel the following townlands: Upper and Lower Ballysollogue, Upper and Lower Ballysmittem, Ballynatona, Ballynabrockey, Ballylowe, Ballydonald. At the same time it would be convenient to separate from the parish of Rathmore and to annex to Blesinton the following: Newtown Park, Newtown Little, Cross Coal Harbour, Pipers Hall, and Hempstown Commons. I should further recommend to detach from the parish of Tipperkevin the following townlands: Kilmalure, Glebe East, Glenmore, and to unite them to Blesinton; the rest of Tipperkevin (including the glebe land) to be united to Ballymore Eustace. The townland of Humphreystown and some others at the western extremity of the parish of Baltiboys (now merged in the union of Blesinton) might conveniently be separated from it, and annexed to the parish of Holywood; while the townland of Mullica should be separated from Holywood and annexed to Donard.

Booterstown.

There is a small district close to the village and church of Booterstown (it contains Trimleston House and Trimleston Cottage, both on the Blackrock-road) which belongs to the parish of Taney; while yet the clergyman of Taney must pass through the parish of Booterstown from end to end, or by another road through a great part of Donnybrook, to reach it. It would I think be a clear advantage if this small outlying district were detached from Taney and annexed to Booterstown.

Cloghran.

This is one of the parishes which have neither area, population, or income to make it advisable that they should continue as they are. Its area is 1,558 acres, the Church population 24, and the income £166. St. Doulough is a parish under nearly the same conditions; its area very little more than 1,000 acres, the Church population 68, and the income £98; and there is not in this parish any glebe house. The parishes are contiguous, and I should recommend their union.

Donabate.

This is another parish with a very small area, though larger than Portmarnock, and a wretched income, somewhat about £100 a year. At the same time the Church population is more numerous. It amounted at the last census to 120. Their spiritual interests would be cared for if Donabate were united to Swords, and the church at Donabate maintained as a chapel of ease.

Dublin, St. Audoen's.

This parish and St. Nicholas Within have been lately united, and now form one parish; there is a considerable number of Church people in the union, while the net income even now amounts to little more than £200. There is, however, a chaplaincy of St. Nicholas Within, with about £250, and now held by the Rev. Dr. Tresham Gregg, which various circumstances not within his control have disconnected from any actual duties which are capable of being performed by him in the parish. The electors, who must be householders, are now reduced to eleven or twelve, only two of whom reside in the parish. I believe they and the parishioners in general would gladly see it form part of the income of the poorly provided union of these two parishes.

Dublin, Christ Church Cathedral and its Neighbourhood.

It is well known that there is a cluster of churches, with small parishes attached, in the immediate neighbourhood of Christ Church Cathedral, having no doubt been built there for safety and that they might be within the circuit of the city walls, which are more numerous than the needs of the Church people in that part of the city require. There is (1st) St. John's, separated from the cathedral only by the breadth of a lane on the north side. There is (2ndly) St. Werburgh's, separated from it by the breadth of a street on the south side. There is (3rdly) St. Michael's, separated by the breadth of a street on the west. While a little further on toward the west stands (4thly) St. Audoen's Church; and (5thly) at a short distance from the cathedral on the south, St. Bride's. I am not prepared exactly to say how these parishes would be most advantageously grouped together; but that they should be so, I can have no doubt. As it is little likely in the event of any very sweeping reform that it will be possible to maintain two cathedrals and two cathedral staffs in Dublin, it might very well be a question whether some of them should not be attached to Christ Church as their parish church; the dean, or provost, as he might be called, of that being the rector, who would then receive income sufficient to enable him to keep curates by whose aid he might serve these churches, such, that is as it would be desirable to maintain, which would then be as chapels of ease to the cathedral as their mother church. If this change were regarded as too fundamental, the parishes of St. John, St. Michael, and St. Werburgh might be amalgamated into one. They would constitute a compact parish, which might be worked by the Rector of St. Werburgh and two curates.

Dublin, St. Peter's.

This parish is a very large one, but being as it is the most important piece of preferment which the Archbishop has in his gift, and carrying with it the archdeaconry of Dublin, or rather the archdeaconry carrying the parish with it, it is probable that it will be always held by an able and efficient man; and I should regret to see the importance and influence of the position seriously impaired, or the parish broken up into fragments. At the same time there are various causes which might render advisable the erection into a separate parish of that portion of it which constitutes the township of Rathmines. I believe a memorial to this effect has been presented by some of the inhabitants of that township.

Finglas.

There is at present united with this the parish of Artane. Nothing can be worse than this arrangement; as between the two there interposes another parish, that, namely, of Santry. I should recommend the union of Artane with one or other of the parishes which it immediately adjoins; and of these Coolock seems the most desirable.

Garristown, Naul.

The Church population of Garristown is only six; that of Naul is under 100. The rentcharge in the latter parish is very small. The parishes are contiguous, and might be advantageously united. The few Protestants in Garristown would certainly be a good way off from the church at Naul, which alone it would be desirable to maintain. But the inconvenience arising from the sparseness of our population, and as a consequence of this, the large area of many of our parishes, is one which often must be accepted as unavoidable.

Glenealy.

It would be a great convenience to the inhabitants of the townlands of Ballygannon More, Ballygannon Beg, Cunmaretown Little, and Cunmaretown Beg, if these were severed from Dunganstown and attached to Glenealy.

Inch.

A tongue of another parish, and that a parish which does not so much as belong to the diocese of Dublin, namely, of Gorey, in the diocese of Ferns, runs into Inch parish and close to the church of Inch. I am not sure how far the Protestants in this part of the parish of Gorey may be from their own church, but they constantly attend Divine worship at Inch. It would be desirable that there should be some rectification here of the boundaries, not merely of the parishes, but, as would necessarily follow, of the dioceses as well. I may take this opportunity of saying that Inch and Arklow require re-adjustment very badly; Kilbride and Redcross are in the same predicament; Castle Macadam is similarly circumstanced. I have not at present that local knowledge which would enable me to offer distinct recommendations in respect of the exact manner in which the re-adjustment of the limits of these parishes should be carried out; but I shall be prepared to offer recommendations in detail, if at any time the Commissioners express their desire to have them.

Killiskey.

I would suggest that the townland of Ballard Beg, which is close to Killiskey Church, should be taken from Derrylossary and annexed to Killiskey, while some portions of Killiskey which project into the parish of Newcastle should be joined to it.

Kilsallaghan.

I doubt whether this parish ought to be maintained. The last census gave 26 as the number of Church people in it. It might, perhaps, be united to Clonmethan. This last, however, has already income sufficient, and I do not consider it needful that the rent-charge should go there. If Kilsallaghan is maintained as a parish, there is an outlying district of Swords which might be conveniently annexed to it.

Portmarnock.

It is highly desirable that this little parish, which has an area of not much more than 2,000 acres, with its small Church population (they were only 28 at the last census), and its miserable income (£90 net), should disappear as an independent parish. Everything points to the fitness of its permanent union with Malahide.

Wicklow and the neighbouring Parishes.

A re-adjustment of boundaries is here very desirable. The townlands of Blackditch, Grange North, and Grange South should be separated from Wicklow and annexed to Newcastle, being near to it and remote from Wicklow. For similar reasons the townlands of Aghowle Lower and Aghowle Upper and Ballycullen should be taken from Wicklow and annexed to Killiskey. And on the same grounds Kilcandra Beg and Ballynockan Beg should be severed from Wicklow and joined to Glenealy. On the other hand, the townlands of Mahera More and Mahera Beg should be taken from Dunganstown and united with Wicklow, lying as they do in the lap of this parish. The proposed boundary would then be marked by a stream which runs into the sea.

Ballyburley, alias Primult.

Rectification of boundaries is here very desirable. The parish is cut nearly in two by a large strip from another parish, that of Castle Jordan, which does not even belong to the diocese, being in that of Meath. This is the occasion of much inconvenience to the clergyman, who has to pass through another parish, in visiting his own remote parishioners; and secondly, to the Church people in this enclave of Castle Jordan, who are some 18 in number. Those attending Ballyburley Church, which is only two or three miles from them, instead of their own, which stands at a distance of seven miles, and not always aware of the exact limits of the parishes, are at times ill-contented that the Incumbent of Ballyburley does not treat them altogether as portions of his own flock.

Ballysonnon.

This is a parish in which a re-adjustment of boundaries is imperatively required. It is a union of Ballysonnon and Kilrush. Kilrush should be joined to Fonstown, to the church of which parish it closely adjoins, while a portion of Fonstown, which is quite close to the church of Ballysonnon, should be attached to the latter parish in lieu of Kilrush. There is a strangely isolated fragment of Ballysonnon in the immediate neighbourhood of Kildare, and no less than six miles from Ballysonnon church. This might be attached to Thomastown or to Kildare Cathedral.

Ballysax.

This is a parish of which the income is very small (£150), while the glebe house is very good. It might be worthy of consideration whether it would not be desirable to unite this parish with the neighbouring parish of Ballysonnon, which has no glebe house. They would together form, with some modifications which I shall presently suggest, a compact parish, for the rector of which the glebe house of Ballysax would form a suitable and convenient residence.

Caragh, Timahoe.

The Church population of Caragh is very small, the last census gave but 44, while that of the adjoining parish of Timahoe does not exceed 100. I would suggest the union of these two parishes, and that there should be on Sundays alternately morning and evening service at each.

Cloneyhurke.

This is a new parish, recently separated off from the immense parish of Geashill, which before the separation covered an area of more than 55,000 acres. It might perhaps be desirable to separate off from this new district parish on the next opportunity the two townlands of Kilmogree and Bishopswood, annexing these to Portarlington; while at the next avoidance there might be added to Cloneyhurke a portion of Coolbanagher, in which some fifteen families of Church people reside, who are less than a mile from Cloneyhurke Church, while they are six miles from their own.

Edenderry, alias Monasteroris or Castropetre.

There is here an isolated townland, Ballyhoe by name, seven miles distant from the parish church, but within one mile of the church of Philipstown. It would be very desirable that this should be added to Philipstown at the next avoidance.

Killashee.

The net income of this parish is £165; the Church population hardly exceeds thirty. It cannot be desirable that parishes of this character, small at once in the income and in the work which they offer, should continue. It would be desirable to unite this parish to that of Naas, no parishioner of Killashee being as much as three miles from Naas Church. This I know is the opinion of the chief parishioner of Killashee, whose family and servants constitute nearly one-half of the Church population there. He is already a constant attendant at Naas Church. This union would give to the Vicar of Naas, after the payment of a curate, a little more than £300 a year, which would certainly not be too much when we consider the importance of the parish and the number of Church people in it.

Lackagh.

The Church population of this parish is very small; and few as they are, they for the most part attend the church of Monasteraven, being some of them only two miles distant from this, and five and a half from their own. There is a good parsonage house at Lackagh, while there is none, and so far as I can see, no prospect of any, at Monasteraven, which is far the most important parish in this part of Kildare. I should recommend the union of these two parishes, with the exception of one outlying townland, which it would be desirable to unite to Nurney. This would provide a parsonage house for Monasteraven, while the income derived from Lackagh (£170) would enable the incumbent to keep a curate and provide for an afternoon service in the church of Lackagh.

Morristownbiller and Old Connell.

These parishes are now episcopally united, the income of the union being £155, with a small glebe-house, and the number of resident members of the Church at the last return, thirty-three. At the same time the town of Newbridge is extending into the parish, which has already increased and will further increase the Church population. It has long seemed to me most desirable that this benefice should be united with the neighbouring benefice of Great Connell, Ladytown, and Ballymanny, which are episcopally united as well. The net annual income is £121 17*s.* 6*d.*, the number of Church people permanently resident were by the last return about fifty, but the same causes which are at work in the case of Old Connell must make them considerably more numerous now. These five little parishes permanently united would form a compact parish by no means too large in extent, being accessible throughout by excellent roads; while the income arising from the union (£277) would be a very moderate provision for the incumbent of what will soon become a very important parish in the diocese. In the event of such a union the church of Morristownbiller should be the parish church, while the other might be maintained as a chapel of ease.

Prebend of Tipper.

It has been suggested to me that some portions of the prebend of Tipper which run into Naas parish might advantageously be included within its boundaries, the greater number of the Church members in Tipper being nearer to Naas Church than any other, and that should Tipper or any portion of it be thus annexed to Naas, Haynstown and Forenaghts might be joined to Rathmore, to which Tipper is at present united.

R. C. Dublin.

2. Bishop of Limerick.

I.—Adare.

This is a parish of much importance, involving an amount of duty for which the income (£230 gross, without glebe house or land) is miserably inadequate. Practically the district called Newboro', situate in the parish of Croom, forms part of the parish of Adare, the Protestant parishioners of that district having been always in the habit of attending the church of Adare, and of regarding it as their parish church. This district should be united to the parish of Adare, and the rentcharge payable on this portion of Croom parish added to the stipend of the Vicar of Adare.

II.—Ardcanny and Chapel Russell.

These two parishes, both in the patronage of the Bishop, should be united on the first opportunity. In Ardcanny there is a glebe house and land, but no church. In Chapel Russell the rentcharge does not amount to more than £40 8*s.* 7*d.* There is a commodious church, but no glebe house or land. That portion of the parish of Kildimo which immediately adjoins Chapel Russell should be annexed to it.

III.—Askeaton.

The small parishes of Tomdeely and Morgans should be united to the union of Askeaton.

IV.—Bruff and Uregare.

The parishes of Glenogra (at present united with Fedamore) and Tullybracky should be joined with this union. There is no need for a separate church in the parish of Tullybracky. The portion of Manisternenagh immediately adjoining Bruff should also be added to it.

V.—Croom.

The small parishes of Athnett and Dysert should be united to Croom; also the small portion of the parish of Ballingarry which is situate in Croom parish. The district of this parish called Newboro' should, for the reasons mentioned under the head of Adare, be detached from Croom, and annexed to the parish of Adare. The portion of Manisternenagh immediately adjoining Croom should be added to the parish of Croom.

VI.—Kilpeacon.

The church in this parish is a convenient centre for the parishioners of Killonehan, Crecora, and Killenoghty. These parishes, in none of which is there a church, should be united to Kilpeacon, also the parish of Ballycahane, where there is not a sufficient Church population to render it necessary that the existing parish church should be maintained, also the parish of Knocknagaul, which at present forms part of the union of Nantenan. The parish of Hackmys should be detached from Kilpeacon and added to Bruree.

VII.—Kilflynn and Particles.

These two parishes should be united.

VIII.—St. Michael's Parish—Patron, the Bishop; St. Michael's Church—Patron, the Earl of Limerick.

The parish and the church should be united under the patronage of the Bishop. An Act of Parliament should be passed enabling the Bishop to give to the Earl of Limerick the presentation to one of the episcopal benefices in exchange for the presentation to the incumbency of St. Michael's Church. A portion of the parish of St. Michael should be united with the parish of St. Lawrence.

IX.—Shanagolden.

The union of Dunmoylan and Robertstown should be united with it, also the parish of Loghill, where the number of the parishioners is so small that it does not seem to be necessary that the existing parish church should be maintained.

X.—Nantenan.

The portion of the parish of Croagh which lies to the east of Nantenan should be added to the parish of Nantenan; also the parish of Cappagh. The detached portions of the parish of Nantenan lying within the bounds of Rathkeale should be added to Rathkeale. The parish of Kilfenny, which at present forms part of the union of Nantenan, should be annexed to the parish of Drehidtarsna; Morgans and Tomdeely to Askeaton; Knocknagaul to Kilpeacon; Loghill to the proposed union of Shanagolden and Robertstown.

XI.—Rathronan.

The parish of Ardagh should be united to Rathronan, also the parish of Kilcolman.

XII.—Newcastle and Monagay.

The portion of the parish of Grange which lies west of the river Deel should be annexed to this union. The isolated parts of Monagay lying in the parish of Killeedy should be united to Killeedy, and the isolated parts of Killeedy lying in the parish of Monagay should be united to Monagay.

XIII.—Killaliathan.

The parish of Drumcollagher in the union of Corcomahide should be added to this parish, also the detached portion of Killeedy called Killeen, also the portion of the parish of Monagay which immediately adjoins it; also the parish of Cloncrew which at present forms part of the prebend of Athnett.

XIV.—Killeely.

The parish of Kilfentinan, patron Lord Leconfield, should be united to Killeely, patron the Bishop.

XV.—Bruree.

The parishes of Colmanswell and Hackmys (see suggestion under "Kilpeacon") should be added to Bruree.

---

I.—Kenmare.

Tuosist, which at present forms part of the union of Kenmare, should be detached from it and annexed to the parish of Ardgroom in the diocese of Cork. The parish of Bunaun, which at present forms part of Kilcaskan (diocese of Cork), should be attached to Kenmare in lieu of Tuosist which it is suggested to detach from it.

II.—Killarney.

The district of Muckross, where a new church has been lately erected, should be made a separate parish; and to it that portion of the parish of Killaha which contains the townlands of Brewsterfield, Killaha, and Derrynahenill should be annexed. The expediency of this arrangement is evident from the fact that the Protestant parishioners of Killaha live at a distance of about 12 miles from their parish church, viz., that of Kilgarvan, with which Killaha is at present united, while they are only four miles distant from Muckross.

III.—Castleisland.

The portion of Killenteerna which immediately adjoins Castleisland should be united with it. The parishioners of this district are in the habit of attending the church of Castleisland.

IV.—Killiney.

The parish of Stradbally should be united with Killiney. The church of Killiney is situate near the western boundary of the parish, and is close to the eastern boundary of Stradbally.

V.—Tralee.

Ratass, which is practically united to Tralee, should be legally annexed to it, and the stipend transferred to the Rector of Tralee, whose income is at present wholly inadequate.

VI.—Duagh.

This parish should be united to Listowel. There does not appear to be any necessity for a separate church being maintained at Duagh. The majority of the parishioners have been for a long time in the habit of attending the church of Listowel.

VII.—Kilcrohane.

The western portion of this parish should be detached from it and annexed to the union of Dromod and Prior.

VIII.—Molahiffe and Aglish.

Molahiffe is a union of three parishes, viz., Molahiffe, Kilbonane, and Kilcredane. Aglish has a suspended parish, viz., that of Kilnanare, attached to it. The above five parishes should be redistributed as follows:—Molahiffe and Kilnanare to form one union; Kilbonane, Kilcredane, and Aglish another. Instead of the present intermixture of parishes, each union would thus be separate and compact in itself, and each would have its church conveniently placed as regards its own parishioners. At present the congregation of each church is very much made up of the parishioners of the other union.

IX.—Ballinvoher.

The detached portions of this parish (which forms part of the union of Kilgobban) should be annexed to the parishes which they adjoin; viz., the portion on mainland together with the glebe on same to Ventry parish, and the Blasguet islands to Dunquin.

X.—Ventry and Dingle.

The detached portion of Kildrum (which forms part of the union of Ventry) should be annexed to Dingle, which it adjoins; and the detached portion of Dingle should be annexed to the union of Ventry and Kildrum.

XI.—Dromtariffe.

The parish of Cullen should be detached from Dromtariffe and annexed to Nohavaldaly.

Note 1.—The above suggestions are offered with special reference to those parishes where there seems to be an urgent need for union, change of boundaries, &c., &c.

The Bishop thinks it unnecessary to go more fully into details, the several incumbents in his diocese having already submitted their suggestions after consultation with him and with each other.

Note 2.—The Bishop is of opinion that archdeaconries should not be necessarily connected with any particular parish, but that it should be discretionary with the Bishop to appoint any one of his clergy to the dignity of archdeacon of the diocese.

Note 3.—In the event of an alteration of the existing parochial boundaries being decided upon, the Bishop is of opinion that a Boundary Commission should be appointed to report on the necessary changes.

CHARLES LIMERICK.

3. BISHOP OF KILLALOE.

London, 92, Cambridge-street, S.W., 2nd May, 1868.

SIR,

I regret that I have not yet been able to lay before the Commissioners a scheme for the redistribution of parishes in my diocese formed upon the elaborate model suggested by the papers of the Bishop of Meath and Archdeacon Stopford.

To construct such a plan would require much time and thought, and the command of appliances out of my reach while here in attendance on Parliament. I have, however, already desired the assistance and advice of my clergy, and on my return home I will do my best to prepare proposals with as much expedition as possible.

I have already, as vacancies occurred, done something towards remedying the inequalities of unions, and I have not found the difficulty or expense of the existing machinery as great as I was led to expect. At first, from the inexperience of my officers, there were some blunders and considerable delay, but as soon as I had obtained proper legal advice, the machinery of the Privy Council Office seemed to work quite smoothly and at a trifling cost.

In this way, for example, I have re-arranged the unions of Kilnasoolagh and Kilfinaghty in the diocese of Killaloe. I should have been very glad to have included in those arrangements the attachment of the little vicarage of Kilfintinan, in the diocese of Limerick, to Kilfinaghty. The vicarage of Kilfintinan is not worth more than £52 by the year. It has no church, glebe, or glebe-house; and it would long ago have been suppressed but for the circumstance that the right of advowson is private property. The patron (Lord Leconfield) was not willing to assent to a permanent real union, but he most kindly, and with that sincere desire to serve the Church which always actuates him, made arrangements which for the present effectually answer the purposes of such an union.

Besides the vicarage of Kilfintinan in Limerick, Lord Leconfield owns as patron in my diocese some other benefices which, being rectories with vicarages endowed, are said to be sinecures, and compatible with the holding of any other preferment. His Lordship has generally most conscientiously given such sinecures to persons who, when presented, were curates or incumbents of very poor livings in the diocese; but as the patron in such cases has no power of enforcing any implied or understood conditions, however reasonable, upon the presentee, except in a few cases strictly limited by law, it sometimes happens that anomalies more or less scandalous, or at least startling, occur.

The sinecure rectories of Traddery, of the gross value of £509 by the year, are now held by a gentleman who was at one time a clergyman of my diocese; he has since then obtained valuable preferments in (I believe) Dromore. He still retains the rectories of Traddery, and as there are vicars endowed, I am advised that I have no power to compel residence or deprive for plurality. He had other preferments in the north before I came to the diocese, and if the rectories of Traddery be really (as is not impossible) incompatible with such preferments, they must long ago have been vacant by cession, and have lapsed to the Crown. As there are vicars endowed, however, I should, even in that case, have no power to sequestrate for the performance of spiritual functions. I do not mention this case for the purpose of expressing any censure of the gentleman referred to, but to free myself from blame, which, I am told, has been cast upon me by persons more eager to condemn than disposed to inquire.

There are other sinecure rectories in lay-patronage throughout the diocese, and it would be very desirable that some power should exist for compelling the reunion of these with the vicarages from which they have been severed, allowing the patrons compensation, either by turns of presentation to the new benefices or by purchase at a valuation by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The rectory of Drumcliff should thus be united with the vicarage, which contains the important town of Ennis, and is quite disproportionately endowed. The perpetual cures of Kilmaley and Clarecastle should, I think, at any rate be united to Ennis. The church at Kilmaley is quite unnecessary. That of Clare Castle is chiefly useful for the accommodation of the garrison, and for that purpose might be transferred, with the reservation of rights of burial and occasional services, to the Crown. The glebe and house at Clare Castle might be sold, and the proceeds applied to the purchase of a residence for the incumbent in Ennis.

In several cases there are gross apparent anomalies in the boundaries of parishes which an enterprising reformer might very cheaply get himself a good name by rectifying, but which have been left unaltered by successive Bishops, because, odd as they look, they cause no considerable difficulty in practice, the formal inequalities being redressed by compositions and friendly understandings between neighbouring incumbents.

Thus, for example, a part of the union of Lateragh is geographically so widely severed from the rest as to make it impossible that the same man should serve both parts. But in practice one part has by an old composition always been under the care of the rector of Clondegad, who receives the whole of the emoluments of that vicarage as his allowance for such service.

The small benefice of Kilmalinoge in Clonfert should never have been allowed to continue a separate incumbency. There is no need of a place of worship there, as the few Protestant parishioners (about 14) could be very well attended to by one of the neighbouring clergymen.

In several other instances I believe that I shall be able to propose plans for redistribution of some value. But I cannot lead the Commissioners to expect any very vast or striking results. The great difficulty consists in the scattered way in which the Protestants are diffused at wide intervals through many parts of the country.

If they could all be brought together within a ring-fence, or even collected here and there in masses of population, round convenient centres, their spiritual wants could be supplied at a comparatively small expense and by a comparatively small band of clergy. I must deal with them as they are now distributed.

By those who think that there is no great advantage gained by diffusing Protestant laymen and clergymen over a large surface, that distribution may be fairly regarded as an evil; and it is possible that there may be room for the application of some "heroic remedy" to remove it. But the suggestion of such measures seems not to fall within the scope of the present inquiry; and, therefore, I shall only just remark that, as Protestants no doubt originally settled on, and have since retained their farms and holdings in this scattered manner, on the faith and expectation of a provision for the religious instruction of themselves and their families, it would seem fair that the Legislature, if it withdraw that provision, should provide them with some aid towards emigrating to places where they would be thrown among people of the same reformed faith as themselves.

By thus stimulating the emigration of the Irish Protestant yeomanry in the south and west (for transportation would hardly be thought of) there would result a general uniformity of religion and interest among the farmers, tradesmen, artisans, and peasants throughout Munster and Connaught, while the gentry might be safely left to become absentees at their own expense.

I am, &c.,

J. Favière Elrington, esq., LL.D. W. KILLALOE.

4. BISHOP OF MEATH.

The following alterations in the boundaries of certain parishes in the diocese of Meath have been suggested by the Bishop of Meath, who refers also to the paper laid before the Commissioners on the same subject by Archdeacon Stopford :—

1. St. Mary's, Athlone.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Area, | 11,455 acres. | Patronage of Bishop. |
| Church Population, | 708 | |
| Net Income, | £263 17*s.* 2*d.* | |

Athlone is an assize town, a large military station, and otherwise an important place, requiring the services of a superior man. The present income is quite inadequate.

The area is already sufficiently great, when considered in itself; but when the circumstances of the adjacent parishes of Clonmacnoise and Kilcleagh are taken into account, it seems advisable to enlarge Athlone by the addition of a part (about one-third) of Kilcleagh (inf. 3) and of half (the upper) of Clonmacnoise, with a chapel of ease at the Seven Churches.

The part of Kilcleagh proposed to be added to Athlone is between six and seven miles from its parish church (at Moate), while it is only three miles from Athlone.

The Rector of Athlone should be the Dean of Clonmacnoise, a title which has now no income attached to it, and is unconnected with any particular parish in the diocese. The present Dean is Rector of Ardbraccan. The late Dean was Vicar of Trim.

The residence of a dignitary in that remote part of the diocese would be a very convenient arrangement for the Bishop. As Kilcleagh and Clonmacnoise are (as well as Athlone) in the patronage of the Bishop, the proposed arrangement would encounter no opposition on the part of patrons.

Proposed new Parish of St. Mary's, Athlone.

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. £ s. d. | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| St. Mary's, | 11,455 | 708 | 263 17 2 | |
| Part of Kilcleagh (say $\frac{1}{3}$), | 5,000 | (say) 30 | 50 0 0 | |
| Upper half of Clonmacnoise, | 11,200 | (say) 20 | 130 0 0 | Bishop. |
| | 27,655 | 758 | £443 17 2 | |

NOTE.—The lower half of Clonmacnoise is proposed to be attached to Tessauran parish (infr. No. 2).

To serve the proposed chapel of ease at the Seven Churches, £100 per annum should be given by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

2. Tessauran. (Patron, Bishop.)

Tessauran is at present united by Act of Council with Killegally or Ferbane, the latter being a perpetual curacy, with a stipend of £55 per annum, paid by the Rector of Tessauran.

It seems desirable to dissolve this union, and to erect Ferbane into a separate vicarage. The lower half of Clonmacnoise to be added to Tessauran, with a chapel of ease at Shannon Bridge. It would seem also desirable to sell the glebe and house of Tessauran, and procure another more suitable to a clergyman with moderate income; the balance to be handed over to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

Proposed new Parish of Tessauran.

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Tessauran, | 7,316 | 162 | (say) £350 | |
| Lower half of Clonmacnoise, | 11,200 | (say) 74 | (say) 125 | Bishop. |
| | 18,516 | 236 | £475 | |

2. (bis.) Proposed new Parish of Ferbane.

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Killegally (Ferbane), | 17,556 | 156 | (say) £250 | Bishop. |

The balance of the income of union (about £100) to be transferred to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

3. Kilcleagh, or Moate.

| Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 15,264 | 330 | £274 | Bishop. |

This parish is ill-arranged. The western part of it is between six and seven miles distant from the parish church (Moate), (No. 1); while the parish of Kilmanaghan, in Clara union, comes within a quarter of a mile of the church of Moate, part of the town of Moate, including the glebe-house, being in Kilmanaghan parish. It is therefore suggested that it would be desirable to constitute, as follows, a

New Parish of Kilcleagh.

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patrons. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Two-thirds of present Parish of Kilcleagh, | 10,000 | (about) 300 | (say) £220 | Bishop. |
| Half of Kilmanaghan, | 4,000 | (about) 100 | (say) 50 | Crown. |
| | 14,000 | 400 | £270 | |

This being an important post, it should be augmented by the Commissioners to £300 per annum.

As to the patronage, it would be in the Bishop and Crown, the former having four turns to the Crown's one.

4. Clara. (Vicarage.)

The present vicarage union is thus composed:—

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Kilbride, | 7,617 | 182 | £215 | Crown. |
| Kilmanaghan, | 8,196 | 202 | | |

Part of this union (upper part of Kilman) is six miles from the church (Clara), and within a quarter of a mile of the church of Moate.

Proposed new Parish of Clara.

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Kilbride, | 7,617 | 182 | (say) £165 | Crown. |
| Half of Kilman, | 4,200 | (say) 100 | | |
| | 11,817 | 282 | | |

This should be augmented by Ecclesiastical Commissioners to £200 per annum.

5. Kilbride, Tullamore. Bishop.

| Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. |
|---|---|---|
| 10,152 | 640 | £90 |

This is an important and difficult post, and most miserably endowed.

Lynally parish (part of the union of Fercall, vid. inf. 13) comes within a mile of the church of Tullamore. It is therefore suggested that, after dissolving the union of Fercall, Lynally should be attached to Kilbride, thus—

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patrons. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Kilbride, | 10,152 | 640 | £90 | Bishop. |
| Lynally, | 5,998 | 142 | 450 | Sir C. Coote. |
| | 16,150 | 782 | £540 | |

As to the patronage of the new parish, the lay patron to have five turns and the Bishop one.

Lynally Church to be kept up as a chapel of ease, with a stipend of £100 per annum, to be paid by the Rector of the new parish.

6. Mullingar.

| Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 22,322 | 574 | £236 17*s.* 6*d.* | Crown. |

A very important parish: an assize town, military station, and large congregation, but ill-arranged, and most insufficiently endowed. Part of it is eight miles distant from the church, and close to the church of Rathconrath; while, on the other hand, part of the union of Moylisker is within one mile of the church of Mullingar.

It is suggested that the part of Mullingar parish adjacent to Rathconrath should be detached and annexed to the latter parish; while, on the other hand, the parishes of Lynn, Moylisker, and Carrick should be joined to Mullingar; so that there should be as follows:—

Proposed new Parish of Mullingar.

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. £ s. d. | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Part of Mullingar, | (say) 18,000 | (say) 550 | 236 17 6 | Crown. |
| Carrick, 2,957 | | | | |
| Lynn, 5,020 | 10,160 | 127 | 209 14 2 | Crown. |
| Moylisker, 2,183 | | | | |
| | 28,160 | 677 | £446 11 8 | |

The church of Moylisker to be kept up as a chapel of ease to Mullingar, with £100 per annum stipend, to be paid by Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

6. (bis.) New Parish of Rathconrath.

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Rathconrath, | 8,146 | 39 | £208 14*s.* | Knight of Kerry. |
| Part of Mullingar, | 4,000 (say) | 25 (say) | 0 | Same patronage. |
| | 12,146 | 64 | £208 14*s.* | |

7. Kilkenny West.

| Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 10,048 | 144 | £200 13*s.* 7*d.* | Bryan family. |

The parish of Benowen should be united to Kilkenny W., with a chapel of ease at Benowen church or at Glasson. The detached portion of Noughaval, at present united with Forgney, ought also to be joined to Kilkenny W., thus forming the Proposed new Parish of Kilkenny West.

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. £ s. d. | Patrons. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Kilkenny W., | 10,048 | 144 | 200 13 7 | Bryan family. |
| Benowen, | 3,350 exclusive of water. | 49 (say) | 100 0 0 | Crown. |
| Detached part of Noughaval, | about 3,000 | (say) 20 | — | Crown. |
| | 16,398 | 213 | £300 13 7 | |

The patronage to be in the Bryan family and Crown; the former two turns, the latter one.

At present Benowen has £200, paid by Ecclesiastical Commissioners. Of this sum the Ecclesiastical Commissioners should retain £100.

8. Portloman and Portnashangan. (Bishop.)

This union is preposterous, as the two parishes are wholly separated by Lough Owel. Portloman should be annexed to Leney, which should give an equivalent portion of itself to Portnashangan. The patronage of Leney belongs to the Fetherstone family; so that the presentation to the newly-constituted parishes should be alternate, the Bishop and Fetherstone family each one turn.

Patronage.

9. Newtown (Kilbeg). Crown, 2; Bishop, 1.

The union is thus composed—

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Newtown, | 1,103 | 9 | £298. |
| Robertstown, | – | – | |
| Emlagh, | 2,118 | – | |
| Kilbeg, | 5,184 | 42 | |

Newtown church is unnecessary, being within one mile and a half of Moynalty church and three of Kells church, while, on the other hand, part of Newtown is four miles from the parish church.

It is suggested, therefore, that this union be dissolved, the parish of Emlagh to be annexed to Kells, Newtown and Kilbeg to Moynalty—which latter seems sufficiently endowed, its income being about £350 net, or perhaps it might be made up to £380—the remaining portion of the income of the dissolved union to be transferred to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

10. Moynalty. (Crown.)

| Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. |
|---|---|---|

Proposed new Parish of Moynalty.

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Moynalty, | 12,679 | 136 | £347 | |
| Newtown, | 1,103 | 9 | (say) 33 | Crown. |
| Kilbeg, | 5,184 | 42 | | |
| | 18,966 | 187 | £380 | |

11. Navan. (Crown.)

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Navan, | 3,344 | 142 | £408 17*s.* 3*d.* |
| Ardsallagh, | 1,738 | 10 | |
| Donoghmore, | 3,955 | 87 | |

It is proposed to add to Navan the parish of Athlumney, which has no church, and runs close up to Navan Church. Its area is 2,453 acres; Church population, 49; and net income, £67 10*s.* This would make the area of the proposed new parish of Navan 11,490 acres, and net income £476 7*s.* 3*d.*

As to patronage.—The patronage of Athlumney is in the Metge family; so that they should have one turn to the Crown's seven.

12. St. Mary's, Drogheda. (Bishop.)

This parish is too small, and its income too poor. The area is only 1,348 acres; its net income £106, and its Church population 204.

It is proposed to annex to it Donore, Colpe, and Kilsharvan; so that we should have as the Proposed new Parish of St. Mary's, Drogheda.

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| St. Mary's, | 1,348 | 204 | £106 0 0 | Bishop. |
| Donore, | 3,661 | 42 | — | |
| Colpe, | 5,785 | 75 | 101 0 0 | Marq. of Drogheda. |
| Kilsharvan, | 2,096 | 19 | | |
| | 12,890 | 340 | £207 0 0 | |

The church of Colpe to be kept up as a chapel of ease to St. Mary's, and the income to be augmented by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners to £350 per annum; and as this augmentation would come from the funds of the Church, the patronage of the new parish should belong to the Bishop and Marquess of Drogheda, in the proportion of two turns (Bishop) to one (Marquess of Drogheda).

13. Fercall union, by custom only. (Coote family.)

| | Area. | Ch. Mem. | Net Income. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Lynally, | 5,998 | 142 | £996 17*s.* 9*d.*, after paying about £435 to curates. |
| Killoughy, | 18,132 | 103 | |
| Ballyboy, | 14,274 | 179 | |
| Eglish, | 14,799 | 140 | |
| Drumcullen, | 13,904 | 70 | |
| Rahan, | 14,985 | 83 | |
| | 82,092 | 717 | |

This union is wholly indefensible, and ought to be dissolved; it is twenty-one miles long and twelve wide in one place, and contains 128 square miles. Four parishes had large glebes granted by Charles I. to them severally, on the express condition that each of these parishes should be a distinct benefice. This condition has been hitherto violated, and all the glebes are held under one Incumbent (see Report of the Commissioners on Unions, p. 237). Power exists at present to dissolve this union without the consent of the patron.

The following would seem to be a suitable distribution of the above Parishes—

(a.) Lynally to be attached to Tullamore (supr. 5), with an income of about £450, including £100 per annum for curate of Lynally church, as a chapel of ease to Tullamon.

(b.) Killoughy.

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Less by about 2,000 acres, to be added to Ballyboy, | 16,000 | (say) 100 | £250 | Sir —— Coote. |

(c.) Ballyboy, new Parish proposed.

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Ballyboy, | 14,276 | (say) 180 | £275 | Sir —— Coote. |
| Part of Killoughy, | 2,000 | | | |
| | 16,276 | | | |

(d.) Eglish, new proposed Parish.

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Eglish, | 14,799 | 140 | £300 | Sir —— Coote. |
| Drumcullen, | 13,904 | 70 | | |
| | 18,703 | 210 | | |

(e.) Rahan.

| Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 14,985 | 83 | £175 | Sir —— Coote. |

The sums above proposed amount to £1,450. It is suggested that Lynally should have absolutely £450; while the actual balance, in case it should exceed or fall short of the above estimate of £1,000, should be divided among the other four parishes, b, c, d, e, in the proportions above indicated. All these parishes to be erected into vicarages.

14. Kilbride Veston is a very small parish of 1,980 acres, and a Church population of 17, and net income of £19 12*s*.

It is proposed to add it to Castlelost, so that we should have as the

New Parish of Castlelost.

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patrons. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Castlelost, | 9,457 | 130 | £196 | Lord Kilmaine. |

| | 11,437 | 147 | £215 12*s*. | |

The patronage should be divided between the above patrons in the proportion of ten turns to one, or Mr. West's interest to be purchased.

15. Rathkenny.

| Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patrons. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 5,496 | 5 | £141 | E. T. Hussey, esq. |

This parish should not be allowed to continue. It might be united to Stackallan, thus giving—

Proposed new Parish of Stackallan.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| Stackallan, | 6,165 | 90 | £332 | Crown. |
| Rathkenny, | 5,496 | 5 | 141 | E. T. Hussey, esq. |
| | 11,661 | 95 | £473 | |

£350 per annum would seem sufficient for the work to be done, the remaining £123 to be transferred to Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

Patronage—Crown and lay patron in proportion of two turns to one. Rathkenny Church unnecessary.

16. Kilmainham Wood.

| Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc.* | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 3,716 | 10 | £90 | A. S. Hussey, esq. (Roman Catholic.) |

* Of this sum only £34 12*s*. 4*d*. is paid by the patron, the rest by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The Patron's interest must be purchased.

It would seem advisable to join this to ENNISKEEN, the church being kept up as a chapel of ease to latter.

Proposed new Parish of Enniskeen.

| Enniskeen, | 20,810 | 457 | £350 | Crown. |

17. Tara.

| Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 7,675 | 80 | £290 | Crown. |

The church at Tara is within one and a half miles of Kilmessan. It might, therefore, be well to unite Tara to Kilmessan, keeping up the church at Tara as a chapel of ease. We should thus have

17. (bis). Kilmessan proposed new Parish.

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patrons. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Kilmessan, | 5,824 | 40 | £240 | Crown and Marquess of Drogheda. |
| Tara, | 7,675 | 80 | 290 | Crown. |
| | 13,499 | 120 | £530 | |

The Rector might have £400 per annum, including stipend of Curate for Tara. The balance to be transferred to Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The patronage to be divided between Crown and Marquess of Drogheda in ratio of two to one.

18. Dunshaughlin. (Crown.)

This church is within one and a half miles of Knockmark Church, while its glebe-house is over three miles from the church. It is suggested, therefore, that the following arrangement might be adopted.

Proposed new Parish of Dunshaughlin.

| | Area. | Ch. Pop. | Net Inc. | Patron. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Dunshaughlin and Rathregan, | 7,841 | 35 / 8 =43 | £263 13s. | Crown. |
| Knockmack, without Culmullen, | 3,894 | 14 | 250 0 | Crown. |
| | 11,735 | 57 | £513 13 | |

The Rector of the new parish to have £300 per annum (he would require a horse); the balance to be transferred to Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

He would reside at Knockmark glebe, Railway Station. The glebe-house and lands of Dunshaughlin to be sold—Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The church at Knockmark to be shut up.

5. Bishop of Kilmore.

I give some instances of a re-adjustment of boundaries that might be advantageously made in my diocese.

In the Diocese of Kilmore, in Urney, the townlands of Burn and Patcham lie eight miles from the parish church and one mile from Belturbet, where the people attend; these townlands might well be transferred to the parish of Belturbet or Annagh, to which they naturally belong (being enclosed in it). An equivalent in close proximity to the church of Urney could be given in exchange.

In the large, populous, and richly endowed parish of Killesher there is a second church, Druminiskill, built as a chapel of ease under cap. 72 of 14 & 15 Vict. This ought to be converted into a district church on the removal of the present Rector, who insists on the status of a chapel of ease being maintained and his liability to have but one service therein.

Munterconaught might be augmented with advantage from the parish of Lurgan on the removal of the present incumbent of Lurgan, provided that no change be made as regards the position of the rentcharge derivable from Meath.

In the Diocese of Elphin, the parish of Ahana, part of the union of Boyle, where there is a church five miles from Boyle, might, with great advantage, be separated if there was sufficient endowment; only £40 per annum appertains to Ahana, and Boyle cannot afford to supplement it. I would suggest that £80 per annum be taken from Kilglass, which, though not immediately contiguous, is in the same diocese. On the removal of the present incumbent, should an unexpected increase take place in the income of Ahana, the Bishop, under the control of the Privy Council, would have power to restore the income to Kilglass.

There is a district church called the Rosses in the parish of Drumcliffe, endowed under a trust deed, with about £40 per annum, with the patronage in trustees, of whom the rector is one. After his removal it might be augmented from the parish, and the patronage shared equitably, as the Bishop might think fit, between the rector and the other trustees.

In the Diocese of Ardagh.—There is an outlying district, with a village called Bunlaghy, belonging to the parish of Abbeylara, five or six miles from the parish church, where there is an iron church, in which service is performed in the afternoon of Sunday. This district is enclosed in the parish of Granard, and is much nearer to Granard Church and glebe. It might, therefore, with advantage be merged in Granard, an equivalent from Granard being added to Abbeylara at a short distance from its Church. It is a hardship that the Incumbent of Abbeylara, who has scarcely £100 per annum, should be compelled to travel so many miles on Sunday to hold a second service.

Russah and Rathaspick ought to be permanently united into one parish. They are already episcopally united.

6. Bishop of Derry.

Palace, Derry, July 16, 1868.

Sir,

In reply to your letter of the 7th instant, I beg to say, that having carefully considered the question, as to the union or division of parishes in the dioceses of Derry and Raphoe, I am of opinion that there are but very few parishes, the union of which to another would, at present be advisable, though in many cases it would be an advantage that some outlying portions of parishes should be dissevered from them and added to parishes where churches are more convenient to them. Nearly all the parishes in Derry and Raphoe are of very great extent—many of the largest of them have already been divided, so as to form separate incumbencies, and district churches and chapels of ease have been built within others. The Church population is for the most part scattered over a large extent of country, so that even where the numbers are small, the duties of the clergy are by no means of similar proportion, as pastoral visitation is a laborious office, and a vast deal of time is necessarily spent in bringing the ministrations of religion to the homes of people living many miles from the parish church, and the residence of the clergyman.

Without troubling the Commissioners with the names of a few parishes which, I think, might without very much inconvenience be added to others adjoining, I shall only say that in my opinion it would be better, instead of laying down at present any plan for the division or consolidation of parishes in these dioceses, to allow the case of each to be considered upon its own merits as a vacancy shall occur. I would propose, therefore, that whenever a parish shall become vacant, a return shall be made to the Lord Lieutenant in Council, setting forth all particulars as to its area, population, income, position as regards adjoining parishes and churches, &c., and that it shall then be determined whether it shall be retained or suppressed as a separate parish, or whether it, or any part of it, shall be added to an adjoining parish or parishes. It would, I think, be of very great advantage that some ready and inexpensive mode should be provided, by which outlying portions of a vacant parish could be joined to any other with which, in the opinion of the Bishop, it would be more suitably connected.

Yours, very truly,

William Derry and Raphoe.

J. F. Elrington, esq.

7. Bishop of Ossory.

Kilkenny, July 18, 1868.

Dear Sir,

I have not been able to satisfy myself in a plan for the alteration of the boundaries of parishes throughout my dioceses, and as I do not suppose that anything short of such a general plan would fall in with the object of the Commissioners, I do not offer any suggestions as to such changes in some particular cases in which, no doubt, they might be advantageously made. Indeed if, as I presume is the case, the object of the Commissioners be to enable themselves to recommend a plan for the alteration of the boundaries of parishes throughout the kingdom, by new unions and divisions of parishes, I should fear that plans for separate dioceses would give them but little help unless they were all framed upon the same principle, and unless they were subjected to a very careful revision, including, wherever any doubt arose, an actual investigation upon the spot into all the circumstances of the case.

I venture to repeat the opinion which I stated, I believe, in a former letter, that it would be very desirable that a supplemental commission should be appointed for this specific object.

And, whether such a commission be appointed or not, I take the liberty of suggesting that the fees which are to be paid in the Privy Council Office upon the unions and divisions of parishes are a great hindrance in the way of effecting such alterations, and that it would be a great benefit to the Church that they should be abolished, or at least very greatly reduced.

I remain, dear sir,

Your faithful humble servant,

J. Favière Elrington, esq., ll.d. J. T. Ossory and Ferns.

APPENDIX No. 10.

Suggestions by the Venerable Edward A. Stopford, Archdeacon of Meath, for Re-arrangement of Parishes in the Diocese of Meath.

From a Map and Statement of the Diocese of Meath, carefully prepared by me from the Ordnance Survey, Stackpoole's Returns, and the Diocesan Registry, it appears—

(1). That the diocese of Meath contains about 1,186,840 statute acres, equal to about 1,855 square miles.

(2). That 104 benefices are filled.

(3). That the net income of those benefices, omitting the lands of the archdeaconry, is £24,051 2*s.* 7*d.*

(4). That the number of the members of the Church is 16,289. Hence it follows that—

(a). The average area of a benefice is eighteen square miles.

(c). The average of Church population is over 156.

Considering that the average of a rural parish in England is five square miles; the average of population 387; and of income £285; and considering the great increase of labour and expense incurred in visiting a congregation scattered over a district three and a half times as large, the comparison is not unfavourable.

But averages tend to conceal evils, and leave opens for attack; and the diocese of Meath does greatly need revision of its arrangement.

Statement of the Diocese of Meath as now arranged.

I. Area of Benefices.
II. Church Population.
III. Incomes of Benefices.

I. Area of Benefices.—This varies from two and a half square miles to 128 square miles. I need hardly say more to condemn such an arrangement. But there is an evil in parishes of a reasonable size, where in many cases parishioners are six or eight miles from their parish church and close to some other church; this is a great hindrance to parochial ministration. This has arisen from defects in the law which Parliament for 200 years (from stat. 14 & 15 Ch. II. c. 10) has endeavoured to remedy. Our present system is vicious alike in the size and in the boundaries of parishes; and most of what are called the abuses in the Church arise from defect in the remedy which the law has provided.*

II. Church Population.—This varies from five to 708. Six benefices have less than twenty Church members; fourteen others have less than fifty.

These benefices are much too small, being greatly below the average of the diocese. These anomalies can be in many cases remedied by judicious unions or revision of boundaries, and in a few cases will require suspension, serving one or more parishes by a curate.

III. Incomes of benefices vary from £19 10*s.* to £996 17*s.* 9*d.* Fifteen are under £100.

There is a peculiarity in the distribution of income in the diocese of Meath.

In sixty-four and a half square miles there is no income or ministry.

In 217 square miles there is no income from tithe-rentcharge, but efforts have been made to supply a ministry from other sources. This accounts for so many incomes being so small.

In 850 square miles the incumbents have only part of the tithe-rentcharge. I cannot now state the proportion.

In about 724 square miles the clergy have the whole of the tithe-rentcharge.

These cases are so intermixed as to afford some facility for proportioning income to duty.

* See my pamphlet on Church Reform; Hodges and Smith, Dublin, 1863.

PROPOSED NEW ARRANGEMENT of PAROCHIAL BOUNDARIES in the DIOCESE of MEATH.

Of the above benefices it is proposed to unite twenty to others, or to divide them between others.

| | Benefices. | Area. | Square miles. | Church Members. | Net Income. £ s. d. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 3 | Ardagh, | 3,668 | 5½ | 80 | 195 0 6 |
| 8 | Athlumney, | 2,453 | 3½ | 49 | 67 10 0 |
| 14 | Benowen, | 3,350 | 5 | 49 | 192 16 8 |
| 24 | Clonmacnoise, | 22,417 | 35 | 94 | 257 1 7 |
| 26 | Colpe, | 7,381 | 12 | 94 | 101 0 0 |
| 32 | Drumraney, | 9,102 | 14½ | 39 | 100 3 6 |
| 43 | Galtrim, | 4,128 | 6½ | 13 | 94 5 3 |
| 52 | Kilbride Veston, | 1,980 | 3 | 17 | 19 12 5 |
| 57 | Killeagh, | 8,094 | 12½ | 105 | 151 10 5 |
| 60 | Kilmainham Wood, | 3,716 | 6 | 10 | 89 16 10 |
| 61 | Kilmessan, | 5,823 | 9 | 36 | 244 7 7 |
| 67 | Knockmark, | 9,459 | 15 | 14 | 250 12 0 |
| 68 | Laracor, | 8,335 | 13 | 177 | 273 14 4 |
| 74 | Moylisker, | 9,260 | 14½ | 127 | 209 14 2 |
| 78 | Newtown, | 8,405 | 13 | 51 | 298 0 10 |
| 79 | Newtown Fertulla, | 15,220 | 24 | 324 | 190 2 4 |
| 84 | Raddanstown, | 5,955 | 9 | 38 | 204 6 9 |
| 90 | Rathkenny, | 5,496 | 8½ | 5 | 141 9 4 |
| 100 | Taghmon, | 3,452 | 5½ | 38 | 251 7 8 |
| 104 | Tryvet, | 6,699 | 10½ | 13 | 226 14 9 |

It will be apparent that these changes are not all proposed from want of parishioners; but for the convenience of parishioners, now often too far from their churches, and to provide an efficient ministry. The reasons are stated in all cases in the papers marked with the above numbers from which the Map was prepared. There is nothing in this I would not desire to do, for the efficiency of the Church, wholly irrespective of its defence.

The uniting or distributing of these twenty benefices leaves the number of filled benefices eighty-four. But it is proposed that Fercal Union (No. 40) should be dissolved; that one of its members, Rahan, should be raised from a perpetual curacy to a vicarage; that Lynally, one of its members, should be united to Killbride, Tullamore, and Killaughy, Ballyboy, and Eglish, with Drumcullen, should be formed into independent vicarages.

This would raise the above number of eighty-four to eighty-six.

It is proposed that Foyran, in Rathgraffe union, should be erected into a benefice. (see Rathgraffe, No. 89.)

It is also proposed that Loughan (No. 70) should be erected into a benefice. This would raise the number of benefices to eighty-eight, including the whole of the diocese.

These eighty-eight benefices would vary as follows:—

(1). In area—from eight square miles (only one being under twelve) to forty-seven square miles.

(2). In Church population from thirty-seven to 758.

(3). In income from £200 to £576.

But it is proposed that, of the above eighty-eight benefices, seven should be suspended and served for the present by curates, viz.:—

| | Benefices. | Square miles. | Church Members. | Net Income. £ s. d. | With what. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 2 | Almoritia, | 13½ | 42 | 171 5 8 | |
| 23 | Clongill, | 6 | 40 | 199 5 4 | |
| 28 | Donoghpatrick, | 14 | 30 | 205 13 7 | |
| 29 | Drakestown, | 12 | 44 | 376 4 3 | |
| 80 | Nobber, | 16½ | 37 | 194 10 0 | |
| 87 | Rathconrath, | 13½ | 39 | 208 14 0 | |
| 63 | Kilmore, | 19 | 53 | 255 4 7 | |
| | | 94½ | | 1,610 17 5 | |

The above arranged as they are proposed to be served.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Almoritia, Rathconrath, | 27 | 81 | 200 0 0 | By one Curate. |
| | Clongill, Donoghpatrick, | 20 | 77 | 200 0 0 | Do. |
| | Drakestown, Nobber, | 22 | 81 | 200 0 0 | Do. |
| | Kilmore and Culmullin, | 19 | 53 | 100 0 0 | Do. |

| | £ s. d. |
|---|---|
| Income to be given to Ecclesiastical Commissioners during suspension, | 1,610 17 5 |
| Deduct three Curates, at £200, £600 | |
| One Curate at £100, 100 | |
| | 700 0 0 |
| Net Income during suspension, | 910 17 5 |

Of the seven benefices thus proposed to be suspended, six have Church population under fifty, and one has a Church population over fifty (No. 63) which has fifty-three.

Of the benefices proposed to be kept filled by incumbents, one only has a population under fifty (Ballymaglasson No. 10) which has only forty-five. The proposed arrangement was not made on any hard-and-fast line, but on a careful consideration of the circumstances of each case.

Three elements should be considered in arranging benefices and their income—

I. Area.
II. Church Population.
III. Income.

I. Area is limited by circumstances. There are places where churches must be.

In the plan proposed for eighty-one benefices to be kept filled by incumbents, at present the area will vary from eight square miles (only one being under twelve) to forty-seven square miles, chapels of ease being given to eight of the largest or most important.

These benefices would range as follows in area of square miles:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| From 8 square miles to 20, . . | 37 | From 30 square miles to 35, . . | 4 |
| „ 20 „ 25, . . | 21 | „ 35 „ 40, . . | 4 |
| „ 25 „ 30, . . | 11 | Over 40 „ . . . . | 4 |

The average area in square miles of these benefices is twenty-two and a half square miles. This is four and a half times the average area of a rural parish in England. The lowest of the above benefices is nearly double the English average. This ought to be taken into account when Church members and income are considered.

II. Church Population.—Of the benefices proposed to be filled—

|---|---|
| 1 has under 50 (being 45) | 5 have from 300 to 400 |
| 25 have from 50 to 100 | 4 „ 400 to 500 |
| 18 „ 100 to 150 | 2 „ 500 to 600 |
| 8 „ 150 to 200 | 1 „ 600 to 700 |
| 15 „ 200 to 300 | 1 over 700. |

With respect to Church population it should be observed that Mr. Ward's appropriation clause was limited to benefices which have less than fifty. I propose to fill only one such.

III. Incomes of proposed benefices:

|---|---|
| 15 are to have Incomes of £200 | 9 are to have Incomes from £400 to £500 |
| 39 „ „ from £200 to £300 | 4 „ „ from 500 to 600 |
| 15 „ „ from 300 to 400 | |

The large incomes include three assizes towns and other important towns.

For £200 as the minimum of income, I rely on the Irish Church Temporalities Act, 3 & 4 Wm. IV., c. 37, section 93. That provision was made upon the oft-repeated declaration of Mr. O'Connell, and others, that where a clergyman was really required, he should be paid what would support him. I think that provision was wrong, as applied to benefices not required, and which I think ought not to exist; but applied, as I have applied it, only to benefices where churches are really necessary, and cannot be dispensed with, it seems to me not open to objection.

That there should not be income available for the Ecclesiastical Commissioners out of this diocese is accounted for by the fact of its great extent, and the wide area over which each Incumbent will have to travel, being on the average four and a half times the average of an English rural parish, and also from the fact that in more than one-seventh of the diocese there is no ecclesiastical income; that in more than three-sevenths the incumbents have only part of the income; and that in less than three-sevenths have the Incumbents the whole income.

But it should be observed that in the proposed plan the Ecclesiastical Commissioners would retain all the considerable income which they now derive from the diocese of Meath.

The above proposed arrangement of the diocese of Meath was not prepared to support any foregone conclusion. It was honestly prepared from most careful consideration of all the circumstances of each case, with the sole view of arranging an economical and efficient ministry; it was not until the result appeared that I found how nearly the requirements of the diocese agreed with its income.

That the arrangement I have proposed of parishes in the diocese of Meath would be far more convenient generally to parishioners, and more conducive to an efficient ministry, would be apparent upon a survey of the map I have prepared, and examination of the papers on the several benefices, from which this statement is drawn. But it is not possible to state this in an abstract.

The calculations I have made are necessarily subject to correction by examination of the Townland Survey, and Returns of Church Population in some townlands, which I have not got; and also by examination of Tithe Composition Books, which I cannot make without the Townland Survey, and in some cases where Tithe Composition Books are not in the office, or where they are so drawn as to be unintelligible, inquiry would be necessary. But I believe that the foregoing statement is a near approximation to the facts; and the careful investigation which I have made into one of the most difficult dioceses in Ireland, has satisfied me that with competent knowledge the work could be kept within moderate limits, and that reference to the Townland Survey Maps, and Returns of Church Population in townlands, and examination of Tithe Composition Books, would be much less extensive than might be supposed.

It is worthy of observation how little need arises to suspend benefices, or to transfer income to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. Suspension is recommended only in seven cases, and transfer (often partial) in but a few more. Yet a distribution of income is arrived at, which on careful examination will, I think, be found to deserve approval. This is material towards preserving the parochial system.

In a few cases in the above proposed plan, questions might arise respecting lay patronage, upon which I will be prepared to submit a solution founded on precedents already established.

EDWARD A. STOPFORD,

APPENDIX No. 11.

OBSERVATIONS upon the LAWS regulating the UNION, DIVISION, and SUSPENSION, of PARISHES, and the FORMATION of ECCLESIASTICAL DISTRICTS.

Dr. BALL.

The Commission directs an inquiry into the state and condition of the parishes and districts of the Church Establishment in Ireland, and invites suggestions for their improvement.

There is no doubt that at present, in a large number of instances, the geographical arrangement of the parishes is inconvenient, and the distribution of the parochial emoluments among the clergy not sufficiently proportioned to the work to be done, or the requirements for Church purposes of the locality.

It is, however, an error to attribute what is defective in these respects solely to the peculiar circumstances of this country, as regards the numbers and local situation of the members of the Established Church.

These circumstances, undoubtedly, do largely operate in producing such results. But if they were removed, and if the entire population were to profess the religion of the Established Church, anomalies of this character would still remain. They exist in England not less than in Ireland. Indeed, it is doubtful if there be any country with an old Church Establishment and a territorial system of clerical ministration, in which they do not exist. Laws in such a case may mitigate, but they cannot entirely remove what is, to a certain degree, an incident of the system itself.

A brief examination of the history of the parochial system, as it was originally introduced and came gradually to prevail in the national Churches which adopted it, will illustrate these remarks: and will also afford information deserving to be considered, when the question to what extent immediate alterations of the existing arrangement of the ecclesiastical divisions of the country are advisable, comes to be determined.

Originally, in England (says Burn, citing from Stillingfleet) the bishops and the clergy lived in common; the bishops sent out their clergy to preach to the people as they saw occasion. What is here asserted of England was true generally of most of the European Churches. In effect, at the inception of the episcopal system, the diocese was the parish, the bishop the central and chief pastor, the clergy acted under his authority and in aid of him as missionary teachers, but were not bound to particular localities. According to Hallam, this continued even after the payment of tithes had become general, the bishop receiving them and apportioning them as he thought fit, and the rural churches being a sort of chapels dependent on the cathedral, and served by itinerant ministers at the bishop's discretion.—("Middle Ages," vol. ii., ch. 7.)

The inconvenience of such a system at length terminated it. The dioceses were subdivided into a number of separate and defined districts, each in charge of its own pastor (parochus). These districts were fixed, and their boundaries regulated by a variety of motives and considerations. The centres of population necessarily attracted the first attention. In the rural parts of the country the great lords who gave the endowment claimed a voice in the arrangement. Personal interests, also, and local influences of other kinds, political and social, not unfrequently interfered. But from whatever causes the boundaries of the parishes were at first laid down, certain it is that an alteration in them, as so laid down, became most difficult to accomplish and extremely rare. For this several reasons suggest themselves. When a geographical division has, by competent authority, been limited and circumscribed, it is convenient to refer to it all records and descriptions of local situation. These records and descriptions would become confused and unintelligible, if the name or boundary of the division were altered. A community of interest, too, grows up among those living within the defined area; special taxation comes to be levied with reference to its extent; the inhabitants meet together for mutual assistance and mutual defence, share burdens in common, and acquire common objects and interests. Thus, in any case of territorial division, convenience and habit induce adherence to what has once been settled. In the instance of the parishes this tendency is increased by the connexion of the records with domestic history, and the religious character of the local associations.

But while such causes give permanence to the original parochial arrangements, other causes are at work to vary the distribution of the people in reference to locality. At first only the richest soils are cultivated, and the poorest neglected. Afterwards it becomes more profitable to devote the most fertile to the production of animal food, and to reclaim and till the lands which although, when left to themselves, they return little produce, are yet, under the management of agricultural skill, capable of yielding a profitable return. With these changes in the cultivation of the soil, population shifts. Similar results are also produced by the requirements of advancing civilization. New trades and manufactures become necessary. They are discovered to suit particular places, and attract thither those who pursue these occupations. For their convenience, and, indeed, as often from political or even mere accidental causes, towns and cities spring into existence, or are enlarged. Society outgrows the forms and dimensions in which its provision for religious ministration and superintendence was originally cast.

In this way many instances of endowments unsuitable to the circumstances of the locality—large when the congregation is small, and small when it is large—have arisen. At first the revenues were generally proportioned to the importance of the place. When this needed a large provision, either an extensive district was attached, or opulent parishioners gave special donations to maintain sufficient religious services. These sources of emolument continue although the population has withdrawn. On the other hand, small districts and limited funds will be found to be in general connected with localities formerly of little note.

Another source of disproportion between the endowments and requirements of the parishes was that abstraction of their property which is known under the name of Appropriations. The bishops, the monasteries, the deans and chapters, and their dignitaries, the collegiate bodies and minor ecclesiastical corporations, became possessed, sometimes by royal grant, sometimes by gift from the owners with episcopal assent, as often by force and usurpation, of the revenues of the parishes and left their spiritual duties to be discharged, at first by stipendiary curates, and afterwards, under the coercion of statutes passed for that purpose, by vicars, for whom little provision was made.

By the operation of these various causes, great irregularities and anomalies in the distribution of Church revenues relatively to area and population, existed both in England and Ireland, at a period long anterior to the Reformation.

With a view to make provision for cases where under these circumstances a sufficient income was not supplied for the incumbent, the bishops asserted the right to interfere, and unite benefices together. This power, necessitated by the state of the Church, was affirmed by the law. And accordingly by the common law of England and Ireland, churches and parishes might be consolidated or united with the consent of parson, patron, and ordinary. This, in cases where the patronage was in the bishop, and the benefice was vacant, meant of course at the discretion of the bishop alone. The reasons admitted as justifying the exercise of this discretion, were, vicinity of churches, want of parishioners, or poverty of endowment, in either parish separately.

The first statute in Ireland relating to unions, was the Act 14 & 15 Chas. II., chap. 10 (Irish). The preamble of this statute enumerated the evils which it was meant to remedy :—"Whereas parishes are in some parts of this kingdom so little that five or six lie together within a mile or two . . . and the means also are made so small that sundry of them will not serve for the sustentation of one incumbent; and on the other side in some places parishes are so vast or extended in length that it is difficult for the parishioners to repair to their parish churches and home the same day, and many times so inconveniently divided, that the parishioners of one parish may, with much more convenience repair to another parochial church than to their own, and all parties by an indifferent exchange may be better accommodated; and whereas churches are often most incommodiously seated at the uttermost bounds and limits of a great parish or in some small island." The enacting clauses vested the authority to unite or divide in the Lord Lieutenant, with assent of six or more of the Privy Council, and with consent of patrons and incumbents; and powers for regulation of the patronage were also given. The unions and divisions under this Act were permanent.

This Act was followed by the 2nd Geo. I., chap. 14, and 10th Geo. I., chap. 6, made perpetual in 1739. But as all these statutes have been superseded by the 7th & 8th Geo. IV., chap. 43, which with two subsequent Acts, now forms the code regulating the union and division of parishes, it is unnecessary to state their provisions.

The Act 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 43, empowers the Lord Lieutenant in Council, six Privy Councillors at least consenting, with the advice and approbation of the archbishop of the province and bishop of the diocese, and with the consent of the patrons as regards permanent unions—(1) to divide old parishes; (2) to separate a parish, or part of a parish heretofore united; (3) to unite parishes one to another, or any part of a parish to another parish or part of a parish; (4) to erect such divided or united parishes, or parts of parishes, into new parishes, with all parochial rights; and as regards temporary, i.e., episcopal, unions, it authorizes the bishop to unite two or more parishes together, upon his reporting same to the Privy Council, and if the Privy Council, after a lapse of six weeks, shall not disapprove. This Act contains a variety of other provisions in aid of the enabling clauses.

The Act 7 & 8 Vic., c. 54, enables, with such consent as before, "to unite parts of one or more parishes to any other parish or parishes, or part or parts of a parish or parishes, or such unions, into new parishes, with all parochial rights." It also enables a settlement by the Lord Lieutenant in Council of patronage between the patrons of the parishes or parts of parishes so united, and gives power, on division of parishes, to apportion the building and improvement charges which had existed upon the united benefices so divided.

The Act 11 & 12 Vic., c. 41, repeals such parts of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 43, and 8 & 9 Vic., c. 54, as requires the consent of patrons, and enacts that thenceforth, on any proposed creation or division of an union, a plan shall be lodged in the Council Office, Dublin Castle, and a copy thereof sent and notice given to the patron requiring him, within six weeks, to lodge at the same office any objections to the plan, after which the Council are enabled to proceed of their own authority.

In connexion with these statutable powers for the union or division of parishes, it is proper also to notice certain other Acts of Parliament authorizing or regulating the severance and formation of separate districts and chapelries, each under the spiritual care of a perpetual curate, as its own incumbent. Such were the Acts 11 & 12 Geo. III., c. 9, 13 & 14 Geo. III., c. 27, 23 & 24 Geo. III., c. 49; some clauses of 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 43, 6 & 7 Wm. IV., c. 31, and 12 & 13 Vic., c. 99; all of which it is unnecessary to do more than mention, as their provisions have been repealed and others substituted by the Act next mentioned.

The Act 14 & 15 Vic., c. 72, one of several statutes relating to the Church in Ireland, known as Sir Joseph Napier's Acts, makes provision to legalize the erection of new chapels and churches, proprietary, chapels of ease, and district parochial churches, and the annexation of districts to them. The 13th and 18th sections deal with the formation of these districts. For such as are under the 13th section the rector or vicar of the original parish is not discharged from the cure of souls or other parochial duties; but the districts under the 18th section are declared to be several and distinct districts or parishes for the purposes of the Act and for all purposes whatsoever. The former class of districts has been for distinction termed pastoral; the latter is by the statute designated parochial district.

The parochial system, as originally constituted, has also been further affected by a power of suspension conferred by the Act 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 37, the 116 section of which enables the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, if they think fit, and until they shall otherwise direct, to suspend the appointment of clerk to any benefice in royal or ecclesiastical patronage, in which, by the certificate of the ordinary, divine worship shall not have been celebrated for the three years next preceding the 1st day of February, 1833. Thereupon, all tithes, profits, and emoluments of such benefice vest in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The Ordinary is required to grant the certificate in all such cases as aforesaid when thereunto required by the Commissioners; and, if not a Commissioner, he is associated with the Commissioners in determining upon the propriety of directing or removing such suspension. If the spiritual wants of the suspended benefice appear to require the appointment of an officiating minister, the Commissioners and the Ordinary associated with them may so declare; and may also appoint a moderate stipend to be paid to such minister, and thereupon the Ordinary is required to appoint a curate to perform ecclesiastical duties within the benefice during its suspension. If the spiritual wants of the benefice do not require the appointment of a curate, then the occasional duties are to be committed to the incumbent of some adjoining parish, who is to be remunerated by a moderate stipend, such incumbent to be nominated by the Ordinary.

In the next year another Act was passed (4 & 5 Wm. IV., c. 90), the ninth section of which enacts that it shall not be lawful to fill up any such benefice, not in royal patronage, until the expiration of one calendar month after notice in writing shall have been given to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners by the patron. This section further provides that the certificate of the Ordinary shall be conclusive evidence of the fact that divine worship had not been celebrated during the three years next preceding the first day of February, 1833.

Pluralities are now illegal in Ireland. The acceptance of a second benefice with cure of souls ipso facto avoids the first if also with cure (13 & 14 Vic. c. 98, s. 13).

The exercise from time to time of the various powers of uniting and dividing, whether derived from statutes or the common law, has operated very extensively upon the arrangement of benefices in Ireland. It appears from the Ordnance Survey that parishes (using the term as a geographical distinction) exist to the number of 2,428. These of course represent the ecclesiastical divisions as they either originally, or not long after the introduction of the parochial system, were defined. But, now, the actual ecclesiastical arrangement, for the purposes of the Established Church, is altogether different. Partly by uniting, partly by dividing, partly by reconstructing from portions of original parishes, a new scheme has been carried out. The number of benefices as contradistinguished from geographical parishes, is much less; and the shape and form, in very many instances, not at all the same. The number of benefices (including in that term perpetual curacies), each with a separate incumbent having cure of souls, appears from the returns of the Diocesan Registries to this Commission to amount to 1,518. Besides these there are ninety suspended parishes, the emoluments of which are vested in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who, in the manner to which allusion has been already made, provide for the discharge of any spiritual duties which they may require. There are also sixty-four appropriate and impropriate parishes without a vicar or perpetual curate.

For the purposes of the Roman Catholic Church a still smaller number of parochial divisions have been adopted. From the statistics in Thom's "Directory" they would appear to amount to 1,070.

The distinction between the original parishes and the modern ecclesiastical divisions is requisite to be noted. The Census Commissioners of 1861 adopted the former, termed by them Civil parishes, in the classification of their religious Census. The present Commission requires a classification according to the latter. This, too, was the course adopted by the Commissioners of Public Instruction in 1834. They defined civil parishes as districts prevailing in counties for the purposes of Grand Jury assessments; and parochial benefices, as the territorial extents comprised within each cure of souls. They returned the Church population according to both.

It is obvious that, without this explanation, erroneous conclusions are liable to be drawn from the tables of the last Census. Prima facie, a parish is understood to mean the area under the charge of a separate pastor. The Census Commissioners themselves observe that it has had that meaning for many hundred years. To say, then, that there are a certain number of parishes without any Church population conveys (as has been observed by the present Primate, in a Charge in which this subject has been fully discussed) to most minds the idea that there are the same number of incumbents with no parishioners. This would be an entire misunderstanding of the return, which deals not with the ecclesiastical districts under the care of their respective incumbents but with geographical divisions of the soil, called by the name of parishes, very many of which are themselves parts of the ecclesiastical parishes, and grouped with other civil parishes containing a Church population.

In like manner the position of the suspended benefices has not been always accurately observed. In some summaries of Church statistics that have been published, they are treated as if under the care of incumbents, who receiving the emoluments, have not only no congregations, but even no churches to attend. In effect, these benefices are taken out of the parochial system; no incumbents are appointed; a curate, or more often a neighbouring clergyman for a small stipend, attends to the few Church parishioners; and except for the payment of these clergymen, there is no local appropriation of the revenues, which have become part of the general fund of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and are applicable for the same purposes.

The powers of permanently uniting and dividing parishes, and otherwise varying their form, which are now vested in the Lord Lieutenant and Council, are very extensive. The only consent requisite is that of the archbishop of the province and bishop of the diocese. A lay patron may object before the Council, but he has no veto. The powers may be exercised as well when the benefices are full as when vacant. The operation, however, of the order is in the former case postponed until vacancy.

As has been explained, a bishop can make an union of benefices in his own patronage; but such an union lasts only for the incumbency of the person appointed. He is now so far restrained in exercising this power, that he must give six weeks' notice to the Lord Lieutenant and Council of his intended proceeding. If no disapprobation is signified, his order is valid. A bishop, however, cannot divide, he can only unite, parishes.

The statutable powers of suspension are confined to cases of non-performance of Divine service for three years before 1st February, 1833. The provisions do not reach to cases of discontinuance subsequently existing, nor do they apply if in 1833 the benefice was part of an union, although since severed and separate. In the 9th section of the Act 4 and 5 Wm. IV., c. 90, there is an omission of parishes in the patronage of corporations aggregate.

Since the Act of George IV. (1827) about 70 Orders in Council for uniting or dissolving unions and dividing parishes have been made under its authority. Taking into account the length of time elapsed and the frequent objections to the existing parochial boundaries, this must be considered a sparing use of the powers of the statute. For this sparing use there are several causes. At present it is not the special duty of any person to discover or propose improvements. Ecclesiastical patrons have a natural reluctance to remove old landmarks. Lay patrons prefer a few large to more numerous small livings, and oppose subdivision. The proceedings are attended with some expense. In the case, too, of prospective alterations, no one can foresee whether what is expedient now, will continue to be so hereafter.

Some, whose opinion is entitled to weight, observing how little advantage has been heretofore taken of the means afforded by these statutable powers to remodel the parochial arrangements, and impressed with a belief that measures of this kind would remove many anomalies in the condition of the Irish Church, have proposed that either by the present Commissioners or others with like powers, a local investigation into the circumstances of the ecclesiastical parishes and districts should be made, and a scheme of re-arrangement devised; but whether such an investigation would be attended with much practical result may well be doubted. Obviously, it is only gradually and slowly that its recommendations can come into operation, for all existing incumbencies and life interests must be respected. When, at their termination, the recommendations are capable of taking effect, everything may be changed, and the Reform require itself to be again reformed.

These observations are illustrated by the history of the Commission of Inquiry into Unions in the Church in Ireland, which was issued in the year 1830, and which reported in 1831. The report is confined to the province of Armagh, then one of four provinces. The Commissioners were persons of eminence and knowledge, and the report is drawn with care and ability, yet the proceedings were found to be slow, expensive, and of such little result, that after this one report they were allowed to drop. The report is drawn with care and ability, but it has been ever since neglected and inoperative.

APPENDIX No. 12.

The Primacy of Ireland.

Rev. Dr. Reeves.

Whatever may have been the form of ecclesiastical government introduced into Ireland by St. Patrick, it is quite clear that within a century and a half of his time, probably owing to the peculiar condition of society, the monastic system so far prevailed as entirely to supersede the diocesan, and retained its influence until the commencement of the twelfth century, when, for the first time, systematic measures were adopted for the reduction of the island to regularly defined dioceses. Mother churches had existed from the earliest period, some of them founded by bishops, some by priests, and one, at least, by a woman, and to these were attached conventual establishments, which were provided respectively with a superior, and a staff of clerical ministers. The abbot himself was not of necessity a bishop, for in some of the great monasteries, as Bangor, Clonmacnois, and Derry, the example of the founder entailed a preference for the presbyterate; but connected with the society was a bishop, who discharged the functions of ordination and some other duties, but professed no jurisdiction as such, and was subject to the abbot. These institutions were at one period very numerous, and the influence of each was measured, not so much by territory as constituency, being commensurate with the clan or tribe in connexion with which it was founded.

At the same time, the distribution of Ireland into secular provinces was generally acknowledged, and this, to some extent, suggested a grouping of churches, there being one in each province which enjoyed some pre-eminence. Thus Ulster accorded the place of honour to Armagh, Munster to Cashel or Emly, Connaught to Tuam, Leinster to Kildare or Ferns, and Meath to Clonard or Clonmacnois.

Armagh owed its dignity to the supposed choice of St. Patrick, which again may have been influenced by its proximity to Emania, the ancient capital of Ulster. Cashel was from a very remote age, the regal seat of Munster, and here its king, who embraced Christianity, was baptized by St. Patrick. Tuam, on the other hand, possessed no claim to secular precedence, because Rathcroghan, near Elphin, was the seat of government in Connaught, and in this case the pre-eminence was probably due to the sanctity or reputation of St. Iarlath, the founder. Kildare was founded by a woman, who transmitted to her successors the right of nominating the bishop; yet the bishops of this church were, in regard to St. Brigid's memory, for some time reckoned as of first rank in the province. At a later period the successor of St. Mogue, in the church of Ferns, being in nearest connexion with the sovereign, was regarded as the chief ecclesiastic in the province. Until the tenth century, when the Danes gave it importance, Dublin was unknown as a city, and it is entirely unnoticed in the details of St. Patrick's labours, or, indeed, of any early ecclesiastic.

When, therefore, there were no regular dioceses in Ireland, or a stated succession of bishops in any one church, it would be vain to expect to find any trace of archbishop, metropolitan, or primate, in the ordinary acceptation of the terms. But there was a certain pre-eminence confessedly possessed by one church over all other churches in Ireland, from primitive times, and its chief minister continually enjoyed many of the attributes of primacy, such as Precedence, Superior dignity, Receiving of appeals, Right of visitation, and Special jurisdiction. These, as a matter of course, were converted into actual Primacy, when, in the twelfth century, the diocesan distribution was established. Ard-macha, or Armagh, was the church to which these prerogatives belonged, and a separate consideration of them may not be out of place.

I. Precedence.—The Book of Armagh, a MS. of the year 807, contains the following passage:—"De speciali reverentia Airdd-machæ et honore præsulis ejusdem urbis dicamus. Ista quippe civitas summa et libera a Deo est constituta et ab anguelo Dei et ab apostolico viro sancto Patricio episcopo specialiter dedicata. Preest ergo quodam privilegio omnibus æclessiis ac monasteriis cunctorum Hibernensium vel superna auctoritate summi pontificis illius fundatoris"—(fol. 21 ab).

A letter which was written by the clergy of Rome to those of Ireland in 640, and is preserved by Venerable Bede, recites in the superscription the names of eleven ecclesiastics, of whom the first five are designated bishops, and amongst these Tomianus holds the first place. Now we learn from the ancient Irish annals that Tomene, son of Ronan, was Bishop of Armagh from 623 to 661.

About the year 695, a synod was convened at Birr, which was attended by thirty-nine ecclesiastics, and the chief secular lords of Ireland. First on the whole list is the name of "Flann Febla the wise, Bishop of Ardmacha." We learn from the annals that he died in 715.

It is doubtful whether any generic authority is implied by the epithet "Hiberniæ episcopus," which Lanfranc, in 1081, coupled with the name of Domnaldus, who was the Abbot-Bishop of Armagh, but there seems to be some special significance in the expression "Senior Domnaldus," which Anselm, in 1095, applied to the same prelate, when addressing his "reverendi coepiscopi" of Ireland.

II. Higher dignity.—The title Co-arb, or Successor, of Patrick, which was universally and exclusively applied by the Irish to the Abbot of Armagh, whether he happened to be bishop or priest, was in itself an acknowledgment of his superior dignity, as deriving this distinction by spiritual inheritance from the Apostle of Ireland. Agreeably to this notion, the clergy of Armagh were designated by Irish writers, the Samhtha Patraig, or "Congregation of Patrick." In virtue of this dignity the Successor of Patrick was the ecclesiastic who inaugurated the chief sovereigns, and whose voice had the greatest weight in mediation among the princes of the land. Armagh had its "Cemetery of the kings," and here, instead of Killaloe, Brien Boru was buried after his fall at Clontarf in 1014.

With this agrees what St. Bernard says of the dignity of Armagh and its chief minister in connexion with the injunctions of Malachi O'Morgair—"Hoc specialiter ambobus Momoniæ regibus, et majoribus terræ, sancti Patricii auctoritate præcepit, cujus reverentia et honore tanquam Apostoli illius gentis qui totam patriam convertisset ad fidem, sedes illa in qua et vivens præfuit, et mortuus requiescit, in tanta ab initio cunctis veneratione habetur, ut non modo episcopi et sacerdotes, et qui de clero sunt, sed etiam regum ac principum universitas subjecta sit Metropolitano in omni obedientia, et unus ipse omnibus præsit."

III. Receiving of Appeals.—In a collection of ancient canons ascribed to St. Patrick, which has been printed by Ware and others, we find this—"Si quæ quæstiones in hac insula oriantur ad sedem apostolicam referantur," which is expressed more distinctly in the Book of Armagh—"Quæcumque causa valde difficilis exorta fuerit atque ignota cunctis Scotorum gentium judicibus, ad cathedram archiepiscopi Hibernensium, id est, Patricii atque hujus antestitis examinationem recto refferenda"—(fol. 21 bb). This passage is further interesting as the earliest and almost only genuine authority, till the twelfth century, in which the term "archbishop" occurs.

IV. Right of Visitation.—In 973, the annalists inform us, Dubhdalethe, the Successor of Patrick, made a circuit of Munster, and obtained his demand. In 1022 Amhalgaidh, Successor of Patrick, went into Munster for the first time, and made a great visitation thereof. In 1069, Maelisa, son of Amhalgaidh, made a visitation of Munster for the first time, and obtained a full visitation-tribute, both in silver pennies and offerings. So of Domhnall in 1095. In 1107 Cellach made a visitation of Munster for the first time, and he obtained a full tribute, namely, seven cows, and seven sheep, and half an ounce of silver, from every cantred in Munster, besides many jewels; and Cellach received an Exalted Degree on this occasion at the request of the men of Ireland. In 1110 he visited Meath in like manner; in 1109 and 1117 he visited Connaught, and in 1121, Munster a second time. In 1134 and 1136 Malachy O'Morgair, Successor of Patrick, visited Munster, and obtained his tribute. In 1140 Gelasius, Successor of Patrick, made a visitation of Connaught for the first time, and obtained his full tribute, and their churches were subjected to his jurisdiction by Turlogh O'Connor and the chieftains of Connaught. In 1151 a similar visitation of Connaught was performed the second time by Gillamacliag, Successor of Patrick, and for the fourth time in 1172.

We are not to suppose that these visitations were analogous in their professed object to the Provincial Visitations of later days (for the original word cuairt strictly signifies "a circuit"), but they resembled them in one respect, the exaction of tribute or fees, and clearly indicated some inherent right in the Abbot of Armagh to assert the superiority of his church throughout the whole kingdom.

V. Special Jurisdiction.—The church of Trim was founded by St. Patrick twenty-five years before Armagh, and was named after him. From the Book of Armagh we learn that in early times it was closely connected with the metropolitan church, and through successive ages we find traces of this connexion existing, even to the present day. The Anglo-Norman castle, which was erected here soon after the Invasion, was built upon the Primate's land, and to him, as chief proprietor, an annual rent was paid by the Lords of Meath; and when, by reason of minority, the earldom of Ulster was in the guardianship of, and afterwards by defect of male issue merged in, the crown, we find at various dates, from 1360 down, the annual sum of £8 16*s.* 7½*d.* paid by the Exchequer to the Archbishop of Armagh for the "site of the castle, town, and bridge of Trim." For some reason not recorded this rent has ceased to be paid, but the Bishop of Meath receives £3 15*s.* a year from the Treasury for the manor of Trim, while the Primate, in right of his see, is seized of certain tenements on the north side of the Church of St. Patrick of Trim, and three acres of land in Crowpark, adjoining the town.

The church lands of Drumlease, in the county of Leitrim and diocese of Kilmore, formerly belonged to the Church of Armagh, and the charter of them is preserved in the Book of Armagh. They were, however, transferred to the see of Kilmore at an early date.

The manor of Donaghmore, in the county of Down and diocese of Dromore, with the rectory and advowson of St. MacErc's church thereon, has been connected with the see of Armagh from time immemorial, and is probably one of the earliest endowments of it.

St. Patrick's Church of Duleek, in the county and diocese of Meath, and some tenements there, are on record as held under the see of Armagh since the fourteenth century. Judging from the name, antiquity of the place, and insignificance of the holding, we are justified in supposing that this is an extremely ancient appendage of the see.

The church of Coleraine was among the earliest and most famous of St. Patrick's foundations, and, in consideration of this, the abbey and its lands were at an early date connected with the Church of Armagh. But soon after the English invasion, Coleraine becoming an important frontier station of the English, Hugh de Lacy, Earl of Ulster, was desirous to obtain these lands, and exchanged the manor of Nobber, in the county of Meath, for them, with Albert of Cologn, who was Archbishop of Armagh from 1240 to 1247, and the exchange was confirmed in 1301 by Nicholas MacMolisa, a succeeding Primate.

In the county and diocese of Derry, the manor of Kilrea, on the Bann, was held, in the year 1430, from the Archbishop of Armagh, by the Bishop of Derry, and, at the same time, the advowson and rectory of the parish, together with the adjacent grange of Agivey, belonged to the Abbot of St. Peter and St. Paul's of Armagh. Here, again, is evidently a very early connexion. In the same county and diocese the erenagh lands of Clooney, consisting of five carucates, with a chapel, in the parish of Clondermot, in 1397, belonged to the church of Armagh, and continued so till the Plantation, when they were transferred to Derry, reserving two marks a year rent to the Archbishop.

The Archbishops of Armagh also claimed nine churches in the diocese of Tuam with their possessions, some of which, especially Oughaval, in which Croagh-Patrick is situated, are noticed in St. Patrick's life. The claim, however, seems to have been so sweeping in its nature that, in the disputes which arose between the sees of Armagh and Tuam on the subject, Pope Innocent III. was appealed to, and his successor, Honorius III., in 1216, decided to some degree in favour of the Archbishop of Tuam; though, in after times, we find some of them, together with others in the dioceses of Elphin and Clonfert, still enjoyed by the Primates; for in 1351 the Papal sanction was asked, by Richard Fitzralph, for the exchange of them; but after this they disappear, except the lands of Turlough, to which the Primate appointed a seneschal in 1365, as also at later dates, and the ancient ecclesiastical character of which is still testified by the tall round tower which remains there.

But there is a more remarkable case of remote jurisdiction presented in the case of Ardpatrick, in the south of the county of Limerick. Here are the remains of an ancient church and round tower, indicating an early foundation, which the name and tradition ascribe to St. Patrick. There was found to be a corbeship here in the time of Queen Elizabeth, and at that period it was tributary to the see of Limerick, but there is reason to believe that, as in the case of some other churches above mentioned, the possession had been transferred from the remote to the nearer see. At 844, the Annals of Ulster tell us that Forannan, the Abbot of Ard-Macha, was taken prisoner by the Danes, at Cluain-Comharda, with his relics and people, and they were carried by them to their ships at Limerick. The Successor of Patrick was here far away from his principal church, but attended by his muinter, or congregation, and the minna, or reliquaries of his church, which were carried about in testimony of his office, and to substantiate his pecuniary demands as Chief Abbot of Ireland. Cluain-Comharda, now called Colmanswell, was a very natural place for the Danes to light upon the Abbot of Armagh and his party, because this parish is situated but a short way to the west from the parish of Ardpatrick. And again, at a later date, 1129, the annalists record the death of Cellach (the Celsus of St. Bernard) Co-arb of Patrick, at Ardpatrick in Munster, where we should wonder to find an Abbot of Armagh, were it not for the relationship which existed between these two churches though so far asunder.

Besides the above-mentioned privileges of the Abbot of Armagh, which were local, there were certain general rights which he possessed, as a source of revenue.

When Brian Boru in 1004, the third year of his reign, made an expedition to Ulster, he spent a week in Armagh, and, as the annalists inform us, "left twenty ounces of gold as an offering upon the altar of Ard-Macha." A charter, which he granted on this occasion to the church there is entered, in a contemporary hand, in the Book of Armagh, in these words—"Sanctus Patricius iens ad cælum mandavit totum fructum laboris sui tam babtismi tam causarum quam elemosinarum deferendum esse apostolicæ urbi quæ Scotice nominatur Ardd Macha. Sic reperi in bebliothecis Scotorum. Ego scripsi, id est Calvus Perennis in conspectu Briain imperatoris Scotorum; et quod scripsi finivit pro omnibus regibus Maceriæ." The writer was a Munster ecclesiastic, and confessor of Brian, whose name, Maelsuthain, is literally rendered in Latin, Calvus Perennis, and his death is entered in the annals at 1031. Maceria is the Latin equivalent for the Irish word Caisiol, or Cashel, and by the "Reges Maceriæ" were denoted Bryan and his successors, as kings of Munster, whose seat was Cashel. Traces of these privileges are found in the annals, where mention is made of the Maer, or "Steward" of the Congregation of Patrick in various parts of Ireland; and, at a later date, in the Armagh Registers, from the fourteenth century till the Reformation, there are various notices of the "Locacio officii Sancti Patricii," that is, the "Letting out of the office of St. Patrick," which consisted, as we are informed, in receiving the "primogenita animalium," being a kind of first-fruits, payable by the laity to the church of Armagh. Another impost was designated "St. Patrick's ridges," which was abolished in 1640, on a remonstrance from the House of Commons to the Lord Deputy, wherein it is described as "a ridge of winter corn and a ridge of oats for every plow."

With the commencement of the twelfth century a new era opened in the ecclesiastical polity of Ireland. Domhnall, son of Awly, chief Co-arb of Patrick, having died in 1105, Cellach, whom St. Bernard calls Celsus, was elected in his stead, being then in his twenty-fifth year, and was installed on the 23rd of September. In the following year he made his first visitation of Munster and "received the degree of Noble Bishop" on this occasion, at the request of the men of Ireland. This was clearly the assumption of the rank of archbishop and metropolitan. In 1108 he made his first visitation of Connaught, in 1110 his first visitation of Meath, and, finally, in 1121 he was elected to the bishopric of Dublin, by the suffrages of Danes and Irish. It is probable, indeed all but certain, that it was on the occasion of his first official visit to Munster that he, in exercise of his now acknowledged primacy, created the second metropolitan seat of which St. Bernard speaks:—"Erat et altera metropolitica sedes, quam de novo constituerat Celsus, primæ tamen sedi, et illius archiepiscopo subdita tanquam primati." It was in this year that Murtagh O'Brien, great grandson of Brian Boru, presented Cashel to the Church, in honour of God and Patrick, and at the instance of Maelmuire O'Dunain, who although previously Bishop of Meath, exercised great influence in the counsels of the King of Munster, and is described by the annalists as "noble bishop and chief senior of Erin." It is very likely that the influence of Gillebert, Bishop of Limerick, who was Papal legate in Ireland at this time, was strenuously exerted to bring about a conformity with England in church discipline; and the first step towards this was the convening of a council whose object and proceedings are thus briefly described by an early authority, cited by Keating:—"It was in the time of this Murtagh, likewise, that there was celebrated in Ireland another general convention or synod, at Rath-Breasail. This was in the year of our Lord 1110, according to the ancient book of the Annals of Clonenagh-Fiontain of Leix, in which are set down the principal matters that were transacted in that synod. Gille-Espog, Bishop of Limerick, was he that was then Pope's legate in Ireland, and he it was that was president of that council. The following are the matters which were ordained therein:—As there were established in the south of England twelve bishops under the see of Canterbury, and in the north, twelve bishops under that of York, a like system was ordained for Ireland in the synod of Rathbreasail, namely, twelve bishops in Leth-Mogha (the southern half), twelve bishops in Leth-Cuinn (the northern half), and two bishops in Meath. It was in this synod that the churches of Ireland were given over completely to the bishops, without reservation of rent or control over them for any temporal rulers, for ever. It was in it, likewise, that the dioceses of the bishops of Ireland were constituted. These to be the bishops of Leth-Cuinn: six in the province of Ulster, including the Primate; five in the province of Connaught, and two in Meath. The sees in the province of Ulster are these—Armagh, which is the first of all Ireland, the archbishop which obtains this is called Primate of all Ireland, and in dignity outshines all the other bishops of Ireland. The sees of Munster and Cashel under the Archbishop of Leth-Mogha."

In the subscriptions the cross or signature of Gille, the legate, came first, and then that of Cellach, Coarb of Patrick and Primate of Ireland.

Though some time elapsed before the provisions of this council were carried out, there was clearly accorded a formal acknowledgment to the see of Armagh of its precedence and authority, and it is to be observed that the see of Dublin is not noticed in it, being as it were a peculiar, or exempt jurisdiction, of Canterbury, established in the city for the benefit of the Danes, while the diocese in which it was situate was Glendalough, the limits of which were coincident with the present bounds of Dublin and Glendalough; and when, ten years after, the Danish Bishop of Dublin died, his diocese was placed under the administration of the Primate.

As yet, then, there were but two archbishops in Ireland, namely, those of Armagh and Cashel; and the former continued to assert his superiority, for in 1134 and 1136 Malachy O'Morgair, the Primate, visited Munster and obtained his full demand. In 1140 the Abbot of Armagh made a visitation of Connaught, and we are told that the King and nobles of Connaught agreed to place their churches in subjection to his control.

The Synod of Kells, which was held in March, 1152, was presided over by the Bishop of Lismore who was Papal legate. Next in order to him was Gilla-mac-liag, Primate of Ireland, then the Archbishop of the Momonians, then the Archbishop of the Connacians then the Bishop of Athcliath (Dublin) and the Leinster men. Dublin and Tuam were erected into archiepiscopal sees, and palls were presented to the prelates of them, as well as to the two antecedent archbishops. This extension of the archiepiscopate is said to have taken place against the rights of the clergy of Patrick and Columcille, and to have been protested against by the clergy of Armagh and Down. It was also enacted that the Archbishop of Armagh should be Primate over the others.

A synod of the clergy of Ireland, which was held at Bri-Mic-Taidhg, in 1158, was presided over by the Coarb of Patrick; and another at Clane, in 1162, by the same ecclesiastic, at which an enactment was made that no person should become a Lector in any church in Ireland who had not previously studied at Armagh.

In 1172 Gilla-mac-liag, Coarb of Patrick and Primate of Ireland, made his fourth general visitation of the province of Connaught.

Though Dublin was the latest of the sees of Ireland in attaining to episcopal dignity, the existence of the civil metropolis rapidly increased its importance after the English invasion. The Archbishop, in 1182, obtained a Papal bull forbidding any archbishop or bishop to celebrate any synod or hear any causes in his province, and this was twice renewed in 1216. The Archbishop of Cashel also entered into a covenant with the Archbishop of Dublin about the year 1225 to oppose the Primate's claim with joint care and expenses; and in 1221 the latter obtained a bull confirmatory of that of 1182. On the other hand the ancient jurisdiction of the see of Armagh was confirmed by bulls of Celestine III., and Innocent III. In 1250 the controversy was referred to Rome; and, after eleven years suspense, Celestine III. amply confirmed the primatial rights of Armagh in the person of Patrick O'Scanlan, who, in 1262, convened a synod at Drogheda, where he solemnly proclaimed them. The Archbishop of Tuam, Florence M'Flinn, in 1255, followed the example of his brethren of Dublin and Cashel, and opposed the Primate's claims; but his rebellion elicited in the same year a bull from Alexander IV., who ordained that the Archbishop of Armagh and his successors might if they wished style themselves Primates of the province of Tuam, and cause their cross to be carried before them through the whole province, also visit the province every five years, and for twenty-seven days continue the visitation on each periodical occasion. From 1311 out, the Archbishops of Dublin strenuously resisted the Primates in their attempts to carry their cross before them through the city of Dublin, and in many cases resorted to outrage rather than justice, which practically had the effect of almost banishing the Primates from Dublin, and in answer to many writs of summons they reply that owing to the violent opposition of the Archbishops of Dublin they were prevented from asserting their legal precedence, and therefore plead this as their excuse for non-attendance. In consequence of this opposition also the Primates could not hold ordinations in Dublin, and we therefore find them sometimes executing this office in the inconsiderable church of Dunboyne, which is distant about eight miles from the capital, being the nearest church in the province of Armagh to the civil metropolis.

In 1551 King Edward VI. withdrew the primacy from George Dowdall, Archbishop of Armagh, and by letters patent granted it to George Brown, Archbishop of Dublin. That patent, however, was surrendered to Queen Mary, and, two years after, she restored the dignity to Armagh. The validity of the latter instrument was questioned by Lancelot Bulkeley, Archbishop of Dublin, and the controversy between him and Primate Ussher was referred by Charles I. to Lord Deputy Falkland, who, after a patient hearing of the respective claims, decreed that the Archbishop of Armagh and his successors should have precedency of the Archbishop of Dublin in Parliament, and Convocation House, and all other meetings, and in all commissions, and all places, the diocese or province of Dublin not being excepted. "An Historical Narration of the Controversy betwixt the Archbishops of Armagh and Dublin touching the Primacy," which was drawn up by Ussher, is printed in Wilkins's "Concilia" (vol. iv., p. 80), and in the Appendix to Ussher's Life, by the Rev. Dr. Elrington, p. cxxix.; the subject is also largely discussed in Harris's edition of Ware's "Bishops," pp. 44, 68, 72–80.

APPENDIX No. 14.

PLAN for further CONSOLIDATION and RE-ARRANGEMENT of the DIOCESES in IRELAND.

BISHOP OF DOWN. Palace, Holywood, Belfast,

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN, April 13, 1868.

In the discussion in the House of Lords last Session I felt it my duty, foreseeing the crisis which has now come, to advocate a large and comprehensive plan of internal reform in the temporalities and disposition of the Church in Ireland, and recommended, among other changes, that the prelates should be reduced from two archbishops and ten bishops to one archbishop and five bishops. As I anticipated I incurred at the time much obloquy, but I venture to think that late events have modified the disinclination then manifested to the reforms I suggested. I now beg to lay before you my arrangement for the redistribution of the episcopacy.

I annex a skeleton map of Ireland divided according to the new sees, and, in a tabular form, I give the number of members of the Established Church, incumbents, curates, and churches, in each of the proposed united sees. I return the number of the clergy as they now are, but I conceive your investigations have convinced you that a considerable reduction must take place to make reward and labour bear their due proportion.

I am, my lords and gentlemen,

Your faithful servant,

ROB. DOWN AND CONNOR AND DROMORE.

To the Commissioners of Established Church, Ireland.

APPENDIX No. 15.

SUGGESTIONS for a RE-ARRANGEMENT of BISHOPRICS and DIOCESES, which were submitted for the consideration of the COMMISSION, by some of the COMMISSIONERS.

1. SUGGESTIONS BY COLONEL ADAIR.

The maintenance of episcopal supervision is essential to the system of the Protestant Church established in Ireland.

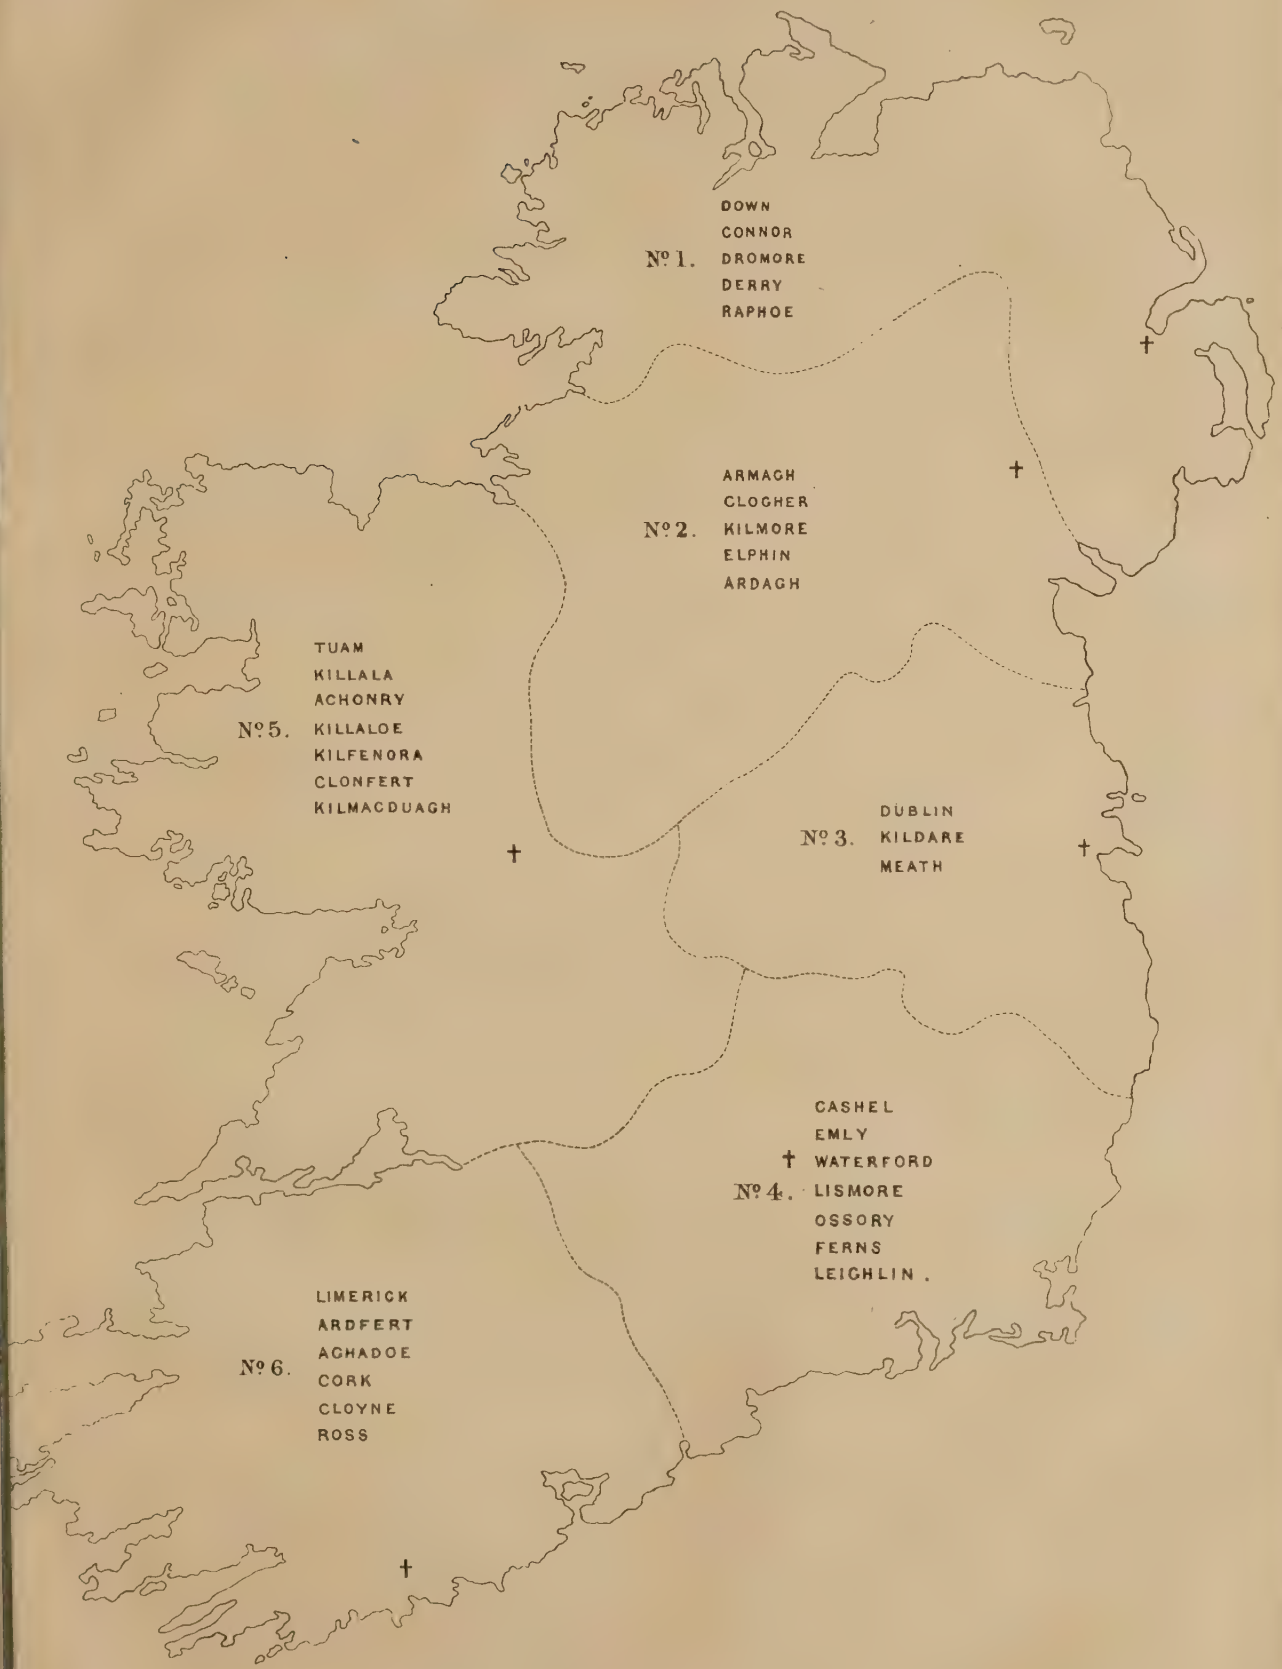
And it is evident that alterations may be effected in order to greater efficiency of ministration.

It is not easy to proportion payment precisely to labour, computing either by benefices, population, or surface; but it may be assumed that as regards supervision of the clergy space is as population.

The question of arrangement on purely geographical considerations is now modified and difficulties obviated by the general extension of railways.

The lines point in the direction of the positions eligible for the future cathedral cities, the sole change requisite being from Downpatrick to Belfast.

MAP TO ACCOMPANY BISHOP OF DOWN'S PAPER



And there are not more than 11 or 12 districts in Ireland more than 8 statute miles from some line. (See Schedule.)

Now in reviewing the distribution of duties and the necessities of ministration by the episcopate in the system constructed under the Church Temporalities Act 3 & 4 Wm. IV., c. 37, great discrepancies will be perceived to exist.

It is therefore advisable to readjust and classify existing sees.

| „ Cork, | 2,500 | Limerick, | 1,500 | Cashel, | 1,250 |
| | £11,000 | | £7,000 | | £5,000 |

It is to be observed that the existing sees suffragan should lapse on each avoidance unless retained under authority of the Lord Lieutenant in Council in accordance with the spirit of the statute Hen. VIII. c. 14. (cf. infrà).

The English episcopate is divided into eight classes, with incomes varying from £15,000 to £2,000.

The total proposed charge=£23,000, as compared with present charge=£55,110 2*s.* 9*d.* These salaries should be free of all charges, except income tax, the see house and demesne lands (of a fixed and uniform extent), maintained in repair and kept in order, as at present arranged, that is, with impeachment of waste.

It is probable that the establishment charges of the episcopate are nearly alike in each see, regard being had to local circumstances. Therefore the sees of Cork and Limerick, as being placed in provincial capitals, have a salary allotted somewhat in excess of proportion.

Yet due weight must be given to the fact, that the necessary outlay for charitable or public objects must be larger in centres of dense population than in rural districts, and that the discharge of duties of this nature enters largely into the episcopal function.

Cathedral Services.

One Dean and one Chapter to be maintained in the metropolitan see; and one for each of the three provincial sees, with income proportionate to the lowest scale of episcopal revenue.

But Cathedral services might be revived, under competent authorization, at the expense of private individuals, in suffragan sees, to be created hereafter.

Authority of the Metropolitan and of the Provincial Bishops.

The powers of visitation of suffragans to be vested in the Provincial Bishops must be defined by legislative authority. And for this purpose power should be reserved to the future Ecclesiastical Commission to frame orders, which, when approved by the Lord Lieutenant in Council, should have the force of statutes, as is provided in the analogous case of the Ecclesiastical Commission, England.

Alternative Scheme for establishing Suffragan Bishops by Selection of Archbishops or Provincial Prelates, in place of Bishops Suffragan elected by Royal Congé d' Elire.

At an early period in the establishment of the Reformed Episcopal Church of England it was perceived that a third class of Bishops, namely, of Suffragans by selection of the Prelates in possession of existing sees, would materially assist in ministration, and a statute was passed for this purpose.

26 HEN. VIII. c. 14.

"For Nomination of Suffragans and Consecration of them.

"Albeit that sithen the Beginning of this present Parliament, good and honourable Ordinances and Statutes have been made and established for Elections, Presentations, Consecrations, and investing of Archbishops and Bishops of this Realm, and in all other the King's Dominions, with all Ceremonies appertaining unto the same, as by sundry Statutes thereof made more at large is specified; yet nevertheless no Provision hitherto hath been made for Suffragans which have been accustomed to be had within this Realm for the more speedy Administration of the Sacraments, and other good, wholsom and devout Things and laudable Ceremonies, to the Increase of God's Honour, and for the Commodity of good and devout People: Be it therefore enacted by authority of this present Parliament that the towns of Thetford, Ipswich, Colchester, Dover, Guilford, Southampton, Taunton, Shaftsbury, Molton, Marlborough, Bedford, Leicester, Glocester, Shresbury, Bristow, Penreth, Bridgwater, Nottingham, Grantham, Hull, Huntington, Cambridge, and the Towns of Pereth and Berwick, S. Germains in Cornwal, and the Isle of Wight, shall be taken and accepted for Sees of Bishops Suffragans to be made in this Realm, and in Wales, and the Bishops of such Sees shall be called Suffragans of this Realm; and that every Archbishop and Bishop of this Realm, and of Wales, and elsewhere within the King's Dominions, being disposed to have any Suffragan, shall and may at their Liberties name and elect, that is to say, every of them for their peculiar Diocese, two honest and discreet Spiritual Persons, being learned, and of good Conversation, and those two Persons so by them to be named, shall present to the King's Highness, by their Writing under their Seals, making humble Request to his Majesty, to give to one such of the said two Persons as shall please his Majesty, such Title, Name, Stile and Dignity of Bishop of such of the Sees above specified, as the King's Highness shall think most convenient for the same; and that the King's Majesty, upon every such Presentation, shall have full Power and Authority to give to one of those two Persons so to his Highness to be presented, the Stile, Title, and Name of a Bishop of such of the Sees aforesaid, as to his Majesty shall be thought most convenient and expedient, so it be within the same Province whereof the Bishop that doth name him is.

II. "And that every such Person to whom the King's Highness shall give any such Stile and Title of any of the Sees aforenamed, shall be called Bishop Suffragan of the same See whereunto he shall be named.

III. "And after such Title, Stile and Name so given as is aforesaid, the King's Majesty shall present every such Person, by his Letters Patents under his Great Seal, to the Archbishop of Canterbury, if the Town whereof he hath his Title be within the Province of Canterbury, and likewise to the Archbishop of York, if the Town whereof he hath his Title be within the Province of York, signifying and declaring by the same Letters Patents, the Name of the Person presented, and the Stile and Title of Dignity of the Bishoprick whereunto he shall be nominated, requiring the same Archbishop to whom such Letters Patents shall be directed, to consecrate the said Person so nominate and presented to the same Name, Title, Stile and Dignity of Bishop, that he shall be nominated and presented unto, and to give him all such Consecrations, Benedictions and Ceremonies, as to the Degree and Office of a Bishop Suffragan shall be requisite.

IV. "And be it also enacted by Authority aforesaid, That all and every such Person and Persons as shall be nominated, elected, presented and consecrated as is afore rehearsed, shall be taken, accepted and reputed, in all Degrees and Places, according to the Stile, Title, Name, and Dignity that he shall be so presented unto, and have such Capacity, Power and Authority, Honour, Pre-eminence and Reputation, in as large and ample manner, in and concerning the Execution of such Commission, as by any of the said Archbishops or Bishops within their Diocese shall be given to the said Suffragans, as to Suffragans of this Realm heretofore hath been used and accustomed.

V. "And be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That every Archbishop of this Realm, to whom any the King's Letters Patents, in the Cases afore rehearsed, shall be directed, having no lawful Impediment, shall perform and accomplish the Effects and Contents of this Act within the Time of three Months next after such Letters Patents shall come to their Hands; any Usages, Customs, foreign Laws, Privileges, Prescriptions, or other Thing or Things heretofore used, had, or done to the contrary hereof notwithstanding.

VI. "Provided always, That no such Suffragans, which shall be made and consecrate by Virtue and Authority of this Act, shall take or perceive any manner of Profits of the Places and Sees whereof they shall be named, nor use, have or execute any Jurisdiction or Episcopal Power or Authority within their said Sees, nor within any Diocese or Place of this Realm, or elsewhere within the King's Dominions, but only such Profits, Jurisdiction, Power and Authority, as shall be licensed and limited to them to take, do and execute by any Archbishop or Bishop of this Realm, within their Diocese to whom they shall be Suffragans, by their Commission under their Seals; and that every Archbishop and Bishop of this Realm, for their own peculiar Diocese, may and shall give such Commission or Commissions to every such Bishop Suffragan, as shall be so consecrate by Authority of this Act, as hath been accustomed for Suffragans heretofore to have, or else such Commission as by them shall be thought requisite, reasonable and convenient: and that no such Suffragan shall use any Jurisdiction Ordinary or Episcopal Power, otherwise, nor longer Time, than shall be limited by such Commission to him to be given as is aforesaid, upon Pain to incur into the Pains, Losses, Forfeitures and Penalties mentioned in the Statute of Provisions, made in the sixteenth Year of King Richard the Second.

VII. "Provided always, That the Bishop that shall nominate the Suffragan to the King's Highness, or the Suffragan himself that shall be nominate, shall provide two Bishops or Suffragans to consecrate him with the Archbishop, and shall bear their reasonable Costs; Provided also, That the Residence of him that shall be Suffragan over the Diocese where he shall have Commission, shall serve him for his Residence, as sufficiently as if he were resident upon any other his Benefice; any Act heretofore made to the contrary notwithstanding.

VIII. "Be it further enacted, That all such Suffragans as shall hereafter exercise the Offices aforesaid, by the Commission of the Bishop, for the better Maintenance of his Dignity, may have two Benefices with Cure; any former Act made to the contrary notwithstanding."

Under this statute some Bishops were actually appointed.

It will be observed that a distinction is taken between Bishops Suffragan elected by the royal congé d'élire and Suffragans by selection of Prelates.

Archdeacons.

For more effectual aid to the Diocesan one Archdeacon at the least should be appointed in each see, to receive a fixed salary, and with authority from the enacting body to discharge the same functions as those now exercised by prescription in England; so far as applicable to the condition of the Irish Protestant episcopate.

And it is respectfully submitted that in translation in the episcopate length of service should be the primary, though not the sole qualification for advancement.

2. Suggestions on Reformation of the Episcopate by Mr. Shirley.

Plan for the consideration of those who think that there should be no diminution in the number of the Irish prelates, but a fresh arrangement as to their status and emoluments on the following scale.

Let there be but four archbishops and bishops of Ireland of Parliamentary rank, as secured by the Act of Union, and who should be therefore summoned to the House of Lords as Peers, and eight suffragans who should not be so summoned, with less duties and expenses, and therefore less income, viz.:—

The Archbishop of Armagh, Primate of all Ireland.

1. (1.) 1. Metropolitan of the Provinces of Ulster and Connaught, with a cathedral at Armagh, and an income of £6,000 per annum.

The following suffragans:—

2. 2. Down and Connor; cathedral at Belfast.

3. 3. Raphoe and Derry; cathedral at Derry.

4. 4. Kilmore, Clogher, Elphin, and Ardagh; cathedral at Kilmore.
Each suffragan with an income of £2,000 per annum.

5. (2.) 1. The Bishop of Tuam, Killala, and Achonry, provincial Bishop of Connaught, cathedral at Tuam, income £4,000 per annum.

6. 2. Suffragan at Killaloe, with its adjuncts of Kilfenora, Kilmacduagh, and Clonfert; cathedral at Killaloe, income £2,000 per annum.

7. (3.) 1. The Archbishop of Dublin and Bishop of Kildare, Metropolitan of Leinster and Munster; cathedral of St. Patrick at Dublin. Income, £5,000 per annum.

The following suffragans :—

8. 2. The Bishop of Meath.
9. 3. The Bishop of Ossory, Leighlin, and Ferns ; cathedral at Kilkenny ; each of the two suffragans, £2,000 per annum.
10. (4.) 1. The Bishop of Cork, Provincial Bishop of Munster, with a cathedral at Cork, and an income of £4,000 per annum.

The following suffragans :—

11. 2. The Bishop of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe ; cathedral at Limerick.
12. 3. The Bishop of Cashel, Emly, Lismore, and Waterford ; cathedral at Waterford ; each suffragan an income of £2,000 per annum.

This would make a total of £35,000 per annum for the whole Irish Episcopacy, their present income being more than £55,000 per annum. This plan would, therefore, save £20,000 per annum to go towards the better endowment of small livings.

N.B.—One dean and one chapter to be maintained in each of the metropolitan and each of the two provincial sees. Cathedral services in the remaining eight bishoprics to be left to private liberality ; the honorary titles of dean and prebends being retained in all.

5. Proposed Addition to the Recommendations of the Report as to the Bishoprics.

We desire to add to the recommendations of the Report, that in our opinion the proposed arrangement might be rendered more perfect, by altering the geographical boundaries of the dioceses of Armagh and Clogher on the north, so as to enlarge the territorial extent of the diocese of Derry, and diminish that of the united dioceses of Armagh, Clogher, and Kilmore.

Exempt Jurisdiction of Newry and Mourne.

Dr. Ball.

The Exempt Jurisdiction of Newry and Mourne owes its origin to a monastery which before the Reformation was established at Newry, and of which the Abbot was what is termed a mitred abbot.

The instrument under which the jurisdiction was founded is not now forthcoming, nor is its date known; it must have been some Papal bull or grant, and it was undoubtedly of very remote antiquity.

The meaning of an exempt jurisdiction is, that a certain district and the clergy within it are wholly outside episcopal control. In the present case the Abbot and not any bishop was the spiritual governor.

Like all the monasteries, the Newry house was dissolved, and the Abbot ceased to exist at the Reformation, and all the possessions of the monastery were transferred to the Crown. These possessions were by the Crown originally conferred upon one of the Bagnall family, from whom the present Lord Kilmorey derives part, and the Marquis of Anglesey derived another part.

The Kilmorey family have always not only claimed, but actually exercised, an exempt jurisdiction over the same territory as the Abbot. They have a Court, appoint a Vicar-General, formerly gave probate of wills, and granted letters of administration to intestates, and continued to do this until the Irish Probate Court Act, A.D. 1857, abolished all other testamentary jurisdiction. The Vicar-General still of his own authority issues marriage licences, and hears matrimonial and ecclesiastical causes; and the appeal lies not to the Archbishop, but to the Queen in Chancery and a Court of Delegates.

It is very difficult to understand how exactly all this authority is capable of being transmitted along with the succession to the lands, through the various settlements and wills which regulate from time to time their devolution, and which of course may carry the legal title to persons not members of the Established Church; but there is no doubt that there has been in some degree a legislative recognition of the rights claimed by the Kilmorey family; for in a private Act of Parliament, 10 Geo. IV., 19 June, 1829, passed to enable the foundation of a new church at Newry, it is recited that "Francis Earl of Kilmorey is Lord of the Exempt Jurisdiction, and also Lord of the Manor of Newry, and Rector impropriate of the said parish." And as to this new church, the right to allot pews, as in parish churches, is declared to be subject to the "jurisdiction of the Earl of Kilmorey, or the Lord or Lords, or Ordinary or Ordinaries, of the said exempt jurisdiction." The Act also provides for lapse, in case of neglect to appoint on vacancy, to the Archbishop of Armagh; and that, if there be an ecclesiastical offence, and the Lords of the Exempt Jurisdiction neglect to punish on requisition by the Archbishop of Armagh, then the latter may proceed.

The Vicar-General, the Rev. Dr. Bagot, Dean of Dromore, resides at Newry, and he is also Vicar of the parish of Newry. He states that the fees for marriage licences produce about £50 a year, and that these are now the only emoluments of the Vicar-General.

The exempt jurisdiction appears to extend over the parishes of Newry and Kilkeel, with the chapelries of Kilcoo, Killegar, and Tamlaght, containing an area in all of about 100,000 acres, and having about 7,000 Church Protestants. Besides these parishes, two outlying townlands, namely, Grange O'Neiland, county Armagh, twenty miles from Newry, and Shanaghans, county Down, are stated to be also subject to this jurisdiction.

The Abbot had no power to administer the rite of confirmation. It is still more certain that Lord Kilmorey has none. Accordingly the Primate is at intervals invited within the exempt jurisdiction to confirm the children of Newry parish, and the Bishop of Down confirms those of the other parishes.

In the year 1829 a visitation of the few clergy under this jurisdiction was held by the then Lord Kilmorey; there has been none since.

Lord Kilmorey has impropriate tithes from the district in the same manner as any other lay owner; but the exercise of the exempt jurisdiction produces him no emolument of any kind. He also has the patronage of benefices; but such patronage he also has in the same manner as any lay owner of an advowson. It in no way arises from the peculiar jurisdiction.

APPENDIX, No. 17.

Extra-parochial Districts, termed "Granges."

Rev. Wm. Reeves, d.d.

At the period of the dissolution of religious houses in Ireland, their endowments in the counties of Antrim and Armagh, as elsewhere, consisted of—

(b.) Lands, in temporals only.
(c.) Entire tithes of parishes.
(d.) Rectorial tithes of parishes.

Of (a), under which the principal subject of the present inquiry comes, further on.

In the case of (b), the lands lay in regularly constituted parishes, paid tithes to the incumbent, and were subject to parochial jurisdiction.

In the case of (c), there was no parochial endowment or succession, only the religious house was bound to maintain a curate (generally a member of its own society) therein. Such was Kilconriola, otherwise Ballymena, in the county of Antrim, the entire tithes of which had been appropriate to the priory of Muckamore, and, after the dissolution, were granted to Sir Roger Langford, subject to a curate's stipend, which was prescriptively fixed at £18 Irish.

In the case of (d), the parishes possessed endowed vicarages, with succession, and the rectorial portion was generally two-thirds, the right of presentation being vested in the religious house.

(a.) The endowments under this class varied in extent from a fraction of a townland to tracts containing groups of several such denominations. These lands were held in the immediate possession of the abbot or prior, and were cultivated by the tenants or servants of the monastery. The chief tract in each case consisted of a group of townlands lying around the religious houses, forming, as it were, a great glebe to the establishment, paying no tithes, included in no parish, and subject to no spiritual superintendence but that of the superior or his delegates.

In this class is to be reckoned Muckamore, in the county of Antrim. It was a priory of regular canons of St. Augustine, founded at a very early period, and long before the institution of parishes in Ireland; so that it and its prædial endowments could, without any violence to existing interests, each and all, be and continue non-parochial. The last prior was seized of the site of his monastery with eight adjacent townlands (now numerically increased to ten, by individualizing a couple of sub-denominations), forming the priory lands of Muckamore, and now known as the Grange of Muckamore. At the dissolution, this parochial vacuum fell to the Crown, and, in process of time, was granted by patent just as it stood, no conditions being made for the spirituals, partly because that which formerly existed was abolished, and partly because it would have been inconvenient to create now, for the first time, a tithing process where none previously existed. Accordingly, it was granted to a layman, and the patent once passed, no subsequent regulation could disturb the now vested right. Hence it is that Muckamore was, until recent arrangements, extra-parochial, and, lying beside the parish of Antrim, looked to it for spirituals, in the supply of which the vicar acted of grace and not of debt.

Of the name or denomination Grange, presently.

2. Nilteen.—This was an appropriation of Muckamore, coming under class (c). The Grand Inquisition of Lower Claneboy (12 July, 1605) found that the Prior of Muckamore was seized of the church or chapel of Neeltin, with all the tithes belonging to the same, and all spiritual appurtenances whatsoever; in which chapel the prior and his predecessors were bound to maintain a curate. Hence, when Muckamore was extinguished, the tithes were secularized, and probably merged in the lay possession of the land.

A late Rector of Donegore and Kilbride, the Rev. G. H. MacDowell Johnston, sought to establish a right to the tithes of Nilteen, but was defeated in a suit where the inhabitants, represented by the late Mr. Adair of Loughanmore, were the defendants.

Doagh.—Also an appropriation of Muckamore. The Inquisition above mentioned finds that the Prior of Muckamore was seized of and in the church, grange, or chapel of Duogh, with all the tithes belonging to the same, and all other spiritual appurtenances whatsoever, in which chapel the Prior and his predecessors were bound to find and maintain a curate. When Muckamore was suppressed, this district became completely secularized. No provision was made for the maintenance of a curate, or, if made, was never carried into effect; the tithes lapsed, the four townlands which constitute it were not annexed to any adjacent parish, and it too became and continued a parochial hiatus.

It is to be observed that this denomination was not of such early date as some other of the appurtenances of Muckamore, and that previous to its annexation it was parochial. In 1251, Isaac, Bishop of Connor, confirmed this house in the possession of St. Mary's of Douach, and in 1300 the Ecclesia de Douach was taxed as a several benefice. A portion of the old church remains, and its cemetery is still used.

4. Killagan.—This is, strictly speaking, a parish proper. It is an entire rectory annexed to, and forming the principal tributary to, the income of the Prebend of Connor. By King James's Charter to the Chapter of Connor, in 1609, this rectory, though many miles distant, and separated by the intervention of Ballyclug, Kilconriola, and Dundermot, became part of the corps of the Prebend of Connor, but without any local provision for the spiritualities. From time immemorial there had been no church in it, and in 1845 the site of the ancient burying ground was scarcely discernible and had all but merged in the surrounding tillage. The Down and Connor Church Accommodation Society, in 1839, made a grant for the building of a church in this parish, which was opened for Divine Service at the close of that year, and a stipendiary curate has since then been maintained therein.

5. Drumtullagh.—There can be no doubt that the whole tithes of this district were appropriate to some religious house, but I have never been able to discover what house it was.

6. Ballyscullion.—This name does not properly belong to this Grange, which is only "juxta Ballyscullion." Ballyscullion (anciently Inistede, whose primitive church stands on a small island in Lough Beg), is the name of a parish in the diocese of Derry, a small portion of which creeps across the county boundary, and enters Antrim, where it adjoins the Grange, which is in the diocese of Connor, but has no other connexion with it except juxtaposition.

It was found in the Inquisition of 1605 that the Abbot of the House of Regular Canons of St. Augustin of Armagh was seized of a parcel of land called the GRANGE, consisting of seven townlands, with their appurtenances and the tithes of grain, hay, and other titheable produce of the said territory.

At the dissolution, the tithes merged in the lands, and as no provision was made for the maintenance of a curate, the district became non-parochial, having been granted to Sir Hugh Clotworthy.

Besides the above, which are situate in the county of Antrim, and diocese of Connor, the Ordnance Survey sets out the following districts and townlands in the same county, which are tithe-free and partly extra-parochial:—

1. The Grange of Inispollan.
2. The Grange of Layd.
3. The Grange of Dundermot.
4. Shilvodan Grange.
5. The Grange of Ballyrobert.
6. The Grange of Molusk.
7. The Grange of Umgall.

} Reckoned to be in the parish of Templepatrick.

The parish of Killyglen, which lies near Larne, and is one entire rectory, annexed by the Charter to the Prebend of Connor, is erroneously styled "a Grange" on the Ordnance Survey.

Besides these, the district of Glenwhirry is now laid down in the Ordnance Survey, and is civilly reckoned, a several parish, but it is of modern creation as such. It was, and is, properly a portion of the parish of Rathcavan, but as it lay in a wild, mountainous, and, till lately, almost unapproachable region, it never, at least during the last two centuries, yielded any tithe or payment to the rector, and thus by degrees came to be regarded as disconnected with its proper parish, until it was severed from it in a formal, though not legal manner.

Included in the vicarage of Connor are the sixteen townlands of the Abbey of Kells, which are tithe-free (as I believe), but for the spiritual duties of which there is a prescriptive stipend of £3 a year, payable by the possessor to the Prebendary of Connor.

In the county of Armagh there is a large number of townlands, some in groups, others scattered singly in various parishes, which formerly belonged to the Abbey of St. Peter's and St. Paul's of Armagh, and now form the bulk of Lord Charlemont's estates in said county. These were found by Inquisition in the early part of James the First's reign to constitute various granges, which were all tithe-free, and were held, previous to the dissolution, in the immediate occupation of the Abbot. Though geographically embraced by various parishes, they were perfectly independent of the respective parishes, and were neither liable to the payment of tithe or any ecclesiastical dues, nor, on the other hand, had any claim on the incumbent's ministrations in spirituals. They had each their own cemetery, and sometimes chapel, where a member of the monastic society discharged the religious duties of the holding.*

Of this there is an instance in my own parish of Tynan, wherein the large townland of Cortynan is tithe-free, having formerly been a grange belonging to the above-named monastery, and afterwards part of Sir Toby Caulfeild's grant, from whose successor it passed to other hands, and finally became the property of the Earl of Caledon.

It remains to notice the term grange.†

This word, which, through a Gallican channel, comes from granum, and is allied to granary, was in ecclesiastical parlance commonly taken for the country farm and outhouses where the religious deposited their corn. Hence it came to signify any farm or tract of land in the occupation of a monastery, and, in a still more extended sense, any tract of land, which, by reason of its connexion with a religious house, was exempt from ordinary parochial obligations. This last acceptation prevailed more in some regions than others, and for some cause now unknown, became very general in the county of Antrim, from James the First's time down to the present, so that what in many cases elsewhere would be regarded as an impropriate rectory, or extra-parochial district, here obtained the familiar name of grange.

I may add that the term grange prevails in all parts of Ireland, there being about 220 townlands bearing the name either simply or in composition; while the Irish and borrowed form is much more rare, there being scarcely twenty granshas in the kingdom.

APPENDIX No. 18.

The CHANTRY of ST. MARY in the PARISH of ST. NICHOLAS within the WALLS, DUBLIN.

Dr. BALL.

This is believed to be the only chantry existing in the kingdom, for in England, where there were at the time of the Reformation a very large number of chantries, they were all abolished, and their revenues confiscated to the Crown by the 37 Henry VIII., ch. 4, and 1 Edw. VI., ch. 14.

There are no acts in Ireland corresponding to these, but as has been remarked by the late Dr. Radcliff (in his judgment in the suit of Archbishop of Dublin v. the Rev. T. D. Gregg, the chaplain of this chantry), it is not improbable that the Irish chantries were in general seized under the English Acts, as the statute 3 & 4 Philip & Mary, ch. 8, s. 3, speaks of chantries having been transferred to the Crown. The present chantry, however, escaped.

A chantry, according to the ecclesiastical books, was a "little chapel or particular altar in a cathedral or parochial church, endowed for the maintenance of a priest, to sing masses to redeem the souls of the founders and faithful out of purgatory: and from their prayers in this place it was called a chantry, and the priest who officiated there a chantor or soul's priest."

The chantry of St. Mary, in the church of St. Nicholas within the Walls, Dublin, was founded 9 Edward IV. by Letters Patent; by which after reciting that John, Earl of Worcester, and Elizabeth his wife, Sir Edward Dudley, Knight, Matilda, his wife, Sir Thomas Bath, Knight, John Clever, Esq., Phillip Birmingham, Esq., and Stephen Bottiler, do propose to found a certain perpetual chantry of one chaplain or two in honour

* The benefice of Grange, near Armagh, contains the three townlands of Grangeblundel, Grangemore, and Salter's Grange, which formerly belonged to St. Peter's and St. Paul's, and are now tithe-free.

† The farm being generally detached, and its offices isolated, the word grange grew in Lincolnshire and some of the northern counties of England to signify a lone house.

The Antrim use of the term is partly explained by the following observation of Ayliffe:—"If the church was of their own foundation, they might choose, the incumbent being once dead, whether they would put any other therein; unless, perhaps, the said church had people belonging to it; for then they must still maintain a curate; and of this sort were their granges and priories."

of God and the Blessed Virgin Mary, in the church of St. Nicholas near the high cross of the city of Dublin, for the souls of the said founders and the souls of all the faithful deceased, the King granted and gave licence into the said Earl and the other persons aforesaid to found, make, constitute, and erect such chantry as aforesaid for ever, and that the said Earl and the other persons aforesaid and every one of them should and might give and grant unto the said chaplains founded in form aforesaid, lands, tenements, rents, and services to the value of £13 6*s.* 8*d.* a year, above duties and repairs, in manner as therein stated, and that the said chaplain or chaplains, in said chantry so founded, and their successors, should and might obtain and acquire lands, tenements, rents, and services, with the appurtenances to the value of £13 6*s.* 8*d.* a year, to hold to them and their successors for ever, and did also by and with the assent and of the authority aforesaid grant unto the proctors of said church and their successors for ever, that by and with the assent of the honest parishioners of said parish whenever and as often as it should happen that the said chaplain or chaplains so founded as aforesaid, or their successors should die or misbehave themselves they should and might discharge, depose, and remove them from the said service, and elect or constitute one or more fit chaplain or chaplains in the place of him or them so removed or deposed from time to time for ever.

By virtue of these letters patent the chantry was founded and endowed with lands, and a chantry priest has been ever since appointed from time to time.

It will be observed that the right of appointment is vested in the proctors, that is, the churchwardens, and honest parishioners (probi homines parochiani). The right of voting, however, as has been decided by the Court of Queen's Bench, can be exercised only by members of the Established Church.

The Rev. Tresham Gregg is the present chaplain. He discharges no duties, and has no duties to perform; for the only duties which a chantry priest ever had, were to say masses and prayers for the souls of the founders and other faithful; and such prayers in a church or chapel are now illegal. Except with the licence of the bishop and permission of the incumbent, he could neither perform nor assist in, service in the church of St. Nicholas; and if he did so, it would be his voluntary act, and neither a right nor a duty.

This office escaped the observation of the former Commissioners in the inquiry of 1832, which may explain why it has been allowed to continue.

APPENDIX No. 19.

Suggestions of Dr. Gayer, q.c., one of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland.

24, Upper Merrion-street, Dublin,

Dear Sir,

In reference to that clause in the Established Church Commission which directs the Commissioners to inquire and report "whether alterations or improvements should be made in the management, administration and distribution of the revenues and property of the Church in Ireland, or in the state and condition of the several offices, dignities, corporations aggregate, and benefices of the Church," I take the liberty of making the following suggestions for the consideration of the Commissioners.

That some very considerable alterations in the state and condition of the offices and benefices of the Church, and in the distribution of its revenues, might be made with advantage, seems to be on all hands admitted. That there are anomalies of different kinds in the Church Establishment as at present existing in Ireland, is so obvious and generally conceded by the warmest friends of the Church, that I only allude to them to introduce my views as to the proper mode of remedying them.

1st. There are a number of overworked and underpaid clergy whose state and condition not only greatly diminishes their usefulness and efficiency, but causes considerable dissatisfaction both among the working clergy and no inconsiderable number of the laity who are well affected to the Established Church.

2nd. There are a number (though a much smaller class) of beneficed clergymen whose revenues are disproportionately large in reference to their ecclesiastical duties, and, in my judgment, unnecessarily large for the general well-being of the Church.

3rd. There are a number of nominal dignitaries, many of them without any suitable emoluments or duties, who, in my opinion, are not only unnecessary to the welfare and efficiency of the Establishment, but whose existence actually does mischief to it by encouraging in the public mind an impression that the ecclesiastical staff in Ireland is quite disproportionate to the numbers and requirements of the Church.

The first class of these anomalous cases is, as might be expected, principally, if not exclusively, to be found among the perpetual curacies, most of which are of modern creation, and were erected for the laudable purpose of trying to meet the spiritual wants of increasing Church populations, by bringing home the services and ministrations of the Church to Protestant parishioners, who were either located at too great a distance from the mother church of the parish conveniently to attend it, or too numerous to be accommodated in the existing church, or perhaps in any single building. Whether it might not have been wiser originally to encourage the building of mere Chapels of Ease in such places, to be served by stipendiary curates, it is now too late to consider. A large number of district parishes with separate churches and congregations (very few of which have either tithe-rentcharge or even glebe houses) has been called into existence with the object of remedying the much greater anomaly already referred to—viz., a populous district of Protestants without any convenient provision for their spiritual wants. It is right perhaps to observe, however, that a considerable number of these perpetual curacies and district parishes have been formed out of parts taken from several contiguous parishes, sometimes even in different dioceses, to which cases a mere Chapel of Ease and stipendiary curate in connexion with one of the mother churches would obviously have been inapplicable.

These perpetual curacies are principally supported by stipends payable by the incumbent of the mother church, or by the several incumbents if more than one, in something near the proportion in which each of them is relieved by the new arrangement. But as such stipends were of necessity present and immediate deductions from the income of the existing incumbents whose "vested rights" were to that extent interfered with, it was to be expected that the amount of such stipends, whether voluntarily granted by the incumbents or fixed by the bishop of the diocese under the compulsory provisions of 14 & 15 Vic., c. 72, s. 20, should be no more than was actually necessary to secure the services of an officiating minister, and in practice such stipends seldom exceeded that of an ordinary stipendiary curate. In not a few of these perpetual curacies the Church population, and the consequent amount of duty, have largely increased, especially in the northern counties and neighbourhood of Dublin and of other large towns; and in all places the necessaries of life have become more expensive; while the means of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners applicable to the augmentation of poor livings, including these ill-paid perpetual curacies, have been wholly inadequate to supplement their inadequate stipends.

It appears to me, that the natural remedies for a state of things (which, without much consideration as to the cause of the apparent anomaly, has given rise to much scandal and discontent within the Church itself), are to be found—1st, by imposing upon the incumbents of the mother churches, on their next vacancy, in proper cases (having due regard to income and duty in connexion with the mother churches themselves), an increased stipend to that now payable to the perpetual curates in connexion with them; subject of course to the same power of substituting for such stipend, an equivalent in tithe-rentcharge or glebe land as already provided by 14 & 15 Vic., c. 72, sec. 33; and 2ndly, by increasing the funds vested in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners applicable to augmentation purposes, in the manner hereinafter suggested, with a view to enable them to supplement such stipends, where the revenue of the mother church is inadequate for that purpose.

Whether the first power should be vested solely in the bishop of the diocese, with or without the concurrence of the patron of the benefice, or whether it should be intrusted to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, after consulting with or after obtaining the concurrence of the bishop or patron, or both, may be worthy of consideration; but I confine myself at present to the mere general suggestion, that there is a considerable number of incumbents who do not at present contribute a suitable or sufficient salary to the perpetual curates whom they themselves appoint, and who might in my judgment be made to do so without substantial injury or injustice to the incumbents of the mother church. The very fact that they have the patronage of such subordinate or auxiliary benefices would diminish the hardship (if there were any) of imposing a larger stipend upon the income of the mother church upon the next vacancy, and as no vested interest would be interfered with, the idea of hardship would in my opinion disappear altogether.

The limit of such increase might be fixed, so that the whole stipend payable by the incumbents should not in ordinary cases exceed £200 a year, except in the rare cases where the Church population of the district parish exceeds the number which could be efficiently attended to by one clergyman without the assistance of an auxiliary curate, having regard to the area or extent of the district, and where the income of the mother church after all deductions (including the proposed stipend of £200 a year) would still exceed £700 a year, in which cases the perpetual curates might in my opinion be raised in populous districts to even £300 a year.

This limit of £700 I have adopted, because in my opinion it would have a very prejudicial effect upon the future prospects of the Church if there were not left at least some benefices which might be considered as prizes for the encouragement of the parochial clergy, which would also tend to keep up the social status of that important class, and enable at least a few men of learning and ability to enjoy that amount of ease and leisure which are indispensable to the successful prosecution of any literary or theological labour.

This remedy, however, would neither meet every case of hardship of the underpaid clergy nor cure the second class of anomalies to which I have referred—viz., that of overpaid benefices with small congregations and very limited duties, and my second remedy would be to impose charges upon large benefices with limited duties and without the burthen of annexed perpetual curates in favour of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners upon the same principle that the sees of Armagh and Derry were reduced by the original Church Temporalities Act, 3 & 4 Wm. IV., c. 37, s. 54.,* or if it should be considered more expedient by increasing the scale of tax fixed by Schedule A of that statute where the net income exceeded £500 a year, except in cases where the Church population exceeded a certain limit, such charges or higher rate of ecclesiastical tax I would make (in the first instance at least) exclusively applicable to the purpose of augmenting poor benefices, including of course perpetual curacies.

Whether this system of increased tax might not be advantageously carried considerably lower than £500 a year where the Church population is very inconsiderable, might be deserving of more careful consideration if the principle of making the scale of tax depend in any degree on the Church population be once adopted, but it would be premature to go into more minute details until that principle is previously approved of.

These additional charges might be imposed by order of the Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council, upon the recommendation of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, after hearing the bishop and patron (if in lay patronage); to take effect, of course, only upon the next vacancy, and all expenses of bringing such cases before the Privy Council might be fairly directed to be paid by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and in cases of lay patronage such additional funds might be transferred to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, subject, in the first instance, to making reasonable compensation thereout to the patrons for the diminution in the value of the benefice, where the patronage was not vested in the bishop or the crown. There might properly be made an exception in favour of a few large benefices in the patronage of Trinity College, Dublin, which are of great advantage to quicken the circulation among the Fellows of that important institution.

The powers of uniting and dividing parishes already possessed by the Privy Council under the 7 & 8 Geo. IV., c. 43, especially since the amendment made by 11 & 12 Vic., c. 41, are already sufficiently large to meet any anomalies which may still exist, and which are capable of being remedied by such alterations, and the principal change necessary in my judgment would be to authorize the Ecclesiastical Commissioners to initiate such applications and to bear the necessary expenses of them, giving them such powers as may appear necessary to enable them to ascertain the exact state of each locality as to income and population.

The additional powers I have suggested, if given to the Privy Council and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, would, in my opinion, in the course of a few years, remedy, in the most calm and considerate manner, nearly all the cases of gross inequality at present existing, and remove the great majority at least of the anomalies most complained of at present by both the inferior clergy and the laity of the Established Church.

There would still exist, nevertheless, a minor class of defects, for which the only remedy would lie, in my judgment, in the extension of the existing powers of suspending benefices where divine worship has not been celebrated for a number of years, or where the number of Church members is too small to constitute a congregation.

The power of suspension at present is confined by the Statute 3 & 4 Wm. IV., c. 37, s. 116 (as far as the Ecclesiastical Commissioners are concerned), to benefices in the patronage of the Crown or bishop, or other ecclesiastical corporations, and limited further to cases where divine worship had not been celebrated within the benefice for three years next preceding 1*st February*, 1833, and so far as the Privy Council are concerned, the power is confined by 4 & 5 Wm. IV., c. 90, s. 1 (as interpreted by 6 & 7 Wm. IV., c. 99, s. 26), to dignities or rectories in the like patronage, where the occupants had not for three years prior to 1*st January*, 1836, continuously served the cure of souls, either personally or by a licensed curate. In no case can a benefice in lay patronage, as the law now stands, be suspended, nor in any case where divine worship was celebrated for the prescribed time prior to 1833 and 1836 respectively, though it never has been celebrated since within the parish. The number of cases subject to suspension has been also considerably diminished by the legal construction of the word benefice in the above statutes having included all the existing episcopal unions, so that if divine service had been celebrated in any parish in such an union previously to 1833, none of the parishes so united even temporarily, if there was a church in any part of the temporary union, could at any subsequent period be suspended, nor could any such parish be now suspended, even though it could be proved that no divine service has been celebrated in it during the last twenty-five or thirty years, and though the union has ceased during the same period.

A considerable number of parishes were thus excluded or saved from suspension, which, subsequently to 1833 and 1836 respectively, ceased to be episcopally or otherwise united to parishes in which divine service was celebrated, and which have no such service of their own, though it is obvious that after the severance they came quite as much within the principle upon which suspension was originally authorized as those which had been legally liable to suspension and actually suspended.

In my opinion it would be expedient not only to extend the power of suspension to all dignities and benefices where cure of souls (including the celebration of divine service) had not been continuously served for at least a year prior to (say) 1st January, 1868, but also to extend it to benefices in lay patronage, and also to all benefices where the number of Church members were by the last census less than thirty souls, or such other number as the Royal Commissioners may deem advisable, unless it should be made appear, to the satisfaction of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners or the Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council respectively, that there are at least five families distinct from that of the incumbent himself, at the date of the recommendation of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners to the Privy Council, or at the date of the order of suspension if made by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, resident within an accessible distance of the existing church, and not within an easy distance of any other church or chapel in which divine service is regularly celebrated. In cases suspended under this new power on the ground of paucity of Church members, the Commissioners should be empowered, at their discretion, with the consent of the bishop, to take down the church, unless required for Sunday evening or week-day services directed by the bishop, and be bound to pay the like moderate stipend to the incumbent or officiating minister of some adjoining parish or to any curates nominated and licensed by the bishop for the performance of the occasional ecclesiastical duties within such suspended benefice, during the period it may remain unfilled, as provided by the said 116th sec. of 3 & 4 Wm. IV., c. 37, with respect to the cases therein specified, and they should also be empowered to compensate lay patrons.

The additional property thus acquired by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners might be made exclusively applicable, at least in the first instance, to the augmentation of poor livings.*

By the above simple changes in the law, which could all be made without difficulty by a slight modification of a few clauses in the existing Church Temporalities Acts, it appears to me that all the anomalies complained of, of overpaid, underpaid, and useless clergymen, would be effectually got rid of without injustice or injury to any person, lay or clerical, and without shocking the prejudices of any one not already disposed to destroy the Church altogether; and it appears to me it would have the advantage of effecting the desired object, without introducing any altogether novel machinery, which it would be difficult to put into practical operation and manage successfully.

If the result of this arrangement of benefices should be to leave any surplus in the hands of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners after providing suitable augmentations for benefices with large Protestant populations, I think power should be given to the Commissioners, with the approval of the bishop of the diocese, out of such surplus either to pension off any of the clergy who through age or infirmity are unable in person to perform their spiritual duties to the satisfaction of the bishop, (and who may be willing to resign their benefices, the income being too small to enable them to maintain a curate,) or to pay, in whole or in part, a curate's stipend during such incumbency. There is no spectacle more sad than that of a parish whose minister has become, by old age, or, perhaps, loss of sight or paralysis, unable to supply the spiritual necessities of his flock in person, and where the only alternative is either to starve that flock, or to impose a curate upon an already insufficient income, and thereby reduce the infirm or superannuated incumbent to absolute penury.

* If this change were made in the law, it would, of course, be necessary to extend the 9th sec. of 4 & 5 Wm. IV., c. 90, to include the additional cases.

Whether a somewhat similar arrangement might not be made to enable Bishops to retire as was done in England in the case of the Bishops of London and Durham in 1856, might perhaps be worthy of consideration (see 19 & 20 Vic., c. 115).

With respect to those nominal dignities, which, whether deaneries, precentorships, treasurerships, chancellorships, or prebends despoiled of their property under 4 & 5 Wm. IV., c. 90, are little more than unmeaning feathers, attracting hostility, but adding no real strength to the Establishment, I would suggest the propriety (subject, of course, to existing rights) of abolishing them altogether, or more correctly speaking, of consolidating them (at least so far as deaneries are concerned), as the bishoprics themselves were consolidated, and also the deaneries of Christ Church and St. Patrick's, under the 3 & 4 Wm. IV., c. 37, ss. 46, 47, and 50, so that each bishop of a united diocese should have one dean only for such united diocese.

Whether it would be desirable to limit in like manner the number of archdeacons may be questionable. In small dioceses one archdeacon might be enough, but in populous and extensive dioceses one archdeacon would, in my opinion, be insufficient. It might be safely left to the Privy Council, at the instance of the bishop, to decide whether in any particular see more than one archdeacon was needful.

I would suggest that every such dean of a united diocese should have a clear income of £1,000 a year, free from ecclesiastical tax, such income to be paid them quarterly by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, in whom, upon the next vacancy, all the present revenues of such dignities should become vested, with power, however, to the Commissioners to relieve themselves from such payments, in whole or in part, by allocating tithes or perpetuity rents to the same value to such deans and their successors.

Every archdeacon should also have parochial work, and be incumbent of some parish; but if the clear income of such parish falls short of £800 a year, the deficiency should be made good by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.*

The Dean of St. Patrick's, Dublin, should, in consideration of his residence in the metropolis, have a larger income—say £1,500 a year.

With respect to cathedrals in sees where bishops have ceased to reside, I think they should be converted into mere parish churches, their economy funds, if any, transferred to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and the fabrics taken under their charge. I think it quite unnecessary to keep up cathedral service in such places (with very few exceptions). I should consequently suspend all precentorships, treasurerships, chancellorships, prebends, and canonries in such cathedrals, and substitute a rector to be paid by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners out of the property of such dignities or prebends, converting the dignitaries or prebendaries, who have cure of souls in any parish appropriated thereto, into a rector or vicar, as the case may be, of such benefices; existing dignitaries and prebendaries, of course, retaining their titles during their respective incumbencies, but relieved of their preaching turns or other chapter duties from the date of the appointment of a rector of such suppressed cathedral.

The 6 & 7 Wm. IV., c. 99, s. 25, appears to me to deal sufficiently with the cases of the minor corporations, such as vicars-choral, or minor canons, &c., who could no longer have any duties to discharge in such suppressed cathedrals.

As to bishoprics, in my opinion there are not at present too many, if the Bishops are to be expected to regulate and actively oversee their numerous clergy throughout such extensive areas, and administer the general affairs of their dioceses effectively.

I would suggest, however, that upon the next vacancy the whole property of the remaining Archbishops and Bishops, except their see houses and demesnes, if any, should be vested in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and that in lieu thereof the Ecclesiastical Commissioners should be bound to pay their successors in such archbishoprics the sum of £6,000 a year by quarterly payments, free from all ecclesiastical tax, and to each successor in any bishopric the sum of £3,000 per annum, also free from tax, with power to the Commissioners to relieve themselves from such payments, in whole or in part, with the consent of the bishop, by allocating to them rents to the same value out of Church lands held in perpetuity in the same diocese. The income of the present Bishop of Cork should be raised to £3,000 a year.

I would suggest the repeal of the 51st and 52nd sections of 3 & 4 Wm. IV., c. 37., respecting the rotation of bishops in Parliament, and substitute therefor a provision that the two archbishops and two other bishops to be elected on the occasion of each general election by the majority of the rest of the bishops, should alone have seats in the House of Lords, to last during the continuance of each Parliament. Such bishops should also have an additional income to defray the expenses of attendance on Parliament.

* As there is no Dean of Meath, I think there should, of course, be an exception in favour of the Archdeacon of Meath, who should be allowed to retain his present emoluments.

I would recommend that all visitation fees should be abolished, and in lieu thereof that each vicar-general and registrar should be paid by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners such annual sums as they may be shown to have respectively received, or have been or may be entitled to receive, from the clergy for such visitation fees, on an average of three years, between the 16th September, 1865, and 16th September, 1868, under the rules and orders made under 17 & 18 Vic., c. 54.

I do not know whether the office of parish clerks comes within the scope of the Royal Commissioners' inquiries, but if it does, I would venture to suggest that they are in some instances, in my opinion, of little service either to the incumbent or the congregation, and that upon the next vacancy in each of such offices it might be rendered discretionary with the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, on the recommendation or with the consent of the incumbent and the majority of the pew-holders in any parish church, to consolidate the offices of clerk and sexton, or discontinue the payment of such clerks, and apply the saving thus effected either to the augmentation of poor benefices or to increase in proper cases the stipends of the sextons, who, as a class, appear to me to be much more useful and worse paid than ordinary parish clerks, many of whom are wholly unqualified even to lead the psalmody.

Should any of the foregoing suggestions (which are obviously mere outlines) be deemed worthy of serious consideration by the Royal Commissioners, I shall be happy to go further into detail, and if necessary, would even go to London to explain my views more clearly.

I remain yours, very truly,

ARTHUR EDWARD GAYER.

APPENDIX No. 20.

THE PRINCIPAL ROYAL COMMISSIONS and COMMITTEES of the HOUSES of PARLIAMENT in connexion with the IRISH BRANCH of the UNITED CHURCH of ENGLAND and IRELAND, and LEGISLATIVE RESULTS.

SUGGESTED INTRODUCTION to DRAFT REPORT.

COLONEL ADAIR.

In order to place distinctly before Your Majesty the issues to be determined, we have thought it expedient briefly to recapitulate so much of the course of procedure and legislation as is required to form a consecutive history of such modifications as the organization of the Irish Church has undergone, the principal commissions issued, and committees of the legislature appointed, together with a sketch of the actual condition of the law to the present time.

The Irish nation appears to have ill endured the payment of tithes at all periods of their ecclesiastical history. Tithes were first paid by decision of law after the Council of Cashel, 1172.

The tithes of the suppressed religious foundations passed partly into the possession of the secular clergy, partly into that of lay impropriators, and partly formed the corpus of collegiate or educational foundations.

The revenues of the Established Church derived from see lands and glebes rest generally on a very different devolution from that of tithes, and to a very great extent originated in Royal or Parliamentary grants.

But the chief scandal to the Established Church and grievance to a portion of the Irish people, were found in the incidence, no less than in the application of tithes.

For a primary and pervading grievance arose from the pressure of tithe rural in country parishes, and of tithe urban in certain cities and boroughs, known as ministers' money, and from the impost of cess in vestry, both for ecclesiastical and parochial purposes, which being levied on the occupying tenant specially, was generally drawn from Roman Catholic occupiers, in country and in town.

From the year 1731 tithe appears prominently as a subject of complaint both from laity and clergy.

The process of taking tithe in kind, or of setting it forth, were adopted as alternative and vexatious means of annoyance, or of resistance, by either tithe-owner or tithe-payer, in respect of so much of this property as was raised by severance from the soil.

But another description of tithe caused a resistance which originated with the wealthier members of the middle class, was adopted by the gentry, and perpetuated by probably the most remarkable exercise of declaratory power which any legislature has ever felt justified in adopting.

The clergy claimed a tithe of agistments, that is, of the produce of grass land consumed by barren cattle. The wealthy graziers resisted this demand, and finally the entire question was submitted to debate in the House of Commons, whereon the resolutions following were passed, March 18, 1735:—

Resolutions of the Irish House of Commons on the Tithe of Agistments, 18th March, 1735.

"Resolved,—That the allotments, glebes, and known tithes, with other ecclesiastical emoluments ascertained before this new demand of tithe of agistment for dry and barren cattle are an honorable and plentiful provision for the clergy of this kingdom.

"Resolved,—That the demand of tithe agistment for dry and barren cattle is new, grievous, and burthensome to the landlords and tenants of this kingdom, who could have no notice thereof previous to their purchases and leases, nor the least apprehension that such unforeseen demands could have been claimed.

"A motion having been made, and the question put, that the commencing suits upon these new demands must impair the Protestant interests by driving many useful hands out of this kingdom, must disable those that remain to support His Majesty's establishment, and occasion Popery and Infidelity to gain ground by the contest that must necessarily arise between the laity and clergy."

"The House divided,

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Ayes | - - | 110 |
| Noes | - - | 50 |

"It was carried in the affirmative.

"Resolved,—That all legal ways and means ought to be made use of to oppose all attempts that shall hereafter be made to carry demands of tithe agistment into execution until a proper remedy can be provided by the Legislature."

This declaration of legislative opinion proved effectual in discouraging suits for recovery of agistment tithe, and all claim to this tithe was finally barred by an Act of the expiring Parliament of 1800, 40 Geo. III., c. 23, intituled "An Act to quiet and bar all claims of tithe agistment for dry and barren cattle."

Thus a permanent discouragement of tillage was perpetuated, and the area narrowed from which tithe was derivable; and this effect was more particularly obvious in the eminently Roman Catholic southern and midland districts.

The tillage surface of Ireland thus became chiefly pledged for the production of titheable produce, and the support of the parochial clergy of the Established Church.

During the latter part of the eighteenth century, and to the close of the great French war, comparatively little agitation arose in respect of tithe payments, as is shown by infrequent legislation. But with the fall of prices consequent on the cessation of that great struggle, agitation recommenced. Ireland was disquieted, and the tithe question assumed a very prominent position in the list of evil influences at work throughout the land.

A novel element of inquiry and disturbance was imported into the strife.

Hitherto resistance had been made to tithe, as a fiscal exaction, galling from the severity of pressure, and incidentally vexatious by reason of the general purposes to which in matters of church ministration it was applied. For there does not seem to have been as settled a purpose of resistance to tithe payable to lay impropriators, as when devoted to the sustentation of clergy of the Established Church, or in furtherance of the objects of educational or clerical appropriators. Yet the ecclesiastical organization of the Church, or its results do not appear up to this period to have been profoundly studied.

Now, however, the political disqualifications of the Roman Catholic body were ostentatiously connected with, and attributed, to the existence of a State Church, and this question began to be seriously debated, whether in its internal organization that Church had vindicated its origin, and promoted by its action the special objects for which it had been called into existence by the State, and as an ally of the State had acquired wealth, political honours, and social influence and supremacy.

But it should be repeated that a marked distinction was shown to prevail in the minds of the Roman Catholic population between tithes granted by the Crown to lay impropriators, and therefore applicable to private and unsectarian uses, and that portion of tithe, although deriving from the same source, which constituted the revenues of the Church.

It must, therefore, be declared untrue that agitation to tithes, as such, was generally associated with a combination against private property, however closely the ideas might appear to be consistent, and at one time co-existent (temp. Geo. II., 1755).

Reformatory legislation then commenced with the Tithe Composition Acts in 1824, 4, 5, 7 & 8 Geo. IV.

Partial relief appears to have been obtained by the operations of these statutes.

Still in so far as these statutes were deformed by the inherent vice of preceding systems, by maintaining a direct relation between the occupying tenant, and the recipients of tithe, their healing operation was diminished, although the machinery of applotment was more scientifically constructed, and with an evident desire to diminish the harsh friction which had well nigh checked the financial adjustment and organization of Church revenues, so as to render harmonious action unattainable.

But it was represented that this scheme required for completeness a permanent settlement of the amount of tithe; it was, moreover, asserted that the inexperience, and restricted education of the tithe-paying classes had been perverted to their disprofit in obtaining their assents to improvident arrangements, and that those most favourable to the tithe-payer, terminated at any rate in twenty-one years. But long before that period of experiment had elapsed, complete and exhaustive legislation was required, nay, had become indispensable to the existence of the Established Church itself.

Successive Commissions of Inquiry, and Committees of both Houses were appointed, and the evidence agrees mainly that the direct pressure of tithes, ecclesiastical dues, and cess levied in vestry through ecclesiastical machinery on the occupier constituted, economically, a serious grievance and discouragement to industry, aggravated by the process of collection, and rendered still more distasteful by the difference of faith between the tithe-receiver and the cultivator or occupier who paid tithe.

All that could be learned from the experience of thoughtful Irishmen familiar with the existence of abuses, daily growing more and more unendurable; evidence drawn from every quarter of the kingdom, from every rank of life, from the professors of every mode of Christian faith, were combined under the collective wisdom of men specially selected for the labour, on the warrant of their public services, into a vast mass of material for the impending work of reconstruction.

The chief points for reform are accurately defined in the preamble to 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 37:—

"Whereas it is expedient to make provision for the abolition of first fruits in Ireland, and the substitution of an annual tax in lieu thereof.

"And it is also expedient that compulsory assessment by vestries should be abolished in certain cases.

"And whereas the number of Bishops in Ireland may be conveniently diminished, and the resources of certain of the bishoprics, as well as the said annual tax, applied to the building, rebuilding, and repairing of churches and other such like ecclesiastical purposes, and to the augmentation of small livings, and to such other purposes as may conduce to the advancement of religion, and the efficiency, permanence, and stability of the United Church of England and Ireland.

"And whereas the tenure by which Church lands are held in Ireland is inconvenient, and it is expedient to alter the same in such manner as may tend to the ease and security of the church and the advantage of the persons holding thereunder."

Six objects of reform in order to the greater efficiency of the Irish Church are here indicated.

The seventh, the most important, in a national sense, finds an exposition in the preamble of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 109:—

"Whereas it is expedient to abolish compositions for tithes in Ireland, and in lieu thereof to substitute rentcharges payable by persons having a perpetual estate or interest in the lands subject thereto, a reasonable allowance being made for the greater facility and security of collection arising out of such transfer of liability from the occupiers to the owners of lands."

Subsequent legislation has been applied to the correction of unforeseen defects, and unanticipated deficiencies, but it will be observed throughout, how carefully the healing provision has been observed in removing the pressure of direct payment from the occupier, who has at best only a temporary interest in the land whence tithe is drawn, probably a feeling hostile to its application, and to place the obligation where it rests most befittingly—on the proprietors of the soil.

Much relief to the poorer class of tithepayers was obtained by the virtual re-enactment of tithe agistment consequent on the surface of contribution being thus enlarged, and a constant reference to the confirming authority of the Lord Lieutenant in Council vindicates the design of the legislature to submit ecclesiastical authority to the constitutional control of the State.

As might be supposed in the adjustment of a question of such wide extent, points requiring heedful rectification would not at once emerge into prominence.

Vestry cess was abolished for ecclesiastical purposes by the original statute, 4 & 5 Wm. IV. c. 90.

The most important Acts in their operation on the status of the Church are 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 37; 1 & 2 Vict. c. 109; 17 & 18 Vict. c. 11; 4 & 5 Wm. IV. c. 90.

Preamble of 4 & 5 Wm. IV. c. 90.

"That at every vestry to be hereafter at any time called or holden in any parish, union, or chapelry for the purpose of making any cess, rate, assessment, or applotment whatsoever, it shall be lawful for every parishioner, of whatever religion or persuasion he may be, who shall be chargeable to such cess, rate, assessment, or applotment in such parish, union, or chapelry, to vote at such vestry respecting every matter or business therein brought forward."

Legislation dating from the commencement of the reign of George IV., may be distributed into five classes:—

A.—Reformatory or organic.
B.—Disciplinary.
C.—Enabling.
D.—Financial and fiscal.
E.—Constructional—endowment of places of worship, building glebe houses.

But as a remnant of taxation through church officers, though for parochial purposes, such as provision of coffins for indigent parishioners, caused contention, that cause was removed finally by a later statute.

Again, at a later period (1848) the exaction of ministers' money was still felt a burden on the householders of certain cities. They were in the mass presumably Roman Catholics, and therefore, independently of the fiscal annoyance, resented direct pressure of taxation for the purposes of a Church in whose ministrations they did not share.

A committee of the House of Commons was appointed to examine into their complaint; and the good-will of the legislature in redress was proved by the transfer of payment of this due from the householder to the funds of the Ecclesiastical Commission. The value of house property was thus sensibly raised in the localities previously liable to the payment of ministers' money, in whosesoever hands its enjoyment should determine.

Abstract of Preamble to 17 & 18 Vict. c. iii.

"Whereas by 17 & 18 Car. II. c. 7, provision was made for charging sums of money to be paid in every year to the several incumbents having cure of souls in the several parishes within the city of Dublin, and other cities and towns corporate in Ireland, out of the houses belonging to the several parishes, according to the annual value of such houses . . . . and whereas from the diminished value of houses in certain parts of the said city and suburbs of Dublin . . . . and of the several other cities and towns corporate in Ireland, namely, the cities and boroughs of Cork, Limerick, Waterford, Drogheda, Kilkenny, Clonmel, and Kinsale, the burden of the sums charged under the said Act of King Charles the Second, commonly called and hereinafter referred to as ministers' money, has become unequal, and from that cause, and from other causes, the collection of the said ministers' money has been found difficult, and in many cases oppressive to the poor inhabitants of the houses charged therewith; and it is expedient to amend the law in relation thereto."

Royal Commissions.

A Royal Commission on Ecclesiastical Inquiry was issued July 5, 1830,—

1. To inquire into the value of livings and benefices.
2. Into formation of unions, and the dissolution thereof; into impropriations and appropriations, and their origin.

The first report is dated April 18, 1831, and is very valuable and well drawn.

A Royal Commission to inquire into Ecclesiastical Revenues and Patronage was issued August 15, 1832.

Their first report was made March 1, 1833, and gives the revenues and statistics of the archbishops and bishops.

The second report, on the revenues of corporations aggregate, and cathedral dignitaries, was made April 15, 1834.

The third report, dated 20th January, 1836, gives the revenues and statistics of the provinces of Armagh and Tuam.

The fourth report, dated 15th June, 1837, contains the same information as to the provinces of Dublin and Cashel.

Select Committees of the Houses of Lords and Commons.

A Select Committee of the House of Lords on the subject of tithes in Ireland took evidence in 1831-1832, and reported specially on the subject of tithes.

A Select Committee of the House of Commons on the subject of tithes in Ireland took evidence in 1831-1832, and reported June, 1832.

In the report of this committee is to be found the germ of the admirable effort of legislation which resulted in the Church Temporalities Act, 3 & 4 Wm. IV., c. 37.

A Select Committee of the House of Commons reported on precedents respecting the Church in Ireland Bill in 1837.

2. Legislative Results.

The subdivision or formation of unions has been the object of careful attention amongst the reforms developed in the Established Church.

The report of the committee on ecclesiastical revenue and patronage gives a clear and authentic account of the origin and progress of these ecclesiastical aggregations of civil parishes.

The system of unions has been the cause of much misrepresentation of the constitution of the Irish Church and of the performance of her appropriate functions.

It weighed upon the Church as an inevitable result of the misapplication of her resources by the State and the Legislature, and still requires heedful and patient consideration and readjustment.

The suspension of benefices, although not an expressed object of reform in the preamble to 3 & 4 Wm. IV., c. 37, has been systematically acted upon to the great advantage of the Church. § 116. ib.

The undefined position of the archdiaconate § 127, ib., requires strict legal definition.

The consolidation of sees does not appear to have produced marked effect in the guidance or administration of the Church, and not having been productive of the benefit anticipated is a fitting subject for further question.

Deaneries, and capitular and corporate bodies should be reduced into a perfect identity with the sees from which they depend, and with a constant reference to public usefulness.

The sale of perpetuities of Church lands has been effected to a large extent and may be accelerated and developed with national advantage.

Finally, direct legislation, by transferring the obligations of tithes and ministers' money from the occupier to the owner, and of church rates from the vestry to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, has specifically removed the sense of injustice with which the tithe question was regarded in Ireland, and has so far prepared the way for firm and temperate consideration of further reforms in the Established Church.

APPENDIX No. 21.

CORRESPONDENCE with the ECCLESIASTICAL COMMISSIONERS for IRELAND in reference to the PROPERTY vested in them and their EXPENDITURE.

Established Church (Ireland) Commission,
3, Lower Ormond-quay, Dublin,
14th April, 1868.

SIR,—I am directed to request that the Ecclesiastical Commissioners will furnish in writing information on the following particulars:—

1. The number of churches under the care of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and whether the return to Form M (see Appendix No. 26) gives their names?
2. The nature and amount of Primate Boulter's and Primate Robinson's funds, and what trusts they are applicable to, and if to augment small endowments of parishes, to what parishes the income of these funds is applied, and in replying to this question to give such full information that the paper can be printed as received in the Appendix of the Report of the Church Commissioners?
3. What is the exact amount of Government stock in the nature of capital now to the credit of the Commissioners?
4. Do there still remain any instalments of church-building or glebe-house building loans, made prior to the Church Temporalities Acts, and to what amount?
5. What is the meaning in the Parliamentary account of this expression, "Interest on moneys invested for Endowment Fund," and what separate fund is this, and its amount?

I am also directed to add, that the Commissioners are unable in the Parliamentary accounts to distinguish principal from interest, and that they wish to have a separate account showing the average annual income, which the Commissioners communibus annis may reckon upon, and the average outlay to which this may be reasonably considered subject, such amount to be an estimate in round numbers and not in minute detail.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

J. FAVIERE ELRINGTON, Secretary.

To the Secretary of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland.

ANSWER of the ECCLESIASTICAL COMMISSIONERS.

Ecclesiastical Commission,
24, Upper Merrion-street, Dublin,
29th April, 1868.

SIR,—Referring to yours of the 14th instant, I am directed to acquaint you for the information of the Established Church (Ireland) Commissioners that,

1. The number of churches under the care of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners is 1,476, the names of which are given in return to Form M; that return also contains the names of some places of worship not under the charge of the Commissioners but which are annually supplied with some requisites for Divine worship.

2. In order to give such information with respect to Primate Boulter's and Primate Robinson's funds as can be printed in the Appendix of the Report of the Church Commissioners, it is thought desirable to give it in the separate paper hereto annexed.

3. The exact amount of Government stock in the nature of capital now to the credit of the Commissioners is £79,493 18*s.* 3 per cent. consols perpetuity purchase fund; and £18,092 15*s.* which has arisen from an annual investment of £2,000 set apart for the insurance of churches against fire.

N.B.—There is generally a large sum not in the nature of capital but temporarily invested in Government stock to prevent cash balances not immediately wanting from remaining idle and unproductive, but which fund is liable to be sold out at any period to meet outstanding engagements. This fund at present produces dividends amounting to about £3,000 a year.

4. There do not remain any instalments of church building loans made prior to the Church Temporalities Acts, but there do remain instalments payable on 563 glebe house building loans amounting annually to £4,000 which will be paid off about the year 1872.

5. The meaning in the Parliamentary account of the expression "Interest on moneys invested for endowment fund," is interest on moneys invested by private individuals in the name of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners as trustees for the payment of the incumbents in the following cases :—

|---|---|---|---|
| Dunlewy, Dio. Raphoe, 3 per cent. consols invested by Mrs. Jane Russell, | 876 | 3 | 6 |
| Brantry, Dio. Armagh, 3 per cent. consols by Countess of Caledon, . | 1,069 | 10 | 5 |
| Jonesborough, Dio. Armagh, 3 per cent. stock by Lord Clermont, . . | 1,500 | 0 | 0 |
| Garvery, Dio. Clogher, 3 per cent. stock by Earl of Belmore, . . . | 794 | 14 | 9 |
| Total amount invested, . | 4,240 | 8 | 8 |

6. The average annual income which the Commissioners communibus annis may reckon on with reference to the several sources of income available to them is estimated at £113,662, and the average annual outlay to which this may be reasonably considered to be subject cannot be estimated at a lower amount, it being necessary from the numerous demands on the Board for the repair, rebuilding, building, and enlargement of churches to appropriate for church works such sum as shall appear to be available for that purpose, after providing for the several charges on their income of a fixed character.

The account required is subjoined,* being an estimate in round numbers as required.

I have the honour to be your obedient servant,

ROBT. F. FRANKS, Secretary.

J. F. Elrington, esq., LL.D.,
Secretary, Established Church
(Ireland) Commission.

PAPERS referred to in foregoing LETTER.

1. PRIMATE BOULTER'S and PRIMATE ROBINSON'S FUNDS.

The following paper, which is referred to in the foregoing letter, No. 2, gives the fullest information in the power of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland as to the nature and amount of Primate Boulter's and Primate Robinson's funds, with the expenditure thereout, by the late Board of First Fruits, and also of the application of the part of said funds which came to the hands of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, under the provisions of the Church Temporalities Act in 1833.

Under the will of Primate Boulter, dated 19th November, 1729 (which is recited in the 29th of George II. chap. 18), certain funds and properties therein referred to were vested in trustees to be applied under the direction of the trustees of First Fruits towards buying of glebes and augmenting poor livings, and which trusts were further dealt with and enlarged by that Act and also by 46 George III., chap. 60.

The exact amount of the funds of Primate Boulter, which originally came to the hands of the late Board of Trustees of First Fruits, is not known to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners ; but it appears from the books of that Board, that sums amounting in the whole to £21,421 18*s.* were disbursed out of Primate Boulter's fund, in or towards the purchase of glebes and tithes, and the erection of glebe-houses, the particulars of which were as follow :—

Under the will of Primate Robinson, dated the 7th of April, 1795, a sum of £1,000, late Irish currency, was bequeathed to the trustees of First Fruits to be applied upon certain trusts for the building of glebes in the diocese of Armagh.

By the Church Temporalities Act 3 & 4 Wm. IV., chap. 37, section 61, the said funds so bequeathed by Primate Boulter and Primate Robinson respectively, or so much thereof as then remained unapplied, were transferred to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland to be applied towards the augmenting of poor livings by the payment of salaries and towards buying of glebes as therein mentioned.

The nature and amount of Primate Boulter's and Primate Robinson's funds at present in the power of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, are as follows :—

| £ | s. | d. | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 36,232 | 7 | 3 | New 3 per cent. stock. |
| 38,700 | 0 | 0 | Bank stock. |

PRIMATE ROBINSON'S FUND.

| £ | s. | d. | |
|---|---|---|---|

APPENDIX No. 22.

Correspondence with the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland in reference to Bishop Gore's fund.

Established Church (Ireland) Commission Office,
3, Lower Ormond-quay, 3rd August, 1868.

Sir,—I am directed to request that the Ecclesiastical Commissioners will furnish a short statement of the amount of Bishop Gore's fund, its nature, and the way in which it is applied.

Your obedient servant,
J. F. Elrington, Secretary.

To the Secretary of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

---

Ecclesiastical Commission, 24, Upper Merrion-street,
Dublin, 5th August, 1868.

Sir,—Referring to your letter of 3rd instant, I am directed to inform you that the Right Rev. Hugh Gore, Bishop of Waterford and Lismore, by his will, dated 13th October, 1690, after certain pecuniary bequests, gave all the rest of his estate, real and personal, towards the building and repairing of old ruined churches within the dioceses of Waterford and Lismore.

By order of the Court of Chancery, dated 3rd February, 1844 (a copy of which is enclosed herewith), the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland were appointed trustees of that fund, and directed to take proceedings. Legal proceedings were accordingly commenced and prosecuted successfully against the late Earl of Glengall.

The fund now consists of a sum of £3,381 3*s.* 9*d.*, Government three per cent. stock, and £584 12*s.* 9*d.*, cash, together with the tithe-rentcharge of Cahir, in the diocese of Lismore, amounting to £374 15*s.* 10*d.* per annum; and the dividends on stock, are about £100 per annum at present.

The Bishop of Cashel is annually furnished with the account, directed by the Order of 3rd February, 1844.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,
(Signed) Robert F. Franks, Secretary.

To J. Favière Elrington, esq., ll.d.,
Secretary Established Church (Ireland) Commission,
3, Lower Ormond-quay.

Order of the Court of Chancery, referred to in the preceding Letter.

The 3rd day of February, 1844.

Lord Chancellor.

In the Matter of Bishop Gore's Charity, and in the Matter of the Acts made and passed in the 52nd year of the reign of his late Majesty, King George III., chap. 101, and the 1st of King William IV., chap. 60.

Whereas William Peter Mathews, of Fitzgibbon-street, in the city of Dublin, esq., Secretary to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, and William James M'Causland, of Upper Merrion-street, in the city of Dublin, esq., for and on behalf of the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, did, on the 22nd day of January, 1844, prefer their petition to the Right Honorable the Lord High Chancellor of Ireland, setting forth as therein set forth, and praying that the report of Thomas Goold, esq., the Master in this matter, bearing date the 19th day of December, 1843, might stand confirmed, and accordingly that the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, and the Bishop of Cashel, now the Bishop of Waterford and Lismore (consenting thereto) that the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland and their successors might be appointed trustees of the said charitable bequest, they undertaking to administer the said bequest agreeably to the intentions expressed in the will of the said testator, and to expend said funds in rebuilding and repairing old ruined churches in said Diocese of Waterford and Lismore, and to open a separate account, to be entitled "Bishop Gore's Bequest," and that Godfrey Fetherston H., of North Great George's-street, Dublin, Solicitor, be appointed in the place of the heir-at-law of Doctor Hugh Gore, formerly Bishop of Waterford and Lismore, to convey the said charitable funds and premises to the said Ecclesiastical Commissioners as such trustees, and that the said Ecclesiastical Commissioners as such trustees might be at liberty to commence proceedings against Lord Glengall to enforce payment of the arrears of said charitable funds so due by his lordship, and that the Petitioners might have their costs, which, as taxed by said Thomas Goold, amount to the sum of £49 15*s.* 6*d.* out of any fund that might be realized by reason of such proceedings; whereupon all parties concerned were ordered to attend on the matter of the said petition, and Mr. Richard Moore and another of Counsel with the Petitioners on this day attending accordingly, upon reading the petition, the order bearing date the 25th day of May, 1843, and also the report bearing date the 19th day of December, 1843, and hearing what was alleged by the said counsel, his lordship doth order that the report of Thomas Goold, esq., the Master in this matter, bearing date the 19th day of December, 1843, do stand confirmed; and accordingly it is further ordered that (the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests and the Bishop of Cashel, now the Bishop of Waterford and Lismore, consenting thereto), the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland and their successors be appointed trustees of said charitable bequest, they undertaking to administer the said bequest agreeably to the intentions expressed in the will of the said testator, and to expend said funds in rebuilding and repairing old ruined churches in said Diocese of Waterford and Lismore, and to open a separate account, to be entitled "Bishop Gore's Bequest." And it is further ordered, that Godfrey Fetherston H., of North Great George's-street, in the city of Dublin, Solicitor, be appointed in the place of the heir-at-law of Doctor Hugh Gore, formerly Bishop of Waterford and Lismore, to convey the said charitable funds and premises to the said Ecclesiastical Commissioners as such trustees; and it is further ordered that the said Ecclesiastical Commissioners, as such trustees, be at liberty to commence proceedings against Lord Glengall to enforce payment of the arrears of said charitable fund, so due by his lordship; and it is further ordered that the Petitioners do have their costs which, as taxed by said Thomas Goold, amount to the sum of £49 15*s.* 6*d.*, out of any fund that may be realized by reason of such proceedings; and the Court doth declare that the Ecclesiastical Commissioners are to be considered as individual trustees, and that they are to keep separate accounts of the trust-moneys, not to be mixed up with their general account as Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and in execution of these trusts they are to have regard solely to the will of the founder, and not to confound those trusts with the duties imposed on them as Ecclesiastical Commissioners. And it is further ordered that the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, in the month of January in every year, do transmit to the Bishop of Waterford and Lismore an account in writing of the application of their trust during the preceding year; and it is further ordered, that any party be at liberty to apply to the Court as there may be occasion.

APPENDIX No. 28.

HISTORICAL SKETCH on the ENDOWMENTS of the CHURCH in IRELAND.

MR. SHIRLEY.

IN tracing the history of the endowments of the Church in Ireland, it is unnecessary to enter into the vexed question of the mission of Saint Patrick, or to note the various and conflicting opinions and arguments as to the era in which he flourished. Whether Saint Patrick lived in the fifth century, as has been generally assumed and believed,* or so early as in the third century, as has been lately very ingeniously put forward,† it is generally admitted that to him the Irish Church is indebted for the first germ of her existence as a national institution, since her oldest endowments may lay claim to have been granted through the instrumentality of this great Irish Apostle, who appears with wise discrimination to have addressed himself first to the petty kings or chiefs, and hence the success which attended his labours has been generally ascribed, and to this day the sites of many ancient churches can be pointed out in Ireland which are traditionally supposed to have been originally consecrated by him.‡

Saint Patrick was followed by many other illustrious men who were of Irish birth, and noted for learning and zeal in promoting the knowledge of the Christian faith—among them was Finnian, the founder of Clonard; and Ciaran of Clonmacnois. Brendan, also, the founder of Clonfert, and Cainnech of Aghabo; Kevin, whose name is still well remembered at Glendaloch; and Carthach, the founder of Lismore. But the most celebrated was Saint Columba, called from the number of churches and monasteries which he was instrumental in founding, Saint Columbkill, or Columb of the Churches. He flourished in the sixth century, and was the founder of Derry, Raphoe, and Hy (or Iona), and is described in the Annals of Ulster as "next after Saint Patrick, the principal promoter of religion throughout the greater part of Ireland and Scotland." It is mentioned by Dr. Reeves§ as a remarkable fact that many of the monastic churches which grew in after times to be bishops' sees were founded by presbyters. The nature, indeed, of the religious foundations of these early times in Ireland was peculiar, and appears to have been confined to that country; each church or monastery was conducted on the patriarchal system, and the headship of it seems to have been often hereditary in the family of the founder, this headship, descending to his successor, called in Irish Co-arb, irrespective of his ecclesiastical status, whether bishop, presbyter, or layman. The whole system was founded on the spirit of clanship, which has been ever inherent in the Irish character. "The word comharb, or comarb, pronounced nearly as if written co-arb," writes Dr. Todd, in his "Memoir of the Life of St. Patrick," "properly signifies co-heir, or inheritor; co-heir of the same lands or territory which belonged to the original founder of a church or monastery; co-heir also of his ecclesiastical or spiritual dignity, as well of his temporal rights. In the absence of diocesan territorial designations, this term was employed in Irish Church history to designate the bishops or abbats who were the successors or inheritors of the spiritual and temporal privileges

* See Dr. Todd's "St. Patrick, Apostle of Ireland: a Memoir of his Life and Mission." 8vo, Dublin, 1864.
† See Mr. Nicholson's "St. Patrick, Apostle of Ireland in the Third Century." 8vo, Dublin, 1868.

of some eminent saint or founder. Thus the co-arb of Patrick was the bishop or abbat of Armagh; the co-arb of Columcille was the abbat of Hy; the co-arb of Barré was the bishop or abbat of Cork. But this language has led many readers and writers of Irish history into great mistakes. Patrick had co-arbs at Trim as well as at Armagh; Columcille had co-arbs at Derry, at Durrow, and at Swords, as well as at Hi: and there is nothing in the title itself to show whether the co-arb was a bishop or only a presbyter abbat, or even a layman: indeed, the successor of Patrick is as often designated abbat of Armagh as co-arb; and, on the other hand, the bishop of Rome himself is frequently called co-arb of Peter, and sometimes also abbat of Rome—showing how completely the abbatial or co-arban authority, implying, as it did in Ireland, the rank of a feudal lord of the soil, and chieftain over the inhabitants of the soil, swallowed up, as it were, and obscured the accident of a co-existing episcopal or sacerdotal character, in the co-arb, or spiritual chieftain."* "The Church-lands called Termon-lands," observes Dr. Todd, in another place, "had their name, in all probability, from the Termini, pillar-stones, or crosses, set up to mark their boundaries, within which there was a right of sanctuary and a freedom from the taxes and tributes of secular chieftains. "The Erenachs, Herenachs, or in the correct Irish orthography Airchinneachs, in the primitive age of the Irish Church, before the settlement of dioceses in the twelfth century, were most probably the stewards whose duty it was to superintend the lands and farms, and to collect the rents or other tributes paid by tenants."†

The two centuries which followed the era of Saint Columba may be called the golden period of the Church in Ireland, since we are told that the youth not only of England, but of other countries resorted thither, for instruction in the Christian faith, and missionaries proceeded thence to proclaim the Gospel to many parts of the European Continent, then unconverted to the light of Christ; at this time Ireland was, in the words of Dr. Johnson, "The school of the west, the quiet habitation of sanctity and literature." The high state of perfection to which the arts of caligraphy and illumination had then attained in Ireland, is evidenced by the exquisite manuscripts, such as "The Book of Kells," "The Gospels of Durrow," and "The Book of Armagh," which are still preserved in the library of Trinity College, Dublin, and which were generally executed at this period.

The incursions of the Danes into Ireland at the close of the eighth, and during the ninth, tenth, and eleventh centuries, were very injurious to the interests of religion—many churches, monasteries, and colleges for the education of the clergy were destroyed; Armagh itself was plundered and burnt as many as nine times between the years 831 and 1015; the power of the Danes was, however, effectually curbed at the decisive battle of Clontarf, fought A.D. 1014, in which they were opposed by the celebrated Brian Boru, king of Munster, "one of the greatest benefactors of Ireland in the lists of her ancient kings."

During the latter part of their occupation of Ireland, the Danes, or "Ostmen" were converted to Christianity, and settling at Dublin, Waterford, and Limerick, began that connexion with the See of Canterbury, and through Canterbury with Rome, which was not consummated till the latter part of the twelfth century, when the Bulls of Pope Adrian IV. in 1155, and of Pope Alexander III., who succeeded him in 1159, the invasion of Ireland by king Henry II. in 1171, and the Decrees of the Council of Cashel, summoned by that monarch in 1172, commenced a new epoch in the history of the Irish Church. This Council was attended by most of the bishops then existing in Ireland; its principal object was to reduce the ecclesiastical state of Ireland into conformity with the Roman model, both as regarded doctrine and practice. The life of Saint Malachy, Archbishop of Armagh in the twelfth century, and which was written by Saint Bernard, perhaps, gives the best account of what was the state of the Church immediately preceding the Anglo-Norman conquest of Ireland; from this authority we learn with respect to its ecclesiastical endowments that neither tithes or first fruits were regularly paid, and that the clergy were but few in number, and the churches generally in ruins. It will be well, however, to remember that this is the report of a partisan of the Church of Rome, and must therefore be received with caution. Bernard naturally represented everything in Ireland which differed from the standard of Rome in the very worst light, and must certainly be convicted of exaggeration when he tells us that even the marriage contract was unknown or neglected. There appears no reason to doubt, however, that there were many irregularities, and that in particular the limits of dioceses, with which parishes were often confounded, were unfixed in Ireland down to the eleventh century. There was no see of Dublin before that time.

† Ib. p. 160. See this subject learnedly discussed also by Mr King in his "Memoir Introductory to the Early History of the Primacy of Armagh," p. 17.

The ancient Irish bishops were, in fact, the bishops of monasteries and of their dependencies, but not of dioceses in the modern sense of the term, which date from the Synod of Rathbreasil, in A.D. 1110.

"Previous to the conquest of Ireland by Henry II.," writes Dr. Alfred Lee, "the whole Church property of Ireland was under the co-arbs, who were the regularly appointed successors of the more eminent founders of churches in Ireland." Besides ecclesiastical buildings this property consisted chiefly of endowments of land and voluntary offerings. The goods of the Church in those days were usually divided into four parts, one for the use of the bishop, another for that of the clergy, a third for the poor, and a fourth for the building and repairing of churches; the "quarta pars episcopalis," continued in Tuam till 1716. But in the dioceses of Derry and Raphoe, as has been shown by Dr. Reeves, in his "Acts of Archbishop Colton," "the tithes of each parish were divided into three equal portions, of which one was assigned to the rector, one to the vicar, and the third to the herenagh."*

The payment of tithes was first enjoined in Ireland by the Synod of Kells in A.D. 1152, but it was not till the Synod of Cashel, in A.D. 1172, that they became a regular part of the system of the Church. It was decreed at this celebrated council or synod, among other enactments, "That all the faithful of Christ shall pay tithes of their cattle, corn, and other produce to the church of the parish to which they belong." Before this time the practice of doing so, as has been already remarked, had been little, if at all, observed in Ireland. It was also decreed "that all church lands and property on them shall be entirely free from all exactions of laymen, and in particular that no petty princes, earls, or any nobles of Ireland shall exact for themselves or their families entertainment or free quarter upon church estates, as has been usual, nor presume henceforward to extort it by violence; and that those detestable contributions which are wont to be levied from the church farms four times a year by the neighbouring earls shall be levied no more."

Notwithstanding, however, the decrees of this celebrated council with respect to tithes, it appears to be generally admitted that they were very irregularly paid; and Dr. Doyle, in his evidence before the House of Commons in 1832, says only in that part of the country which was subject to English power; and as that power in the course of the following three centuries gradually receded, till in the reign of Henry VIII. the English Pale was reduced to the present counties of Dublin, Kildare, Meath, and Louth, the payment of tithes, in fact, if Dr. Doyle is to be depended on, was intercepted, if it did not altogether cease throughout the greater part of Ireland. It may, however, be reasonably doubted whether this opinion of Dr. Doyle rests upon any solid foundation as it certainly appears that tithes are spoken of as a payment of antiquity in various documents written during the reign of James I., when the Church was resettled. The payment was certainly recognised in the northern dioceses, far beyond the Pale, in some of which the bishops had the fourth part of the tithes, and in others the third part, the rest being divided between the parson and vicar."†

But if the Church derived but little from tithes she was enriched by very ample grants of lands by the Anglo-Norman and Irish nobility during the three centuries which followed the conquest of Ireland; we hear little at this period of the very ancient foundations of Celtic origin, but a very large proportion of the cultivated lands of Ireland was gradually absorbed by the monasteries of the Anglo-Norman settlers, which in extent and magnificence greatly exceeded the former institutions. With respect to tithes also it is to be remembered that at the period of the Reformation one-half of the entire tithes of Ireland had passed into the hands of the monasteries,‡ of which no fewer than 382 were suppressed throughout Ireland by King Henry VIII., subsequent to the year 1537.

We have but little information as to the state of the Church during the three centuries between the Anglo-Norman invasion and the Reformation, in the middle of the sixteenth century, and that little regards generally the disputes between the clergy themselves rather than any precise knowledge as to its internal condition, or the endowments which were received by the clergy. The sources of history give, it must be confessed, a deplorable account of the ecclesiastical condition of Ireland at this time; with the exception of the celebrated Richard Fitzralph, Archbishop of Armagh, in the fourteenth century, afterwards known as St. Richard of Dundalk, scarcely a name can be mentioned worthy of remembrance. The clergy in general had so degenerated in learning and become so grossly ignorant, that many of them were unable even to pronounce correctly the words of the Latin mass, much less to understand their meaning. In an Act of Parliament, passed about the middle of the fifteenth century, it is expressly stated that there were "but few in the land able to teach or preach the Word of God."*

There was also another difficulty and source of weakness in the ecclesiastical polity of Ireland at this period, arising from the mutual jealousies which existed between the native Irish clergy and monks in the more remote parts of the country where the ancient Celtic customs continued to prevail, and the clergy and monastic bodies of the Anglo-Norman foundations who occupied the English pale and its borders. "Hence it came to pass," remarks Mr. Edwards, "that there were virtually in Ireland not only two separate nations, but two separate Churches, each, as far as possible, ignoring the other."—"Turbulence and outrage, on the one side, were followed by cruel and barbarous enactments on the other, and these by mutual hatred and animosity, which became every year more and more intense, and were rather fostered than discouraged by the measures of the English Government and of the Papal Court.

The Papal Court had also much to answer for with regard to the illegal system of "Provisions,"† about which we hear so much at the period immediately preceding the Reformation, in the sixteenth century, and of which the following extract from "Articles on the behalf of the Earl of Kildare," dated May 23, 1525, is an illustration :—

"All the churches for the more part within counties Kilkenny and Tipperary are in such extreme decay by provision, that no Divine service is kept there."—"And [it] shall be well proved that few or none laboureth to the Apostle (the Pope), for any benefice there without the consent of the said Earl (of Ormond), or my Lady, his wife, by whom he is only ruled, which are the very maintainers of all such provisions."—"If the King do not provide a remedy, there will be no more 'Cristentie' there than in the middle of Turkey."‡

And again, a little later, read the following communication from the Earl of Ossory, dated the 31st of May, 26th Henry VIII. [1534], the very year that the Papal supremacy was renounced by the Church of Ireland. It is to be hoped that the critical moment of its composition has somewhat coloured, if not greatly exaggerated, the statements contained in it :—

"The Bishops of Rome's provisions and usurped jurisdiction have been the chief causes of the desolation and decay of Ireland."—"By the abominable abuse whereof the cathedral churches, its monasteries, parish churches, and all other regular and secular, for the more part, in effect through the land, have been in utter ruin and destroyed; for the said Bishop of Rome commonly hath preferred by his provisions to the administration and governance of them, not only vile and vicious persons unlearned, being murderers, thieves, and of other detestable dispositions, as light men of war, who for their unjust maintainance therein for some time to expel the rightful incumbent, and other seasons by force of secular power to put the true patrons from their patronage, and other their misorders, have not only spent, wasted, and alienated such lands as the king and his noble progenitors, and his nobles, gave to the augmentation of God's Divine service in the churches of that land, the exhibition and maintenance of the ministers of the same, and the utensils and ornaments there, but also by occasion of the same, great wars hath been stirred amongst the king's people, and countries virent (sic), bishops and divers other persons spiritual and temporal murdered, and many other detestable things have caused thereby. Therefore the king has willed his deputy to resist, with all his power, the abuse and usurped jurisdiction of the said Bishop of Rome; and the Earl of Ossory has promised that he and his son will resist the said provisions with all their power."§

The first great alteration by statute in the ecclesiastical condition of Ireland was the Act passed in a Parliament held in Dublin in the year 1536, which declared the King Henry VIII. to be supreme head of the Church in Ireland, and which was followed by several others, prohibiting appeals to the Church of Rome, suppressing Peter's pence and other similar exactions, first fruits and twentieth parts to be paid to the king, instead of to the Pope; and the Acts for the suppression of monasteries, which legalized their surrender and conferred them upon the Crown, "in the same manner, form, state, and condition as the abbot had, or of right ought to have had, the same at the time of the dissolution."

These Acts were of the greatest consequence to the Church, and they were immediately followed by the submission of all the great lords and chieftains of Ireland, who, in the thirty-third year of Henry VIII. (1541) acknowledged him to be their sovereign lord and king, and confessed the royal supremacy in all causes, utterly renouncing the jurisdiction of the Pope.

The immediate effect of the good understanding between the Crown and its Irish subjects may be seen by the following extracts from indentures entered into by certain of the Irish chiefs and the Crown; but it must be added, and the observation affects generally the undertakings of the Irish chiefs, certainly at this period of their history, that it is to be feared that little, if any, satisfactory result ensued, and that it was long before the abuses alluded to were entirely removed.

The more remote effect, however, of the Act which vested in the king the very numerous monastic foundations in Ireland was very prejudicial to the interests of religion, more particularly in the rural districts. The monasteries had, during the succession of ages, absorbed, as has been already stated, at least a moiety of the tithes, the monks undertaking to perform the spiritual duties of the several parishes for which those tithes were originally imposed. The monasteries being now broken up, and the monks pensioned by the Crown, the parish churches were very generally left unserved, or at least with inadequate provision for the curates; and hence, the union of benefices, which, as we learn from the letters of Sir Henry Sidney and others, during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, was so great an evil to the Church. Dr. Alfred Lee has remarked of this period:—

"It is truly wonderful that the Irish Church survived at all after the spoliation it then received. The rectorial tithes of 562 parishes passed into the hands of laymen, and in addition, 118 parishes became wholly impropriate; the lay impropriators also became possessed of 1,480 glebes belonging to the Church."

The Royal Commissioners of Ecclesiastical Inquiry reported (in the year 1831) another source of evil to the Church:—

"The great patentees, in many instances, made encroachments on the parochial incumbents, under the pretence that the property encroached on was parcel of the ancient appropriations, to the further impoverishment of the parochial cures, and several of the patentees seized vicarages as well as rectories, as if they also were impropriate, and either left the cures unprovided for, or afforded small and insufficient stipends to the stipendiary curates."‡

The state of confusion consequent upon the chronic state of rebellion in which Ireland remained till the latter part of the reign of James I. was the cause of still greater ecclesiastical difficulties, for principally owing to ignorance as to the lands and rights of the Church, which prevailed for many years after the Reformation, both among the surveyors and lawyers employed, it was found that when large grants were made by the Crown to various lay proprietors, in many cases the ancient patrimony of the bishoprics themselves had been unintentionally granted away, so that the Church was left almost totally unendowed, though the sees themselves remained.§ Thus we find in a MS. account of the northern bishoprics in the Cottonian Collection in the British Museum,‖ ascribed to Bishop Montgomery, and written evidently in the reign of James I., and previous to the year 1609—"That the whole estate of the three bishopries of Derry, Raphoe, and Clogher, together with all the lands lying in the counties of Armagh and Tyrone, belonging to the Primate of Armagh, wherein consisteth the chief state of the primacy, being the chief prelacy of the kingdom, and the lands belonging to the bishopric of Kilmore, lying in the county of Cavan, are all carried away from the Church by offices, and are now in the king's hands, or of his patentees." This manuscript report, which enters fully into the particulars of each bishopric recommends—"That all ecclesiastical lands now found for the king, and yet undisposed, may be restored unto the several bishoprics ‡ Report of Royal Commissioners of Ecclesiastical Inquiry, 1831, p. 6.

§ The following extracts from the Patent Rolls illustrate this statement:—

37 Elizabeth.—24 May, 1595.—Grant, enabling Henry Ussher, D.D., to hold archdeaconry of Dublin, in commendam with archbishopric and primacy of Armagh, "because the value of the latter was so small." So also a letter of Eliz.—20 March, 1567, directs a conference of Dean and Chapter, Armagh, and lords, gentlemen, and freeholders of the diocese, for raising a contribution towards re-edifying the Cathedral and house for the Archbishop of Armagh.

4 James I.—Grant, enabling Christopher Todd, D.D., to hold Deanery of Cashel in commendam with bishoprics of Down and Connor, "considering the said bishoprics to be so slender and small that they are not able to support fitting hospitality and other charges incumbent thereon, unless competent relief be afforded."

James I.—18 May.—King's letter, on the petition of the Bishop of Elphin, stating that there were above thirty parishes in his diocese without any minister to take cure of souls, owing to the farmers of the impropriate parsonages having taken up the profits of the vicarages; and that the temporal lands of the see were withheld by persons who claimed them as inheritance, whereby His Majesty directs that the parishes shall no longer be destitute of ministers, and that the Bishop shall be summarily restored to the lands which were lately found by a commission from the Exchequer to belong to the see.

2 Eliz.—17 May.—Queen's letter to Earl of Sussex, Lieutenant of Ireland, directing a patent to be passed to Alexander Craike, of the bishopric of Kildare, and in consequence of the tenuity of the see, directing him to have the deanery of St. Patrick in commendam.

7 James I.—2 August.—Grant to William Daniel, D.S.T., pursuant to privy seal, of the archbishopric of Tuam, with all its rights, &c.; and on account of the tenuity of the revenues of said archbishopric, which are by no means competent for the decent support of so great a dignity, and His Majesty being desirous to provide all things fitting for the support thereof, to the said William Daniel, Treasurer of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, was granted a royal dispensation, lawfully to retain in perpetual commendam with said archbishopric the said dignity of Treasurer of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, of which he is now incumbent, with all tithes and rights to said treasurership belonging.

to which they did formerly belong." This was afterwards done, as we find by the Royal Grants; and hence it may be said that the endowments of the Church, so far at least as the northern bishoprics are concerned, date only from a period long subsequent to the Reformation in Ireland.

But there was still another cause which injuriously affected the endowments of the Church in Ireland, and for which the clergy were themselves to blame: the long leases on very inadequate considerations—in some cases even perpetuities—which were granted by certain of the prelates and others, both before and after the Reformation, there being no restraining power by statute at this period to prevent so unjust an alienation. This evil is thus alluded to in Jeremy Taylor's sermon at the funeral of Archbishop Bramhall in the year 1663:—"For at the Reformation, the Popish bishops and priests seemed to conform, and did so, that keeping their bishoprics they might enrich their kindred and dilapidate the revenues of the Church, which, by pretended offices, false informations, fee-farms at contemptible rents, and ungodly alienations, were made low as poverty itself."

Some progress towards redressing these intolerable evils was made in 1634, by certain Acts of Parliament passed in that year, principally through the exertions of Archbishop Bramhall and the Lord Deputy Strafford, particularly the "Act for the Preservation of the Inheritance, Rights, and Profits of Lands belonging to the Church and Persons Ecclesiastical," and the "Act which enableth Restitution of Impropriations and Tithes, and other rights ecclesiastical, to the clergy, with a restraint of alienating the same, and directions for the presentations to churches."

Archbishop Bramhall was also instrumental in procuring the restitution of impropriations which remained in the Crown, to be vested by the king, Charles I., in the several incumbents, after the expiration of the leases; "some he recovered by law, and persuaded many persons possessed of tithes to restore them, or sufficiently to endow the vicarages, or to grant a proper salary at least to the curates. Moreover, he himself purchased abundance of impropriations, either with his own money, or by large remittances from England; by money given by His Majesty to pious uses; by borrowing large sums, and securing them out of the issues of the impropriations he bought; by voluntary contributions; and by a share of the goods of persons dying intestate."* "Insomuch that as I have heard from a most worthy hand," said Jeremy Taylor, in his funeral sermon, "that at his going into England he gave account to the Archbishop of Canterbury of £30,000 a year, in the recovery of which he was greatly and principally instrumental. But the goods of this world are called 'waters' by Solomon: 'stolen waters are sweet,' and they are too unstable to be stopped: some of these waters did run back from their proper channel, and return to another course than God and the laws intended."†

Notwithstanding, however, the great exertions of Archbishop Bramhall, seconded as they were by all the influence of the Court, Dean Swift, writing to Mr. Harley (October 17, 1710), remarks:—

"In Ireland, hardly one parish in ten hath any glebe, and the rest very small and scattered, except a very few; and these have seldom any houses. There are in proportion more impropriations in Ireland than in England, which, added to the poverty of the country, make the livings of very small and uncertain value, so that five or six are often joined to make a revenue of £50 per annum: but these have seldom above one church in repair, the rest being destroyed by frequent wars, &c. The clergy, for want of glebes, are forced in their own or neighbouring parish to take farms to live, at rack rents."

After the restoration of Charles II. in 1660, the Act of Settlement was passed (14 & 15 Car. II., c. 2), whereby the estates of the Church were confirmed, and "all and every impropriations or appropriate tithes forfeited to, or vested in His Majesty, given to the Church for ever, and settled and established upon the present and future incumbents and their successors." This Act of Parliament also contained a clause (110), which enacted, "That out of every hundred acres forfeited to His Majesty, which are not yet actually distributed, two acres shall be allowed and set apart for glebe in every parish, barony, and county, as shall be most contiguous and convenient for the several parish churches in such places situate or to be situated." It would be difficult probably to ascertain what has been the effect of this enactment.

During the reign of Queen Anne, to whom a lasting debt of gratitude is also due by the English Church, the ancient papal imposts of the first fruits and twentieth parts were remitted to the Church in Ireland; the twentieth parts being remitted to the clergy individually, and the first fruits made over to trustees for the purchase of glebe lands, the building of glebe houses, and the increase of small benefices. This trust continued to be exercised for the benefit of the Church till the passing of the Temporalities Act in 1836, under which the payment of first fruits was entirely abolished.

In the year 1735, when the Church had in some degree recovered from the many difficulties of preceding centuries, she received a very severe blow, and from the hands of the landed proprietors, by the abandonment of the payment of "Agistment tithe," or tithe payable both by common and statute law, on pasturage, the condition, at that time, of the greater part of the land in Ireland. The case cannot be better stated than in the words of Mr. Edwards in his "Historical Sketch of the Church of Ireland:"—

"Legal proceedings being taken to enforce the demand, judgment was, in every instance, given, both in the Irish and English courts, in favour of the claim; upon which the House of Commons (composed principally of the landed proprietors themselves) passed a resolution condemnatory of the demand, and encouraging opposition to it. This hint the opposers were not slow to take; and by combinations among themselves, and the establishment of a common fund to resist legal proceedings, so harassed and intimidated the clergy, that the demand, though having the undoubted sanction both of law and custom, was eventually abandoned—a result which proved not less detrimental to the interests of the country at large than of the tithe-owners; by giving an undue stimulus to pasturage as compared with tillage, which was already too much neglected. The incomes of the bishops, being almost exclusively derived from lands, had, by the increased value of such property, become greatly improved, as had also those of the beneficed clergy generally in Ulster, who were, for the most part, provided with tolerable glebes. To the incumbents, however, in the other parts of Ireland, whose glebes (where they had any) were mostly small, and who were, therefore, chiefly dependent on tithes, the proceeding just adverted to (coupled with many previous acts of private fraud or violence) was productive of much distress and impoverishment; the consequence being the too frequent but unavoidable union of several parishes into a single benefice, and, in many cases, a benefice far from remunerative."*

Little remains to be added to this sketch of the history of the endowments of the Irish Church. The latter part of the eighteenth and the beginning of the present century, was indeed a time of inaction as regards ecclesiastical affairs both in England and Ireland, and it is not too much to say that the temporal as well as spiritual interests of the Church have suffered most severely in consequence. Political appointments both to bishoprics and all other great prizes in the Church, was the rule rather than the exception, particularly in Primate Boulter's time, when "the English interest," as it was called, was alone considered in the selection of the Irish episcopate. This was more especially the period when the union of parishes already referred to, was so extensively exercised, unions which in very many cases have been since happily dissolved.

The first general Act of Parliament affecting the endowments of the Church in Ireland after the fundamental Treaty of Union which united into one National Church the Churches respectively established in England and Ireland, and which took effect on the 1st of January 1801, was the Act passed in 1823, for the composition of tithe; this Act was followed by another which made the compositions permanent and compulsory. The opposition to the payment of tithes, however, which had been long a popular cry in Ireland, appears to have been encouraged by these enactments, and the clergy in many parts of the country were reduced to the greatest distress—distress which led, in the first place, to a loan (afterwards turned into a gift) to the tithe-owners of a million sterling from the Treasury; and eventually to the Act passed in the year 1838, which is the existing law as regards the payment of tithe in Ireland.

By this enactment the tithe composition theretofore chargeable on the occupier was converted into a rentcharge payable by the owner, who was henceforth to receive the amount from his tenant in the shape of an addition to the rent; while the tithe-owner was obliged to compound, by the sacrifice of one-fourth of his income, for the peaceable and regular receipt of the remaining three-fourths.†

The Church Temporalities Act was passed in 1834, and by this Act church cess was abolished, ten out of the twenty-two bishoprics were suppressed, and the revenues transferred to a Board of Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who were answerable for the repairs and rebuilding of churches; and in addition a tax varying from 2½ to 15 per cent. was made payable by every incumbent whose appointment should date subsequently to the passing of this Act, out of every bishopric and other benefice exceeding in net income £300 a year.

In 1857 the last general Act affecting the endowments of the Church in Ireland was passed, by which a revenue of about £12,000 per annum, called "ministers' money," payable by the owners of houses of certain principal towns, was abandoned, and the charges on it imposed on the funds of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

"The general result," says Mr. Edwards, "of these various measures affecting tithes, church rates, and ministers' money, was to diminish the revenue of the Church by nearly £250,000 per annum, or about one-third of the whole."‡ It is self-evident from what has been said, that but a fraction of the original "tenth" remains with the clergy of the Established Church; not a larger portion than what would fall to their lot, if the whole tithe had been a national provision, and had been divided between the adherents of the Church of Rome in Ireland and the members of the Church itself.

To this slight sketch of the endowments of the Church in Ireland might be added the very large amount of private investments in glebe houses, and in the rebuilding of old and foundation of new churches, since the period of the Union, and more especially within the last twenty years, had there been any means at hand accurately to estimate them.*

In conclusion it may be said, that of the original patrimony of the Church before the Anglo-Norman invasion, but little remains, and that little consists solely of lands; of the tithes and lands granted to the Church between the eras of the Invasion and the Reformation, probably the whole of the lands, and one moiety at least of the tithes, are in the hands of the laity, having been dissevered from the Church at the fall of the monasteries in 1536; of the remaining property of the Church, viz., the glebe lands, no less than five-sixths were granted to the Reformed Church since the Reformation; the same may be said of the bishops' lands in Ulster, which were granted in 1609. It is evident, therefore, that the Church at the present time is in possession of much smaller endowments than it was once entitled to, and that a large proportion of the remaining endowments have been acquired since the Reformation in the sixteenth century.

PART II.—EXTRACTS from GRANTS.

EXPLANATION OF TERMS.

In order to understand the various obsolete expressions occurring in the following grants, describing various quantities of land, such as Ballibetaghs, Balliboes, Quarters, Tathes or Tates. Carucats, Polls, Sessiaghs, Cartrons. &c., the following extract from the Rev. Dr. Reeves's paper, published in the 7th vol. of the Proceedings of the Royal Academy, may be found useful:—

"The tate was estimated at sixty acres, and a sixteenth was the unit; and this came to be distinguished as a townland. In Cavan the first division was a ballibet, identical with the ballybetagh of other parts. Of this the proximate species was the poll or pole, sixteen of which constituted the ballybet. Each poll contained two gallons, each gallon two pottles, descending even to a sub-division called pints. In Down the prevailing denomination was the ballyboe or cowland. sometimes called the carewe, from the Latin carucata or plowland, which has been estimated at sixty acres. Three of these formed the quarterland, and twelve the ballybetagh *. Sometimes a smaller division was in use called the sessiagh. In Antrim the townland, Latinized villa and villata, was the prevailing denomination at the commencement of the seventeenth century. The higher division was, as in Down, the quarterland—that is, the conventional quarter of the ancient ballybetagh. Here, as elsewhere, the original name of the quarterland was often lost, while the specific ones were retained, or the generic name was given in exchange to a principal component part. In Antrim we have still the traditional aggregation in the "four towns" of Ahoghill, the "eight towns" of Muckamore, and the "sixteen towns" of Antrim. The divisions in Donegal were ballybetaghs, descending to quarters, ballyboes, and sessiaghs, of which the ballyboe, with occasional sessiaghs, was the denomination which eventually merged in the general townland. The divisions in Donegal were ballybetaghs, descending to quarters, ballyboes, and sessiaghs, of which the ballyboe, with the occasional sessiaghs, was the denomination which eventually merged in the general townlands. In Londonderry it was found by inquisition that thirteen ballyboes were equivalent to the ballybetagh. In Armagh the prevailing denomination was the "ballyboe or town," which contained three sessiaghs. In several instances we meet with proportions of ten ballyboes in this county, which were estimated at 1,000 acres—that is, 100 acres, with their appurtenances, to the ballyboe. In Tyrone, as in Armagh, the ballyboe or townland was the prevailing denomination, and contained three "sheshawghes" or sessiaghs; it had besides a compound denomination called tullagh, consisting of a ballyboe and a sessiagh—that is, a townland and a third. The popular division of Longford was the cartron, which was estimated at from 60 to 160 acres. Four of these made a quarter or ploughland. The cartron is represented by the modern "townland." In Louth the carucate or carewe, of which 120, sometimes 60 acres, were the prevailing contents. Meath had the plowland, and under it the carucate and townland. In the direction of Cavan we find the poll. Westmeath had the cartron and carucate. An inquisition finds three carucates to consist of 360 acres or 120 acres each. We also meet a "half carucate," otherwise a "half plowland." The county of Dublin was considerably sub-divided. The prevailing denomination was the plowland or townland. Kildare was similarly distributed. Wicklow had villæ, villatæ, hamlets, lands and cowlands, or ballyboes. The divisions of Carlow were mart-lands, or beef-lands, and fractional parts, also penny-lands. The half and quarter mart-lands are now represented by the townlands. Thus, too, in Wexford, besides quarters, carucates, and plowlands, we find an inquisition which sets out the barony of Ballaghkene as containing thirteen mart lands. In Kilkenny also we find the carucate and mart-land; it had besides a denomination called capell-lands, three of which made a plowland, and a sub-division called a horse's-bed or horseman's-bed, containing twenty or thirty acres. King's county had the carucate and cartron. The English of Waterford reckoned by plowland; the native Irish by mart-lands and the sub-denomination, horsemens'-beds. Tipperary had capell-lands of about 400 acres, English measure, each capell-land containing four quarter-meers. Limerick reckoned by quarters, each divisible into four quarter-meers. It had also a sub-denomination called a gneeve. In Cork we find the plowland Latinized carucata, and the gneeve a sub-denomination. In Kerry the divisions were quarters and plowlands, as one to three, each plowland estimated at 120 acres. In Connaught the prevailing distribution was into townlands of vague import; quarters, the fourth part of the former; cartron, the fourth of a quarter; gneeve, the sixth of a quarter. The cartron was computed at thirty native acres."—Paper upon the Townland Distribution of Ireland, read before the Royal Irish Academy by the Rev. Dr. Reeves. Proceedings, vol. 7, p. 476, &c.

Sir John Davis, in one of his letters, states that 'Monaghan (though but a small county) was divided into five baronies, 100 ballybetaghs, 1,600 tates (or sub-denominations), each containing about sixty acres. Many of these have English as well as Irish names, and some have two or three of both.' He adds that the Gavelkind laws multiplied sub-divisions to such a degree, that almost every man had a patrimony, and, were it but an acre or two, called it his 'country.'

The word "gort." which frequently occurs in connexion with glebe lands, is an Irish word, signifying a "field"—i.e., a tillage field, in which corn, especially wheat, is grown.

* In the project for the division and plantation of the escheated lands in the six counties of Ulster, viz., Tyrone, Coleraine, Donegal, Fermanagh, Armagh, and Cavan, printed in full in Harris's Hibernica, folio ed., 1748, p. 534—it is stated that the counties of Tyrone and Coleraine were divided into ballyboes, containing about 60 English acres apiece; in the county of Donegal into parcels called quarters, which were unequal in quantity, and, therefore, the division was to be made by acres. The county of Fermanagh was divided into tathes containing about 30 acres; the county of Cavan into polls containing about 24 acres each; the county of Armagh was divided into ballyboes, but of unequal quantity, so that the distribution in that county was to be made by acres.

* These instructions for the plantation of Ulster are re-printed in Harris's Hibernica, folio ed. page 63, from a copy printed in the year 1608. After directing that the counties should be divided into precincts containing eight, ten, or twelve thousand acres, according to the greatness of the county, and each to have known metes and names, with the number and name of every ballyboe, tathe, poll, quarter, or the like Irish precinct of land, the 9th article of instruction, p. 70, was as follows:—9th. The commissioners are to limit and bound out the precincts of the several parishes, according to their discretion, notwithstanding the limitation of the precinct, wherein they may observe the ancient limits of the old parishes, so as the same breed not a greater inconvenience to the plantation, and to assign to the incumbent of each parish a glebe after the rate of three score acres for every t[h]ousand acres within the parishes, in the most convenient places, or nearest to the churches; and for the more certainty, to give to each glebe a certain name whereby it may be known; and to take order that there be a proviso in the letters patent for passing the glebes to restrain the alienation thereof, saving during their incumbencies.

In the original project of the King, also given in Harris's Hibernia, p. 53, it was directed that all the lands escheated in every county should be divided into four parts; whereof two parts should consist of 1,000 acres a piece; a third part into 1,500 acres, and the fourth part into proportions of 2,000 acres. That every proportion be made a parish, and a parish church erected thereon; and the incumbents endowed with glebes of several quantities, viz.—An incumbent of a parish of 1,000 acres, to have 60 acres; an incumbent of a parish of 1,500 acres, to have 90 acres; and an incumbent of a parish of 2,000 acres, to have 120 acres; and that the whole tithes and duties of every parish be allotted to every incumbent besides the glebes aforesaid. We have received from the Right Rev. and much esteemed Prelates of that our kingdom a lively representation of the miseries of many of our loving subjects there occasioned by the want of an able and loyal clergy, sufficiently provided, to reside upon their charges in every parish, and for a good help and advancement thereof, they have humbly besought us to bestow those appropriations which are yet in the Crown and undisposed, so as the same may bring no diminution to our revenue, nor considerable prejudice to the rights of our imperial Crown of that our realm, as by the presentation of the true state of those benefices they have made appear to yourself: Now considering how much this tendeth to the advancement of piety, true religion, government, and civility, and that others by our example may be encouraged to like good works in this kind, we are graciously pleased to grant this request, and do freely give unto the Church the said appropriations, in such manner as is desired, hereby authorizing and requiring you, with the advice of our learned Council there, to convey the same by such letters patent, or other legal instruments, as are necessary and usual, and to confirm it by Act of Parliament, if these come to you in due time; provided that there be such clauses and reservations observed in the manner of those grants, and for payment of the rents, as are contained in the certificate sent by you unto us from the Master of the Rolls, and other referees, then bearing date the 26th day of February last, and for so doing these our letters shall be your sufficient warrant. Charles, by the Grace of God, of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and soforth: To all to whom our present letters shall come, greeting. Whereas, amongst other imperial cares in which our royal solicitude is continually engaged, to spread and establish religion and a sincere pursuit of the Divine Name, through all the confines of our realm, is pre-eminent, which we think can be done better in no other way than by providing that the ministers and preachers of God's word, who are continually labouring in the Lord's vineyard under a limited supply of necessaries, should be supported and sustained, without which it is easy to see the decay of religion itself in future. And whereas, our most beloved father, the late King James, of happy memory, seeing the tenuity and poverty of the ecclesiastical benefices within his late plantation in the King and Queen's County and Westmeath in His kingdom of Ireland, of His special grace in favour of Holy Church, and that fit and learned pastors and preachers of God's word should be the more readily invited to undertake the care of the said churches, determined to endow the said churches with an augmentation of certain glebe lands in the said county. It is recited that King James I. had intended to grant these lands to this see on the plantation of the county of Leitrim; but they had not as yet been passed by patent.

15 Chas. I.—27 Sept.

Grant to John Richardson, Bishop of Ardagh, and his successors, of the lands of Carridaughan, 4 qrs. and a half of Fenagh, 5 of Cloone, 2 of Kiltaughboorlee, the half cartron of Aghanecrosse, 2 qrs. of Kiltubrid, 2 of Killerry, and the qrs. of Annaughduffe and Killenumery, in the county of Leitrim; to hold in pure alms. It appears by letters patent, dated the 26th Feb., in 17th year of James I., that His Majesty intended, on the plantation of the co. of Leitrim, to assign these lands to the Bishop of Ardagh, in lieu of which the bishop agreed to return to his clergy the quarta pars episcopalis; but as the bishop of that day neglected to pass patent, pursuant to said letters, an application was made by Bishop Richardson to Chas. I., who on 24th July, 1631, and 8th April, 1633, directed these lands to be granted to the bishop, pursuant to the intentions of his father. The grant was retarded by a former order of the Council of 17th March, 1616, whereupon the King, by his letters of 21st June, 1636, ordered the grant to pass. The grant appears to have taken effect in 1638, pursuant to the terms of a certificate made by the Commissioners for Remedy of Defective Titles, dated 10th May, 1637, confirmed by the Lord Deputy and Council.

An indenture, made 24th September, 1702, between the Trustees of Forfeited Estates and William Lord Bishop of Kildare. Whereas certain lands in the territory of Glenmalira, in the King's and Queen's counties, were granted in 1696 to Henry Earl of Galway, and his heirs, which lands were laid waste during the late rebellion, and most of the houses thereon burnt by the Irish; and whereas the said Earl caused divers houses to be built in the town of Portarlington and elsewhere, upon the said premises, and made leases for lives or years, without fine, to divers English and French Protestants, and also had caused to be built two churches to the use of the said Protestants, and two schools for the education of their children, and the children of such native Irish who would suffer them to be instructed and brought up in the Protestant religion, the said territory being for the most part inhabited by such natives; and whereas by the Act of Resumption, the said grant was made void, and the lands were vested in the trustees to the uses of the said Act; and whereas by an English Act of Parliament, made in the first year of Queen Anne, entitled, an Act for the relief of Francis Spring, and other the Protestant tenants of the forfeited estates in Ireland, in respect of their real improvements, and for confirming a Protestant settlement at Portarlington, and of a charity at Middleton, co. Corke, &c.; it was enacted that all the Earl of Galway's said leases should be good and effectual in law, and the said trustees empowered and required to convey and assign to the Bishop of Kildare and his successors the said churches and school-houses with the ground and gardens therewith respectively, held, and likewise to convey and grant to the said bishop, and his successors, a yearly sum or rentcharge not exceeding £80, payable out of the manor of Clonegowne alias Charlestowne, in the King's county, one moiety to be paid to such English, and the other moiety to such French Protestant minister, as should celebrate divine service in said churches, and also to convey £32 per annum to the said bishop out of the said manor, to be paid over by him, viz. £20 to the English, and £12 to the French Protestant schoolmaster in the said schools; all which was accordingly done by this indenture, and two particular leases of part of the said manor assigned and set apart for the payment of the said annuities.—Inrolled 11 March, 1702.

As the clerk of the Auditor General had omitted to reduce the Irish rent into English money, it appears, from the Bishop's representation to his Majesty, that the clergy not only paid the ancient Irish rent but an increase of one fifth; in consequence of which, letters patent were issued from Kensington, dated the 11th June, 1701, directing that the clergy should be discharged fom such additional rent; it may therefore be necessary to observe that the rents above specified are the reduced rents. The aforesaid tithes and alterages were merely given to the Bishop of the day in trust; and the clergy who have the cure of souls in the respective parishes wherein these tithes arise and renew, ought to be in possession of them at the present day.

or assigned, and by this Act confirmed to the respective possessors, their heirs or assigns, the said respective possessors, their heirs and assigns shall pay so much moneys as shall be sufficient to purchase such a number of acres of the aforesaid measure, and of the same quality, within the said parish, as the land out of which the said acres should have been taken, and assigned for glebes at that present, shall be adjudged; the same rent to be reserved payable to His Majesty, his heirs, and successors, and in the same manner by the respective incumbents, and their successors, enjoying the said lands, so to be assigned to them for glebes, as the said forfeited or escheated lands, out of which they are taken, shall be and are by this Act ordained for to pay.

17 & 18 Charles II., Chap. 2., Sec. 27.—And it is further enacted, that in lieu of such provision for glebes, as by the said former Act was intended, the said Commissioners shall likewise set out so many acres of lands more, as may be sufficient to endow or supply all and every the parochial churches in this kingdom with ten acres of glebe at the least (except such parochial churches as are endowed with the like or a greater quantity of glebe already), and that the same be so allotted as may be most contiguous and convenient to and for the several and respective parish churches hereby intended to be endowed; in which provision parishes united or to be united by virtue of an Act, intituled, An Act for real union and division of parishes, and concerning free schools and exchanges, are to be understood but as one parish; and parishes within great cities and walled towns are not at all intended to be comprehended; and the like care both for contiguity and conveniency is to be had in the setting out of the augmentation of the several archbishopricks and bishopricks, not already provided for as aforesaid, as far as may be, without the too great prejudice of the present possessor, who is to be removed; and after the lands set out for the several augmentations and glebes as aforesaid, the Commissioners shall certify their proceedings to the Lord Lieutenant, or other Chief Governor and Council for the time being; and in case the proceedings of the Commissioners shall be there approved and allowed, then the lands set out for augmentations and glebes as aforesaid shall be and are hereby vested and settled respectively in the several and respective archbishops, and bishops, and incumbents of parochial churches, and their successors, for ever, and letters patents thereof are to be passed to them and their respective successors, in like manner as is directed in the cases of adventurers and soldiers, and to be of like effect, subject nevertheless to the quit-rents hereafter mentioned, and no other.

The foregoing Index and Extracts from the Patent Rolls in Chancery were compiled for the use of the Commissioners with the assistance of a gentleman who has had much experience in examining the original records, and in inquiries of this character. Notwithstanding they cannot be considered as a complete or exhaustive account of the Royal grants since the Reformation. The indexes to the original Rolls are not perfect; an important portion of the Rolls, from 7 Charles I. to 18 Chas. II., has not been printed; the time also within which the inquiry should be closed was limited. Further information in connexion with the subject may be obtained by referring to the inquisitions held under a Commission, dated the 21st of July, 7th James I., appointed to inquire what lands, &c., had escheated to the Crown in the counties of Armagh, Tyrone, Coleraine, Donegal, Fermanagh, and Cavan, which is given in full in "Harris' Hibernica" folio edition, page 68, and enrolled 16th James I., part 2, dorso, m 2. They are as follows:—

I. Inquisition taken at Armagh, 12th August, 7th James I., enrolled 16th James I., part 2, dorso, m 3.
II. Inquisition taken at Dungannon, 23rd August, 7th James I. Same roll, m 7.
III. Inquisition at Limavaddy, Coleraine Co., 30th August, 7th James I. Same roll, m 12.
IV. Inquisition taken at Derry, 1st September, 7th James I. Same roll, m 14.
V. Inquisition taken at Lifford, in County Donegal, 12th September, 7th James I. Same roll, m 13.
VI. Inquisition taken at Enniskillen, 18th September, 7th James I. Same roll, m 22.
VII. Inquisition taken at Cavan, 25th September, 1609, 7th James I. Same roll, m 25.

Translations of the above Commission and Inquisitions with the Articles of Instructions of King James I. for the plantation of Ulster, are printed at large in the Appendix of the 2nd volume "Inquisitionum in officio Rotulorum Cancellariæ Hiberniæ asservatarum Repertorium," printed in 1829 by order of King George IV. in pursuance of an address of the House of Commons.

The foregoing private endowments do not include either Primate Boulter's or Primate Robinson's Funds, nor the impropriations purchased by Archbishop Bramhall,† nor the large sums from time to time expended by the Clergy in the erection of glebe-houses. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners have no means of making an accurate return of the sums expended by the clergy either out of their own private moneys, or by way of certificate under the Building Acts, which divided the expense between several successive incumbents; but the following sums appear, from the books of the late Board of First Fruits and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners respectively, to have been repaid by the Clergy to the said Boards on account of loans for building glebes, viz.:—

REPAYMENTS on LOANS for building GLEBE-HOUSES, as appearing on the books of the late BOARD of FIRST FRUITS.

It is believed that in other parishes, also, portions of the glebes have been derived from the same source.

By deed dated 10th September, 1720, Archbishop King, who had purchased from trustees for sale of estate of Lord Rosse, granted tithes of Lucan, Westpolestown, county Dublin; rectories of Belan and Kildangan, tithes of Barrotstown, Harristowne, Lacka, Rathernon, Kilimeague, and Cloughnallis, county Kildare, for Incumbents having actual cure of souls in said parishes.

The Dean and Chapter of Armagh derive their property at Stormanstown (about £36 per annum), from a bequest of Primate Marsh; and that of Legmorrin (about £96 per annum), from a bequest of Primate Lindsay.

The Vicars-Choral of Armagh derive their estate in the county of Down (about £900 per annum), from a gift of Primate Lindsay.

An annual sum for repairs of the Cathedral of Elphin is derived from a bequest of lands by Bishop Hodson; the other income from which is by his will applicable for educational purposes.
